Brotherhood Economist's Study of Profiteering as Affecting Living Costs

Government Reports Show Labor's Share of Profits Less Than Before War

W. Jett Lauck, Supplementing Statements to Railway Labor Board, Cites Evidence Gathered by Trade Commission That Margin of Profit to Dealers Makes Up Half of Cost to Consumer.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 15.

W. JETT LAUCK, consulting economist of railroad brotherhoods, formerly secretary of the War Labor Board, has supplemented his recent testimony before the United States Railroad Labor Board by filing a printed report in which he analyzes the effect of increased wages and profits upon commodity prices.

Digests of his testimony, published in the Post-Dispatch in the last few days, have given an outline of Lauck's findings as to profiteering in sugar, packing house products and some other necessities. His full report now issued in pamphlet form contains additional interesting observations on profiteering in canned goods and other food products and in the boot and shoe and textile industries. The portion of his report dealing with advances in the prices of these commodities is as follows:

The extent to which the meat packers profited by the war has already been discussed. There is another phase of the country's food production which is constantly growing in importance, namely, the canning industry. From investigations made by the Federal Trade Commission it is possible to determine to a limited degree the extent to which the high prices of canned goods are due respectively to labor cost and to profits. Aside from canned meat, the two most important branches of the canning industry are vegetable and fish canning. As might be expected, the great meat packers have been reaching out towards control of these substitutes for meat. To what extent this has influenced prices cannot be determined. In general, it may be pointed out that increase in price has been due to a negligible extent to increased labor costs and to a very great extent to increased profits.

Increases in Canned Goods.

The great variety of canned vegetable products make it very difficult to arrive at average figures which will correctly picture the items of cost which enter into the prices of these articles. The situation is further complicated by the great variation in costs between various sections of the country. The following general statement must then be taken as indicating the general apportionment of the price of these articles rather than as a complete description of the whole industry. The cost studies made by the Federal Trade Commission cover only two years, 1916 and 1917. Hence it will be impossible to compare the war period with the pre-war years. A comparison of data for 1917 with those for 1916 will show, however, that the tendency is for the proportion of the price which labor received to decrease while the proportion awarded to profits increases.

In 1916 the labor cost of canning varied from 12½ per cent to 23 per cent of the total canning cost, the weighted average being about 13 per cent. In 1917 this proportion had decreased to 12 per cent. Between 1916 and 1917 the cost of labor increased by about 19 per cent, the cost of canning about 34 per cent, while the wholesale prices advanced between 40 per cent and 90 per cent. In many instances this greater proportional increase in prices was due, not only to the increased profits taken by the canner, but also to the increased charges for distribution due to numerous jobbers' margins for reselling.

The Cost of Labor.

Labor has received a very small proportion of the increase in wholesale prices. In the case of canned corn, for example, wholesale prices increased $1.53 a case between 1916 and 1917, and of this amount labor received 4 cents. The wholesale price of canned tomatoes during the same period advanced $1.21, of which labor received as its share, 5 cents. The wholesale price of canned peas advanced 75 cents, of which amount labor received 3 cents. The wage increases granted to labor, therefore, cannot be held responsible for the increases in the prices of canned vegetables which have taken place since 1916.

The following table shows the relation of labor cost to total cost and wholesale price for three standard canned vegetables. It also affords a basis for estimating the comparative increase of profits and labor costs between 1916 and 1917. The material is largely taken from the results of an investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, which covered concerns producing about 25 per cent of the total output of the country. The figures given are for a case of two dozen cans.

	1916.	1917.	Per cent increase.
Canned corn, No. 2 can:
Labor cost	0.1810	0.2215	22
Total cost	1.3207	1.7096	29
Canner's profit	0.1114	0.3971	256
Wholesale price	1.7000	3.2292	98
Canned tomatoes, No. 3 can:
Labor cost	0.2323	0.2836	22
Total cost	1.7487	2.7035	54
Wholesale price	2.1560	3.3646	56
Canned peas, No. 2 can:
Labor cost	0.1979	0.2272	14
Total cost	1.4245	1.8503	29
Canner's proft	0.1954	0.3424	75
Wholesale price	1.7640	2.5152	42

Higher Profit Margin.

From this table it is apparent that in every case the smallest increase, either in money or in per cent, is the increase in the cost of labor; and that the greatest proportional increase is the increase in profit margins. Thus in the case of canned corn the cost of labor increased by 4 cents while the canner's profit increased 28 cents. An increase in labor cost of 22 per cent contrasted with an increase in profits of 256 per cent. In the case of canned tomatoes the canner's profit is not shown, but the margin between the cost and selling price has decreased by 62 per cent in contrast with an increase in labor cost of only 22 per cent. In the case of canned peas the canner's profit in 1916 was approximately equal to the labor cost. In the following year the profit item was approximately 50 per cent more than the labor cost. Such figures show how unjust it is to attribute the increasing prices in this industry to the increased wages received by labor. In fact, labor in 1917 received a smaller per cent of the cost, as well as a smaller per cent of the wholesale price, than in the previous year. The following table shows the decreasing proportion of the labor cost as shown above:

	Per cent of labor cost to total cost. 1916	Per cent of labor cost to total cost. 1917	Per cent of labor cost to wholesale price. 1916	Per cent of labor cost to wholesale price. 1917
Canned corn, No. 2 can	13.7	13.0	10.6	6.9
Canned tomatoes No 3 can	13.3	10.5	10.8	8.4
Canned peas No. 3 can	13.9	12.3	11.2	9.0

This merely shows that while the canner's profit has been taking a larger proportion of the purchase price of canned vegetables, the amount received by labor has been absorbing a smaller and smaller proportion of the consumer's money.

Profits of Canners.

Such increased margins per case would naturally result in very largely increased profits to the canning companies. From the results of an investigation this appears to be the case. The average return for companies whose statistics were available for both years was 9 per cent in 1916 and 32 per cent in 1917. This means that profits had been more than tripled. According to the Federal Trade Commission the profits of tomato packers rose from 17 per cent on investment in 1916 to 60 per cent in 1917, an increase of 253 per cent. Pea packers show a corresponding increase from 8 per cent to 21 per cent, an increase of 163 per cent, while corn packers show an increase from 12 per cent to 29 per cent, an increase of 142 per cent. Only two instances, the string-bean packers (only two concerns) and the mixed fruit packers (only four concerns) show a decrease in profits, and in both the decrease is slight. The mixed vegetable packers increased their profits from 6 per cent to 27 per cent, an increase of 350 per cent.

In general, the Federal Trade Commission found that the profits of concerns with a total capitalization of approximately $12,000,000 showed profits for 1916 of $1,224,009, as contrasted with profits of $3,876,263 in 1917. In 1917 the highest return (66 per cent) was earned by tomato packers, and the corn packers of Maryland and Virginia. The Wisconsin pea section shows an average return of 32 per cent, and the Middle Western corn and tomato sections show a return of 30 per cent.

Wholesalers Make 15 Per Cent.

From the report of the Federal Trade Commission it would appear that the margins of profit taken by the wholesale grocers were not, in the main, abnormally large. They show approximately 5 per cent net profit on their sales. Their large business enabled them to make profits of approximately 15 per cent on invested capital. These profits were only slightly larger than those made during the preceding year. If there was any notorious profiteering in distribution it was probably made by brokers who stepped out of their role and actually acted as jobbers, buying the goods and selling at high prices. Brokers in New York netted as high as 23 per cent by operating in this manner. In 1916 the average earnings netted by Chicago brokers was approximately 6 per cent, while New York brokers in the same year earned approximately 15 per cent.

The outstanding feature of this branch of the food industry is undoubtedly the high profits of the packers. Unfortunately, no material for the pre-war years is at hand. But the enormously greater relative increase of canners' profits when contrasted with the increase in labor costs indicates that the canning concerns are largely to blame for such increase in the price of canned goods as was unnecessary.

Situation in Salmon.

In the canned-salmon industry the same general situation exists as that described in the other industries of the country. The labor costs have increased very slightly, less than 1 per cent, while prices have increased approximately 63 per cent. In fact, the cost of labor per case of canned salmon increased only four-tenths of a cent, whereas the average net profit of the canner increased by $1.17 per case, an increase of over 100 per cent. The increase in wholesale price was $3.19, or more than 790 times the increase in labor cost. These figures are for the years 1916 and 1917. To emphasize the comparative insignificance of the labor cost in salmon canning, it is only necessary to suggest that in 1917 it amounted to 70.5 cents per case of 48 pound cans.

THE Brotherhoods' claim that the margin of profit to the packers and wholesalers is steadily mounting, while the percentage of what the consumer pays, in the case of material for shoes, for instance, that goes to labor is falling behind, is borne out strikingly in a comparison of the margin of profit on packers' hides, and that on country hides. The latter are "non-packers'" hides. The figures for the five-year period from 1913 to 1917:

Year.	Country hides: Price per pound, cents.	Country hides: Margin per pound, cents.	Packers' hides: Price per pound, cents.	Packers' hides: Margin per pound, cents.
1914	16¼	1.30	19	1.30
1915	20	1.30	24	2.55
1916	21	1.30	26	3.55
1917	23	1.30	32	7.55

The hide busines is a side line with the big packers.

Labor Cost Advances Only 3 Cents When Wholesale Price of Canned Corn Jumped $1.53 on Case Between 1916 and 1918—Packers, Tanners, Manufacturers and Jobbers Pile Up Profits on Shoes.

The following table, roughly drawn to show the importance of the various items in causing the increased price of canned salmon, is based upon material collected by the Federal Trade Commission from canneries packing over 50 per cent of the country's total production. The figures given are averages struck to indicate general tendencies throughout the entire industry.

Items.	1916 Cost.	1916 Per cent of price.	1917 Cost.	1917 Per cent of price.	Per cent increase.
Raw fish	$1.066	20.7	$1.431	17.2	34.24
Labor	.701	13.6	.705	8.5	.57
Other supplies	.764	14.9	1.146	13.8	50.00
Other expenses	1.083	21.1	1.148	13.8	6.0
Total costs	3.614	....	4.430	....	22.58
Probable selling expense including brokerage	.426	8.3	1.63	19.5	282.6
Net profit of packer	1.10	21.4	2.27	27.2	106.4
Whole's'le price	5.14	100.0	8.33	100.0	62.0

The most interesting single fact in this table is that the proportion of the price received by labor has very materially decreased in the course of a single year. In 1916 the labor cost absorbed 13.6 per cent of the wholesale price, or over one-eighth; in 1917 it absorbed 8½ per cent, or only approximately one-twelfth. Expressed in terms of the total cost of producing the case of 48 pound cans, the labor cost declined from 19.4 per cent to 15.9 per cent. And it would appear that the proportion of the selling price which labor lost was added onto the proportion received by the packer. For the proportion of net profit taken by the packer shows an increase from 21.4 per cent to 27.2 per cent. No item in the list shows so small an increase as the labor cost and no item shows so large an increase as the margin between cost and wholesale price. This would seem to afford very good grounds for suspecting the existence of profiteering as the basis for high prices in this particular food product.

In 1917 the profits of the salmon packers were indeed high. Although 12 out of the 90 companies examined by the Federal Trade Commission failed to make any profit, the average rate of return on investment for the whole group was over 52½ per cent, as contrasted with slightly over 22 per cent for 1916. Of the 78 companies making a profit, only 12 made under 15 per cent; 30 made between 15 and 50 per cent; 25 made between 50 and 100 per cent and 11 made over 100 per cent. The contrast between 1916 and 1917 is evident when it is realized that profits of over 50 per cent were realized upon approximately one-sixth of the total pack in 1916, while in 1917 this fraction had risen to over one-half. Fifty per cent profit on invested capital for over half the industry, giving an average profit for the industry of over 50 per cent on invested capital, is clearly the natural reflection of the great increase in the proportion of the selling price taken by the salmon packers.

Packer's Profits Doubled.

Perhaps one of the most striking features of this profiteering in 1917 is the fact that packers' profits in 1917 were equivalent to over one-half of the total cost of production, and to over one-third of the selling price of the article. This was due in part to the fact that a portion of the goods sold at 1917 prices represented the 1916 pack at the lower costs. However, the high price paid by the consumer reflects these enormous profits none the less. Between 1916 and 1917 the packers practically doubled their profits.

Even when we have examined the packers' profits we have not told the whole story of the profits which are taken before the case of canned salmon reaches the retail dealer. For practically the entire output is sold through brokers, who in many instances finance the packers, carry all information concerning market conditions and sell the entire output of the concern which they represent. As the product passes through the hands of these brokers another profit is taken. In many instances it is difficult to say whether these broker profits are exorbitant or not, for many of them require very little investment upon which the rate of profit can be reckoned. But in the case of those that handle considerable quantities of canned salmon, and, perhaps, finance the packer, there is sufficient investment so that we can arrive at a general estimate of profits.

Earnings of Broker.

In arriving at some estimate of the profits of the brokers the Federal Trade Commission has considered 13 Pacific coast canned salmon brokers, with an average investment of approximately $112,000 in 1916 and $119,000 in 1917. The commission considered general salaries as a part of profits. On this basis the net earnings plus salaries of these concerns were equivalent to 42 per cent on investment in 1916, and to over 54 per cent on investment in 1917. The commission also considered the profits of eight general food brokers in other sections of the country handling a considerable amount of canned sal-

By Dr. Louis Levine,

Former Professor of Political Economy in Montana University.

MANKIND has never shared the same gospel of salvation, but it has always had a common idea of damnation. The accursed irksomeness of the fact that the race must eat its bread in the sweat of the brow has never been questioned. Ever since man was expelled from the Garden of Eden, it has been the desire of all to retain a larger share of the bread and to pass on the opportunity to sweat. And ever also there has been a dim premonition in the hearts of some that if all sweated alike there might be more bread and happiness for all.

The trouble with the world today is the same as ever. It can not make up its mind how to be saved. The new element in the situation is our complex industrial mechanism and the greater self-consciousness of the laboring masses. They who have inherited the tradition of work and sweat are now questioning with unprecedented insistence the legitimacy and the rationality of the tradition. The question before the world is once more put in decisive form: If sweat we must for our daily bread, how shall we organize ourselves to distribute both to the greater satisfaction of all?

The answer which the worker demands today implies provisions for adequate pay, reasonable hours, security of job and control over one's self and one's work. These things seem simple enough. They are. But all the complex programs of the day are nothing but plans to meet these demands, and to adjust our simple but conflicting desires to one another and to our new industrial needs. And the answer must be sought where ever an attempt is made to give it. The whole world today is an immense economic and social laboratory. Once more, since the eighteenth century, have we a chance for political and social choice. Our own progress will depend upon our ability to comprehend the experiments which are being made today everywhere.

Occupational Groups Persist.

It is from this point of view that interest attaches to the recently published Code of Labor Laws of the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic. One need to take no sides as to the merits of the Russian controversy in analyzing this document. The interest it has lies not in its political background, but in the fact that it is a concrete embodiment of one of the many answers to the questions put above. It offers an illuminating illustration of the intricacies of the modern answer to the eternal problem of the organization of human work.

In the Russia of today there still persist distinct economic and occupational groups. There are the people who work on the land—peasants and agricultural laborers. For their benefit there is a special code of rural laws which regulates the conditions of farm work. There are also the independent artisans in the cities, towns or villages. For them there is a set of special rules. Neither the farm workers nor the independent artisans are subject to the laws of the labor code here considered. Its scope is quite different. It applies only to working men and women who are employed under modern industrial conditions, whether in factory, mill, mine or railroad. The code specifies that the laws are obligatory "for all enterprises, institutions and establishments, as well as for all private employers exploiting labor." But according to reports, the private employers in Russia are a negligible quantity. Ninety per cent of the country's total production is carried on in some 40,000 enterprises which have been nationalized. Some 90 industrial monopolies have been established by the Soviet Government. The Russian code of labor laws is, therefore, practically a system of regulations for workers employed by the state under one form or another. This is the feature which gives this code its significance. How does labor fare under such a system?

Principle of Compulsory Labor.

Those who have discused the code have laid special emphasis on the fact that it introduced the principle of compulsory labor. The first article declares that all citizens of the Russian Soviet Republic between the ages of 16 and 50, who are not temporarily or permanently injured, or incapacitated, are subject to compulsory labor. This has been denounced as a step backward to the days of slavery and serfdom. On the other hand, defenders of Soviet Russia have tried to explain it on historic grounds. They claim that the Soviets promulgated compulsory labor only to overcome the resistance of the former propertied and professional groups who refused to work voluntarily, and that this is a temporary measure. As soon as the economic program of Soviety Russia is carried out, they say, the need for compulsion will have disappeared.

From the point of view taken here, this controversy is of little consequence. The significant thing is that Socialist Russia retains in operation one of the economic motives of individualistic industrialism. Only it generalizes this motive. The constitution of Soviet Russia has proclaimed as its motto: "He shall not eat who does not work." In practice, this means that everyone is compelled economically to earn a livelihood. The economic compulsion cannot be evaded. No one can use property instead of muscle or brain as a source of income. Neither does the State assume any obligations, except toward children, invalids and old people. The able-bodied adult who has the habit of eating is left no choice except to find a useful economic place.

REGARDED in relation to the industrial developments of the past half century, the Soviet Labor Code seems less original and radical. In fact, it embodies no strikingly new principles of labor legislation. It is continuous with the experience of the rest of the industrial world. It is in line with the work done, for instance, at the Washington International Labor Conference, organized under the League of Nations, at which most governments were officially represented. Whatever radicalism it contains is the result of a conscious determination to carry out the newer principles of labor legislation and the more recent devices of industrial organization in a systematic and comprehensive manner.

The assumption of private industry is that nationalization means efficiency and that profits are but the saving of the wastes which are inevitable under collective ownership and management. If Russia will continue her experiment long enough the world may have a chance to thresh this problem out and to learn something new about the economics of production. The Soviet Labor Code, however, is not a complete break with the past. It carries to their logical end ideas that have already been accepted in part in all industrial countries.—PROF. LEVINE.

In this respect the position of the worker under the Socialist Soviet does not differ materially from that of the worker under our own industrial conditions. The worker in America has the legal freedom to work or to refrain from working. As a rule he has to work because he chooses to eat. The same economic compulsion is relied upon in both cases to produce the same result. Soviet Socialism could afford to proclaim the right to all citizens to be perpetually idle. It would make not the least bit of difference.

Idleness Not the Millenium.

Thus, Russia illustrates that whatever may be the dreams of a lazy race, such dreams evaporate in the light of realities. Idleness or working at one's leisure can be no part of the millenium. The real problem is not how to compel people to work, but how to organize the opportunity to work. This has been the persistent demand of labor since it became conscious of modern industrialism. The workers of France in 1848 demanded of their "Social Republic" the "right to work." In England and America the continuity of employment and the security of the job have been the most profound desires of the working population. The Russian labor code embodies this idea, and proclaims "the right to work." This idea is the center of gravity of the Soviet labor code.

The provisions of the code show what the realization of this right involves. The right is proclaimed in the following words: "All citizens able to work have the right to employment at their vocations and for remuneration as fixed for such class of work. Evidently, the first step in enforcing this right is to establish the vocations of all citizens able to work. All wage earners are classified not merely by industries and trades, but more minutely into groups and categories within each branch of labor. Every citizen of the Soviet republic carries a "labor booklet," in which are entered his name and age, the name and address of the trade union to which he belongs, and the group and category of labor to which he has been assigned. The position of the worker depends upon the category he is assigned to. The task of classifying workers is in the hands of special "valuation commissions," which are appointed by the trade unions and whose procedure is determined by the National Department of Labor.

The next step in the process of enforcing "the right to work" is to determine the remuneration or wages of each group and category of workers. This is essential because everyone has a right to refuse work unless he is paid the standard rate. Special wage schedules must be drafted by the trade unions in consultation and agreement with the management of the plant and must be approved by the Department of Labor. Except for the latter qualification this method differs but little from the practice in our own trades, which are organized and in which collective bargaining is practised. The principles of wage determination are still more similar. The code lays down the rule that the standard of remuneration must be "at least sufficient to cover the minimum living expenses." During the war the United States War Labor Bureau proclaimed the same principle. The living wage, as a minimum, hardly meets with any opposition anywhere at the present time. It was recognized by the "employers' group" at the President's first industrial conference.

Different Standards of Pay.

Even more significant is the clause of the Soviet code which provides that standards of remuneration should differ for different groups and categories. The "valuation commissions" which fix the standards are required to take into consideration the "kind of labor, the danger and the conditions under which the work is performed, the complexity and accuracy of the work, the degree of independence and responsibility, as well as the standard of education and experience required for the performance of the work." These are principles upon which our own differences of wages are largely based. The Esch-Cummins railway act requires the railroad board, in determining wages, to consider among other things, "the relation between wages and the cost of living; the hazards of the employment, the training and skill required, the degree of responsibility, etc." Such a similarity is not accidental. Were Soviet Russia a Communist state, it would have to introduce the famous Communist principle: "From every one according to his capacity, to every one according to his needs." This Communist ideal may beckon to the Russian workers in the distant future. But at present their industrial life embodies another principle of individualistic industrialism—the principle of wage payments and wage differences.

"The right to work," as the code specifies, is the right to demand work at one's own vocation at standard wages. The principal value of this right is that a worker out of a job need not worry about himself or his family. Under the Soviet code he as an unemployed person is entitled to unemployment benefits. In this respect the Soviet code carries one step further a practice which was begun some years ago. Many counties have introduced unemployment insurance in one form or another. Great Britain has, perhaps, the most extensive scheme. But under the laws of these countries the unemployment allowance is merely a portion of the wage earner's normal earnings. The wage earner who is out of work may thus be forced to reduce his standard of living for a time and, as a result, may fall into a lower status permanently. The Soviet code in this respect marks a radical departure. It provides that the unemployment benefit shall be equal to the remuneration fixed for the group and category to which the wage earner belongs. Only in exceptional cases may the subsidy be reduced to the level of the minimum living expenses for the district. The general purpose is to assure the worker at all times what he can earn. While he is at work he earns it; if he is out of work, the state owes him what he could normally earn. The "right to work" is thus translated into the right to receive one's weekly or monthly pay in full—in other words, the right to a living.

The Registration Machinery.

Inevitably the enforcement of this right involves some machinery. It must be known who are unemployed and where they are. The code, therefore, requires every unemployed person to register at the local Bureau of Labor Distribution, which is a part of the Labor Department. Similarly, all plants and establishments which are in need of workers apply for them to the Bureau. The workers are assigned to positions in accordance with their qualifications and in the order of the priority of their application. While the worker is registered at the local bureau and is out of a job, he receives his unemployment benefits. But suppose a worker does not mind getting full pay for no work? The Soviet code proceeds on the well known assumptions of human behavior. It specifies that an unemployed person has no right to refuse an offer of work at his vocation if conditions and wages are in accordance with standards. Anyone who is obstinate and refuses such an offer ceases to be unemployed and gets no more benefits. King Hunger will then whip him into line.

But there may be more serious situations. An industrial mechanism cannot work with the regularity of clock work. There are bound to be maladjustments. There may be a call for workers of one category, while the unemployed belongs to another. There may be unemployment in one district while another more or less distant district is crying for workers. Under such conditions the state might be a double loser by paying out unemployment profits to unnecessarily idle workers, while many regions and industries were suffering from a shortage of labor. To obviate such emergencies, the Soviet code delegates to the bureau of labor distribution the power to send unemployed persons to work outside the district in which they happen to reside or to be registered. The bureaus of labor distribution also have the right to assign workers in one category to work of another category not too dissimilar in character. This right is qualified in two ways. Firstly, the bureaus must obtain the consent of respective trade unions. Secondly, the worker who is assigned to work outside his trade or category may, if he so desires, regard himself as temporarily employed only, and his name is kept on the list of unemployed, until he finds work at his own vocation. While thus employed outside his vocation, he is entitled to unemployment benefits equal to the difference between what he would earn at his trade and what he actually earns for the time being.

Right to Work Means Security.

Thus again, the "right to work" is seen to mean security to the wage earner in the receipt of his regular and normal earnings. But it illustrates more clearly than this enforcement of the "right to work" that there are no rights without corresponding obligations. In exchange for the right to feel secure on the job, the Soviet code expects the wage earner to relinquish to a considerable extent his freedom to act as he pleases under all circumstances. This is done in Articles IV and V of the code, which are entitled: "Probation Periods" and "Transfers and Discharge of Wage Earners," which suggest the rules of our own civil service. The intent of these articles is to assure the worker permanence of employment once he has proved his fitness, without depriving the management of the plant of the opportunity to discharge workers who are unfit or no longer needed. The transfer and discharge of workers are permitted only under minutely specified conditions. On the other hand, the wage earner cannot leave his job without giving good reasons. If such reasons are found unjustified by his shop

Encourage Buyers of Farms.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The selective plan of adjustment of back pay for soldiers seems to be a popular one, but the provision for home aid and purchase of a farm should be made in the form of a loan, say, $5000 at 4 per cent, for a reasonable length of time, for all men who served three months or more. If it is deemed more advisable, the loan could be pro-rated according to service, with interest 4 per cent for reasonable length of time.

Under the present proposed arrangement, if a man chooses to purchase a home or farm he is allowed $1.75 for each day of service, or 50 cents per day more than if he selects the cash bonus of $1.25 per day. The average length of service is 400 days, which means about $200 additional in favor of the home or farm purchaser.

All will readily appreciate that this small difference will cause many prospective home and farm purchasers to accept the cash bonus.

All men should be able to exercise their option as to the adjusted compensation they desire, but don't drive the men to take the cash bonus and then lament the unrest and lack of farmers in the country. Home owners and farm workers mean much in these nervous days of reconstruction. Why not encourage them?

What do you say, service men? If you want the loan, take it up at the Legion meetings; also write your Senators.

LOAN ADVOCATE.

Why Is It?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Why is it the employe cannot demand and receive an increase in his wages the same as the dealer demands and receives increased prices on his wares?

Isn't it a fact that today eggs can be bought for, say, 45 cents, and tomorrow when you visit the store again you are informed that the "price has advanced" to 55 cents per dozen? It is the same with all merchandise.

Now what would our employers say if we were to inform them that today we are selling our labor at so much per hour, but tomorrow it will be advanced 20 or 30 cents per hour? Would he pay it, the same as we pay the merchant? Is not our labor and skill our stock in trade, and are we not allowed to ask an increase the same as the dealer is allowed to increase prices on his stock?

Dwellers in the Dark.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I stood at the mouth of a mine one evening as men were pouring out of it to go to their homes. How strange they looked—these tired men! Their clothes were covered with the dust and slack of coal. Their eyes were two balls of fire, shining from a background of darkest night—their face. How different they seemed from other men upon the street—those dwellers of another world, a world of night!

I stood one evening at the entrance of an alley in a crowded downtown district. I watched him—the street-sweep—as he worked. Small and stooped of back was he and he worked always in the shadows as though a deadline were drawn between him and light. He never once lifted his eyes to men who passed him by. His face was turned toward the earth. He fixed his eyes there always and had sight for neither sun nor stars. He could not help it, far he was a dweller in the somber shadows—doomed to work in darkness. I pitied.

But I've seen them, too, men who are as straight as an arrow; whose faces wear no smoke nor soot and whose clothes are immaculately clean. And yet they, too, are often dwellers in the dark. How ignorant they are of brotherhood and all its responsibilities. The fact that men are hungry and tired and sick at heart has never shown through their prison bars of selfishness. How ignorant they are of their brother's existence, or at least of their brother's rights. In the darkness of superstitions and misconceptions and misunderstandings they ply their trade! The sun of knowledge cries to them to look up, but nursing their selfsatisfaction and thrilled by the whispers of their greed, they have eyes only for the ground, the black and dirty. And I pity these as much as miners and street-sweeps.

Cruel Execution of Homeless Dogs.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Why do not the taxpayers of St. Louis insist on the city killing the poor homeless dogs in a humane manner? Anyone with common sense knows that suffocation by sulphur fumes causes intense suffering, yet the poundmaster will tell you it is absolutely painless. Where is our Humane Society? They should have stopped this cruel practice years ago. Other cities have yielded to the petitions of their kind-hearted citizens. Chicago, for instance, electrocutes their stray dogs, and many other cities use fuel gas, which I think, is a great improvement over our obsolete method.

If our officials cannot keep St. Louis up to the times, let us get some one who can and will.

A FRIEND OF DUMB ANIMALS.

THE LEAGUE MOVES, WE LAG.

The fifth session of the council of the League of Nations is now being held in Rome. The representatives of 36 nations are attending the meeting.

Commissions are provided to study the question of armaments, to deal with the mode of registering treaties and to make arrangements for the repatriation of prisoners in Siberia. Among the subjects under discussion are the investigation of the Russian situation, international finance, internal administration and the creating of the first assembly of the League. An invitation to President Wilson, who, regardless of America's attitude, will go into history as the father of the League, to open the assembly, is under consideration.

While we palter and squabble among ourselves as to what sort of a League of Nations we want and how we shall participate in it, the League of Nations is organized and is going about its work with the support of 36 nations, regardless of our particular notions concerning it and our participation in it. While our Senate passes a sham peace resolution which looks inevitably towards a separate peace with Germany, dishonorably contemptuous of the interests of our allies and of our obligations to them, the other nations are putting the treaty of Versailles into effect. While the anti-Wilson partisans insist upon certain reservations before accepting the peace covenant and the Wilson partisans insist upon no reservations and thus both sides hold up our participation in the League of Nations, other nations are putting the Versailles peace covenant into actual effect.

While party politicians are chattering vaguely about getting other nations to join with us in some sort of scheme of disarmament and some sort of tribunal of arbitration, the other nations are already working out the scheme of disarmament and arbitration agreed upon at Versailles. We are out of the procession. We have lost the splendid leadership we held when we entered the war and fought the war and ended the war, with a noble plan to guarantee justice and peace. We are camp followers, dickering over scraps, while great decisions that profoundly affect us and the world are being made.

No matter what we do, the League of Nations is organized and we are inevitably affected by its work. Its action will touch us at every point in our international relations. We must join it and thus participate as a full partner in its decisions and conduct, or deal with its decisions as an outsider. We must either accept its decisions or join ourselves to some alliance with our late enemies to oppose the progressive efforts of our late friends and associates. We must decide whether we will defend and promote the advance of civilization or oppose it. What can we do against 36 nations and the public opinion of the world? How can America fight its own plan to advance civilization, or join with its enemies to destroy it?

The situation would be humorous if it were not tragic. Never was such a disastrous failure of a great nation to hold its place of light and leading and to fulfill its promise of blessing mankind. Never was a great nation so humiliated. And for what? To satisfy personal hatreds and ambitions and party ends on the one side and personal pride and stubborn resentment on the other. Never was there such bankruptcy of statesmanship on the part of leaders of a capable, intelligent people.

MEXICO'S NEW TYPE OF REVOLUTION.

That the opponents of Carranza should have resorted to force to remove him from office when, by waiting a few months, opportunity would come to replace him by constitutional means is, of course, most deplorable.

However, the new revolutionary movement has swept with incredible swiftness to the stage of success with far less loss of life than attended the Madero revolution, the Huerta revolution, the Carranza revolution, or, in fact, any other Mexican civil war within the memory of living men.

In another respect it is so differentiated from other Mexican revolutions as scarcely to be recognizable. It has been accompanied with far less damage and inconvenience than any other to Mexico's neighbors. The Madero movement was not far advanced before it became necessary for us to send 20,000 troops to the vicinity of the border.

Since that time the watch on the Rio Grande has been one of the features of our national life. During the disorders of 1916 we deemed it necessary to supplement the regular army with the national guard and to maintain 80,000 men on border duty, to say nothing of the work of navy and army at Vera Cruz. We had to keep considerable forces there even when the demand for men and arms was at its height during the European war.

Has the lesson that American lives in the interior must be protected and that in their own broils they positively must not throw stones at us across the fence been learned by the Mexicans? If it has been learned an important advance has been made. We will always have interests that will be affected by disorder of any kind in Mexico, but Mexican revolutions for Mexicans only will be more essentially domestic affairs than the revolutions of the past, inflicting less wrong on outsiders.

Has another lesson been learned, that a Mexican President in office must not use the armed strength of the republic as well as his own political influence to dictate the choice of his successor? If so a potent cause for insurrection will be removed, indeed, one so potent that we may hope that relapse into the insurrectionary habit, even to the extent of conducting purely domestic affairs, will be a thing of the past.

SOME PROHIBITION PENALTIES.

The warning against drinking bootlegger liquor issued by Deputy Coroner Deuer, in connection with the fatal poisoning of Robert E. Collins Jr., the visiting grocer from Birmingham, Ala., is timely. "No one ought to take a drink from a stranger and no one ought to take a drink of any sort of liquor unless he knows it is the real thing," says the Deputy Coroner.

The injunction might stop with, Don't drink liquor, but since some people will drink liquor, the warning of extreme care as to the kind of liquor one should drink follows. Unscrupulous persons, tempted by the high price of liquor, resort to all sorts of concoctions for sale in the underground market.

The revelations of the sale of home-made stuff to guests by bellboys in hotels is an astonishing but natural development of the illegal traffic in liquor. The whole rotten trade is the usual concomitant of drastic prohibition laws. It is one of the penalties of the wrong, tyrannical and intolerant way of trying to make people total abstainers and "unco guid" by law. The result invariably is the underground traffic in the worst goods. It manufactures lawbreakers, hypocrites, lunatics and corpses.

Vice President Marshall's testimony as to the sentiment of the Senators, who voted for prohibition because they thought the people wanted it, exposes the hypocrisy and weakness and folly upon which the whole program of prohibition rests. The Vice President says the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act would not have had 20 votes in the United States Senate if the balloting had been secret.

This is the whole story. Instead of standing for principle and right and sanity, the people's representatives yielded to folly and wrong because they thought, without any test of popular opinion, that the people wanted folly and wrong. Instead of striking down the evils of the liquor traffic they struck down the rights of the people. The penalties we shall suffer for taking the wrong road, unless we abandon it, are just beginning. The fruits will be bitter indeed.

WHY ARBITRATION FAILS.

Arbitration of the demand of east side motormen and conductors for more money and less work have failed because neither the men nor the company would be satisfied with anything less than a two-to-one board of arbitration.

The plan was for the company to pick a man and the employes to pick a man and the two to pick a third. That meant, of course, that the picking would be done by the company and by the employes, and that each side would present to the other, through its arbitrator, names of persons desired as the third member of the board. The picking began. Every man proposed by the company was turned down by the employes on the ground that he would favor the company. Every man proposed by the employes was turned down by the company on the ground that he would favor the employes.

The board could have been completed at any time if the company had offered a man who would favor the employes or the employes had offered a man who would favor the company.

Arbitration becomes a joke when neither side will accept anything but a sure-thing board.

It seems incredible that among the 30-odd offered by each side there was not a man who could be trusted to arbitrate fairly, irrespective of which side offered him, but the fact remains that neither side was willing to risk an "unfair" decision, meaning an adverse decision.

So arbitration is off and a strike is threatened. The public, as usual, will get the worst of it, first from the employes, who probably will strike, and then from the company, which will use the strike as an excuse for asking higher fares.

SPENDTHRIFT NEW YORK.

That New York, complaining loudly of the cost of living, is not as yet resolved to live carefully as a means of easing its burdens was made clear by published reports from the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue. Luxury-tax collections were announced which indicated the expenditure in Manhattan alone of $105,000,000 a month, or something like $3,500,000 a day, for things numbered rather with the joys than among the necessaries of existence.

Fortunately for the eventual solidity of society, there are long heads to perceive when enough has become enough in free spending, and there is satiety which may move the prodigal spender when prudence has failed to act upon him. Accompanying the revenue figures are reports of signs, plain to the expert, that with the April returns the anti-thrift fever reached its height, and that very soon there will be a settling down to more conservative methods of enjoying the fruits of prosperity. To the masses the hope will be grateful that with the subsidence of the mania for spending will come also a gradual decline of the profiteers' furor for demanding.

MR. ANTWINE'S OPINION.

"THANK Heaven, a little good sportsmanship is getting into politics," Mr. Antwine said.

"After all the bad sportsmanship with respect to the peace treaty and the conduct of the war, we have the reassuring spectacle of the Democrats of Missouri disposing to give Secretary Long the nomination for the Senate as a reward for bravery.

"The Globe-Democrat says there is a conspiracy to keep everyone else out of the field, but I am sure that does the Democrats of the State a great injustice. They have apparently taken the sportsmanlike position that the Secretary has fairly won the nomination for deciding at the outset that he was going to run, a decision so difficult under the circumstances that coming to it one way or the other has reduced to the verge of nervous prostration some of the best men in the State.

"I like that. I wish we might have had something of the sort at Washington. I wish the Republicans had said to themselves, now the Democrats had the luck to be in power when the war came on, they won the war and here is their peace treaty, both of which it is the part of good sportsmanship for us to endorse, hoping for better luck next time. That would have thrilled a country which likes good sportsmanship. It would have put the Republican party in the same class with Mr. Taft, whom we all love as a good loser.

"At the time Secretary Long announced himself a candidate there were probably twenty other Democrats in the State trying to determine how they would come out if they made the race. Their friends worked at that problem with them. More gray matter was expended trying to feel the way ahead than we have ever spent on the welfare of the State. One after another of these men decided not to run. Now Judge Farrington is trying to decide this question. He is getting around asking Democrats about it. He cannot see how he would come out, and unless he can be sure he does not want to run.

"Not so the Secretary. The Secretary shut his eyes and went in at a time when not even Sir Oliver Lodge could have told him where he would land. Almost no one thought he would ever make the coveted shore, but day after day, what though the man-eating sharks of prohibition and the sea serpents of booze fairly fought over which should devour him, we beheld him bravely swimming, as Joaquin Miller said of Columbus, 'on—and still on.'

"Who cares to say that the party is going to permit anyone to sink that exhausted swimmer? By gad, sirs, no! It may be, as some lady correspondent said, that the Republicans at the Kansas City convention were better dressed than the Democrats at the Joplin convention, but whose heart is truer, not whose clothes are better, is the real issue in the campaign."

THE AZTEC.

(Reprinted by Request.)

THE Aztec sits on his throne again. A bloody man is he;
And the white man sails in his galleon upon the tropic sea.
The fire is lit on the pyramid, the war god shakes his dice,
And the sacrificial stone is red with the blood of sacrifice.

What is the life of man in the Aztec's cruel creed?
There are deities to glorify and carrion to feed.

The terrible Cortez is gone with all his Christian knights;
The priests have cleaned the temple out and lit the ancient lights.
The Aztec is himself again, to murder whom he will.
And the red, red fire of Mexico is burning on the hill.

What are a woman's tears when the drums begin to beat?
There are devils to propitiate and prayers to repeat.

The Aztec has been waiting long. His faith has never died;
His zeal remains for all the years his gods have been denied.
His heart has praised the rising sun through all the Christian night,
And now he sits on his throne again, with Death upon his right.

What is the blood of Christ when the priests begin to sing?
There are other gods and elder gods, and offerings to bring.

FINANCING CHINA.

From Harvey's Weekly.

THE announcement that an agreement has been reached for a Four-Power financing of China recalls the circumstances of similar negotiations a few years ago. In 1912 it was proposed that six Powers should join in lending China $300,000,000. But a radical difference of policy was quickly developed between the United States and Japan. It was demanded by Japan that the loan should be equally divided among the Powers, regardless of their respective resources and ability, and that the veto of any one Power should be sufficient to prevent the use of any of the loan in any specified province; her idea obviously being to exclude international investments from the Chinese provinces in which she was specially interested. The United States opposed both those demands, and won. But then China herself balked the whole business by declaring that she would not have the loan at all unless she could have it and could spend it without any foreign supervision or control. None of the Powers, not even the United States, would agree to that, and so the loan was abandoned, for a time. But, the next year, necessity drove China to accept a loan from the other five Powers on their own terms, the United States not participating. Now the four Powers, Great Britain, France, Japan and the United States, are to join in a loan of about $250,000,000, which apparently is to be expended by China under the conditions of foreign supervision and control to which she formerly objected, but is only partially to be excluded from any province from which Japan wants it excluded, thus incompletely avoiding a condition to which the United States formerly objected. It is interesting to observe, also, that no part of it is to be used for military purposes; the Big Four intending that nobody but themselves shall increase their armaments, if they can prevent it. Whether any recognition of the Covenant of the League of Nations is made in the bargain is not announced.

OUR SUPPLY OF PETROLEUM.

JOHN K. BARNES in World's Work.

FUEL oil has been the latest product to come into great demand. American railroads are now consuming about 50 million barrels a year. Steamship companies, led into a feeling of security as to the future supply by the long life of these Mexican wells, have been converting their boats into oil-burners. The new American Merchant Marine is largely oil-burning. The United States Navy is being so equipped, following the lead of the British. For lubricating oils, which keep the wheels of the world running smoothly, there is a constantly growing demand; and no available substitute is known for this most important petroleum produce. Having thus committed our railroads and steamships and even our vital navy to dependence upon oil, what about the future of an independent American supply of oil to keep them going? So far, the oil prospector has discovered new fields in this country whenever they have been needed. There is no reason to doubt but that new fields will be discovered for some time to come but how long thy will continue to supply our needs no one can tell. The United States Geological Survey is the authority best qualified to make a guess on this point. Its geologists estimate that there is 6,500,000,000 barrels of oil yet underground in the United States. To the end of 1919 we had taken out approximately 5,000,000,000 barrels, or more than 40 per cent of our supply. At the rate we are now consuming oil the estimated reserve will last less than 18 years; but at the rate of consumption we are headed for it will be gone much sooner. And should there be failure for a year or two to bring in any important new production the situation would become critical at once.

Society Showing Much Interest in Centennial Pageant of St. Louis University to Be Held This Week—Leading Part to Be Taken by Miss Miriam Benoist.

WIDE interest is being shown in the centennial pageant, which St. Louis University will present at the Odeon Theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings of this week, in celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the founding of the institution.

The pageant will present in 14 scenes an allegorical history of the life of the University and the cast has been largely made up of members of St. Louis society, who have been busy for the past few weeks attending rehearsals and getting costumes in order.

Miss Miriam Benoist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Benoist, has been chosen for the most important part, that of Alma Mater, and some of the other speaking parts will be taken by Miss Josephine Cobb as Religion, Mrs. M. Sylva, Justice; Miss Charity Grace, Belgium; Mrs. Paul Bakewell Jr., Liberty; Emmett Taylor, St. Louis; Jack Cantwell, Courage; Joseph Hardy, Youth; Jerome Simon, Evil; Frank Below, Daring; Lawrence Honig, Learning.

One of the interesting features of the pageant is the number of dancing groups that will be depended upon to unfold a goodly part of the theme. These dances will be participated in by groups of girls from the different Catholic educational institutions of the city, and there will be several solo dances by well-known local dancers and girls who gave pleasing interpretation of the dances in the Junior League Follies. Among these will be Misses Elizabeth Benoist, Marie Baker, Georgianna Anderson, Odille Dodge, Doris Drummond, Marie Gross, Olivia Harbaugh, Anne Hunt, Louisita Moser, Damaris MacBeth, Miriam McMahon, Dorothy Ring, Sunie Smith, Julia and Caroline Tyler, Charlotte and Juilette Reyburn, Edith Cates, Lucille Benoist, Dorothy Wise, Annette Douglas, Leonore Cahill and Marjorie Cornet.

Other parts in the pageant will be taken by Misses Elizabeth Benoist, Cornelia McNair, Beatrice Turner, Stella Grone, Frances Ryan, Florence Warner, Mrs. William Maffitt, Mrs. John Ring Jr. and Mrs. John Hart.

The pony ballet will be made of Pohawton Clarke, James O'Neill Ryan, Edgar Cahill, Edward Vaughan, George McNulty, Thomas Tobin, Bernard and Clarence Maloy.

An engagement of interest made known yesterday was that of Miss Edith McCormack and Richmond Dana Moot of Schnectady, N. Y., which was announced at a bridge party given by Miss McCormack in honor of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Noble McCormack, a recent bride.

Miss McCormack is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs Charles B. McCormack of 4522 Westminster place. She was graduated from Mary Institute and later studied at Washington University and at the St. Louis School of Fine Arts.

Mr. Moot is the son of Mr. and Mrs Edelbert Moot of Buffalo, N. Y. and is a graduate of Harvard University.

The wedding will take place early in October.

The guests at the bridge yesterday included Mmes. Blasdel Shapleigh, Preston Orwig, Brenton Van Cleave, Owen Mitchell and Misses, Margaret Shapleigh, Berkley Sloan, Jean Armstrong, Sallie Player and Alby Mason.

Conspicuous among the weddings of last week were those of Miss Ruth O'Reilly, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert O'Reilly of 27 Washington terrace, whose marriage to J. Herbert Jones of the St. Louis Club was solemnized at 6 o'clock last evening at the home of the bride's parents and Miss Julia Kobusch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs George J. Kobusch of 2240 St. Louis avenue, who became the bride of Edmund C. Donk, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Donk of 3643 Castleman avenue at 8:30 o'clock, the Rev. Dr. Williamson officiating at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones will pass their honeymoon in the east and on their return will be at home at the Hotel Buckingham. Mr. Donk and his bride will be at home at 749 Westgate avenue after July 15.

Miss Louise Luedeking of 6143 Kingsbury boulevard entertained with a bridge party last week to announce the engagement of Miss Grace Bissland to Thomas Watson of St. Charles, Mo., son of Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Watson. Miss Bissland is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bissland of 6002 Maple avenue. She is a graduate of Washington University and a member of the Delta Gamma Sorority. The wedding will take place in June.

Mrs. Charles Nagel will return within a few days form the East, where she has been spending a week on the Mount Vernon estate. Mrs. Nagel is a member of the national board of trustees for the old home of George Washington, and has been attending the annual board meeting. On her return to St. Louis she will take part in the appeal of the Children's Aid Society for funds to carry on its work among the poor, deserted, ill-treated children of St. Louis, whom the Aid Society places in comfortable private homes. Other members of the board of the Children's Aid are going to many business concerns and individuals asking for funds.

The tea will be complimentary to the Executive Board of the Women's Exposition which will take place at the Coliseum next fall under the auspices of the Board of Religious Organizations. Proceeds of it, which will be obtained in the form of tithes of silver pieces, will be devoted to helping finance the exposition exhibits of those of the component units of the exposition that are experiencing difficulty in raising the needed funds for that purpose.

Responsibility for the tea is in the hands of the exposition's Finance Committee, of which Mrs. Frank V. De Brouillet is chairman, and Mrs. F. H. Dodge, vice chairman. It will be attended by women of the exposition organization and others interested in the work that is being undertaken by means of the exposition.

Women who will form the receiving party with Mrs. Jones will include Mrs. Louis J. Brooks, chairman of the Board of Religious Organizations, Mrs. David McWilliams and Mrs. George D. Capen, respectively, chairman and vice chairman of the Women's Exposition, and Mmes. J. J. Searcy, Isaac H. Orr,

Scalp Massage
Hair Tonics
Shampoos
Brushing and General Care of Scalp and Hair

By Madame Maree

YOUR hair will very quickly respond to a little attention and care and reward your efforts by growing long, lustrous and silky. Of course there is nothing better than a brisk, hard rub of the scalp daily—but your hair to be beautiful, must have more attention than mere rubbing.

Described below, you will find some suggestions — home mixed tonics and shampoos — that have brought happiness to many thousands of women in the past, and because they are so wonderful and dependable, they are published here again.

A Home-Made Hair Invigorator.

You can easily prevent hair from falling, and you can make it grow thick and luxuriant by a very simple method, which is far superior in results to that of any so-called hair tonic you can buy. You will notice the difference in your hair in a very few days, and it will take on a vigorous lustre besides, and thin spots will at once begin to fill with new hair. This is done by simply adding one ounce of beta-quinol to a half pint of water and a half pint of bay rum. If you prefer you may use a full pint of witchhazel instead of the water and bay rum. The beta-quinol may be procured for fifty cents at any drug store. Try this and you will no longer find handfuls of hair coming out on your comb and brush, and your hair will be the envy of all your friends.

Here Is a Good Shampoo

Every scalp has constantly forming on it a thin, invisible film of fatty accumulations which soap cannot remove, not even with hard rubbing. The one way to remove this film, and let your hair breathe is to dissolve it. This is done by the use of a teaspoonful of eggol dissolved in a half cup of hot water, and used as a shampoo and head wash. This unseals the pores, and it will surprise you what a tremendous difference it produces in the appearance and growth of the hair. In a twenty-five cent package of eggol, which can be secured at any drug store, there is enough to supply you with over a dozen of these shampoos.

Another Shampoo.

Of all the high-grade, ready-to-use shampoos, there is nothing on the market more delightful than the one known as FRESCA. One peculiar feature of FRESCA Shampoo, is that while it leaves the hair soft and clean, it does not leave such a tangle nor make it so hard to handle or arrange after a wash. So if you want a ready mixed, high class article, try this FRESCA. It usually sells for fifty cents.

And if You Have Any Hair You Do Not Want

There is a very remarkable way to remove it. Simply moisten the hairs with a little sulfo solution. The hair begins to shrivel. You can see this dissolve, and then with just a swish of the finger, all the hairs can be rubbed off clear and clean. It leaves the skin thoroughly free from all superfluous hairs, not leaving even a suggestion that you had any superuous hairs at all. It is glorious. Every woman should have some sulfo solution on her dresser.

This is quite different from most depilatories and does not burn nor redden the skin. Sulfo solution sells in original packages for a dollar.

No Bust Pads

NOW Use the National "Bust developed 5 inches," says Mrs. Allendorf.

"The first three weeks bust developed 3½ in.," reports Dr. Allendorf.

Only Real Bust Developer

The National is the special Bust Developer Dr. C. S. Carr formerly recommended in the Physical Culture Magazine as the only safe, reliable method known for enlarging the bust in a natural way. Of this method, Dr. Carr said: "Indeed, it will bring about a development of the busts quite astonishing."

This has been proven over and over by those using The National. In reports sent us some have obtained as much as five inches development by following Dr. Carr's instructions.

VALUABLE BOOK FREE

If you want a beautiful, plump, full bust, write for our valuable book on bust development, containing the article by Dr. Carr, in which he tells specifically the causes of non-development and how the bust may be developed harmlessly to it's most beautiful proportions. Sent free to every woman in need of development. If you wish book sent sealed, inclose 6c postage.

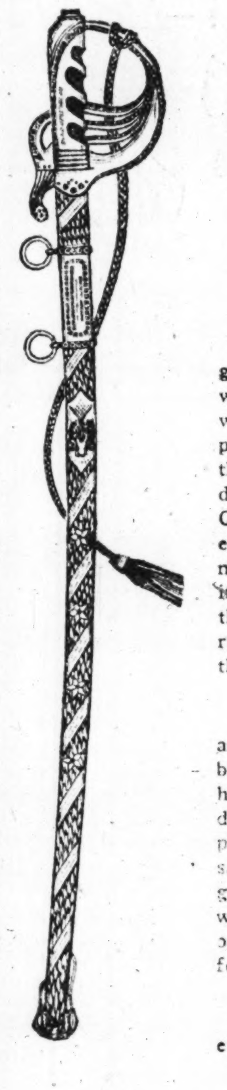
You Are Especially Invited to Our Store This Week to See



General Pershing's Sword

Which Was Presented to Him by the "Old Friends of Missouri"

The scabbard is of 18-carat green gold, embossed with laurel, encircled with bands of 18-carat yellow gold, on which is engraved Gen. Pershing's complete military record. On each side of the presentation inscription is a row of diamonds; while the four stars signify Gen. Pershing's rank, seen between the encircling bands, are of blue white diamonds set in platinum. Just below the inscription is the seal of Missouri. At the end of the scabbard, on each side, is raised in yellow gold a representation of the American eagle.

The blade is of steel, 32 inches long, and profusely etched with typical emblems. The hilt is of 18-carat gold, hand chased, engraved and studded with diamonds, rubies and multi-colored sapphires. In the hilt base is a large blue sapphire—Pershing's birthstone. Engraved on one side of the handle are the words, "Lafayette We Are Here," and on the reverse side are shown Pershing's foreign service stripes.

This is said to be the finest sword ever presented to a military commander.

Sword on exhibition in window all this week.

Beauty Secrets Revealed. Anna Q. Nilsson the Popular Actress Tells How

MISS ANNA Q. NILSSON

New York—"The secret of beauty is the proper care of the skin," says Miss Nilsson, the popular Metro star. "It only requires a few moments' time and anyone is more than paid for the little effort it takes. In the first place the skin should be kept scrupulously clean. Use a good cleansing cream (Liska cold cream I have found to be the best), follow this by bathing the face with warm water, then rinse with cold water and dry thoroughly with a coarse towel. After this process select a beautifier which in addition to being a beautifier has a healing effect on the skin. The very best I have found for this purpose is derwillo, as it instantly beautifies the complexion and its continued use makes the results permanent." Derwillo takes the place of face powder, as it stays on better and is wonderful for a shiny nose, oily, dark, sallow skin, freckles, tan, wrinkles and other facial blemishes. Just make this test: Put derwillo on one side of your face, then look in your mirror and compare it with the other side—you will need no further argument to convince you that nothing beautifies like derwillo. It imparts a youthful appearance and if you would keep your complexion at its best all the time make derwillo a part of your toilet as you now do face powder and note the favorable comments of your friends. Short sleeves are now in vogue, use derwillo to beautify your hands and arms and protect them from roughness and ruddiness, which always follows exposure to sun, dust and wind. It is guaranteed absolutely harmless on the most delicate skin and will positively not stimulate or produce a growth of hair. Give it a thorough trial and you will never be without it. Accept no substitutes as there is nothing "better," "just as good" or "just like it."

NOTE—Ask your druggist about derwillo and he will tell you that he has never sold any toilet article which has become so popular in so short a time. This is due to the satisfaction it gives. It is guaranteed by every druggist or department store to give complete satisfaction or they will refund your money. If you don't like it take it back. Could anything be fairer? It is sold at all toilet counters in this city, including Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Johnson Bros. and the Enderle Drug Co.

This Will Tell You How to Get Benefit of the Choicest Senna

Only the very finest grade of Egyptian senna leaves used in the compounding of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

PROMINENT importers and wholesale dealers in crude drugs and medicinal herbs gathered from all parts of the world do not hesitate to say that the market for the better grades of medicinal herbs, roots, oils, etc., is practically confined to the leading manufacturers of the so-called package medicines, who buy only the very best, and that the manufacturers of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are the largest users of the best grade of Egyptian senna leaves in the world.

The potency of a tea brewed from senna leaves to relieve constipation has long been recognized, not only by the medical profession, but by the public generally; in fact, senna has been known and used in medicine for more than five centuries. The cheaper grades of senna, such as are usually sold at retail, have, however, a tendency to gripe and cramp which makes their use unpopular with most people.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the finest Egyptian senna is combined with pepsin and other valuable agents, essential oils and pure cane sugar syrup to make an exceptionally valuable tonic-laxative for the relief of constipation and resulting disturbances of the stomach and bowels. The complete formula is plainly printed in English, French, and Spanish on every package. Thousands who formerly bought an inferior grade of senna leaves now use Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin instead. It is sold in drug stores everywhere.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, there being over 6 million bottles sold each year, many who need its benefits have not yet used it. If you have not, send your name and address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 511 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

AN ARTIST can be paid to sing for records, but he cannot be paid to sing with the record unless it sustains the test of realism. The NEW EDISON is the only phonograph with which the artists sing in test. Isn't that a guarantee of realism? Do you know what this means?

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

Realism! Only realism can make the phonograph as wonderful a source of music as all the artists in the world.

Realism! How can you know the phonograph that achieves Realism?

The Official Laboratory Model of the New Edison has proved its Realism by direct comparison with living artists. The singer sings—or the instrumentalist plays. Suddenly the artist stops, and the New Edison continues alone.

Four million people have witnessed these remarkable tests. They found that only by watching the artist could they tell when he was singing—or playing—and when the New Edison was Re-Creating his performance.

The instrument we'll show you is an exact duplicate of the instruments which triumphed in these comparison-tests.

RUSSIAN SOVIET LABOR CODE ANALYZED BY ECONOMICAL EXPERT

committee or trade union, the wage earner must remain at his work. In this and other ways, the limitation of the "right to fire" is counterbalanced by limitations of the "right to quit" and the "right to work" shades off into "the obligation to work."

Even more striking in its bearing on the same question is another article of the code, namely, Article VIII, which is entitled: "Methods to Assure Efficiency of Labor." There is hardly another labor code in the world which contains anything like it. But the logic of it in the Soviet code is clear. If the worker is guaranteed a steady job at steady and satisfactory wages, something must be done to assure a satisfactory amount of work in return. The Soviet code says that every wage earner must during a normal working day and under normal working conditions perform the standard amount of work fixed for the category and group in which he is enrolled. How is this to be determined? Under an ideal system, perhaps, this court be left to the judgment of the individual worker.

How Standards Are Fixed.

The Soviet code assigns the task of fixing standards of output to the valuation commissions appointed by the respective trade unions. This is meant to give the workers the first say in deciding what is a fair day's work. But the code does not stop here. It also provides that the standards of output fixed by such valuation commissions should be approved by the proper department of labor jointly with the council of national economy. The latter is even given the power to order a general increase or decrease of the standards of efficiency and output for all wage earners and for all enterprises, establishments and institutions of a given district. In other words, the state, which in this case acts as employer and manager, reserves the power to decide whether it is getting enough for its money. The worker who systematically produces less than the standard cannot be "fired," but he may be transferred to other work with a corresponding reduction of wages.

On the other hand, the code reveals an understanding of the abuses to which the idea of efficiency may lead and attempts to prevent such abuses in two ways. It specifies that normal working conditions mean good and up-to-date machinery, timely delivery of materials and tools, etc. It also provides that the discipline within the plant—the rules of internal management—should be made by the trade unions and be enforced by shop or work committees.

This quality of purpose—to protect the wage earner against the state employes, and vice versa—runs through other provisions of the Soviet code. In Article 7, which covers working hours, rules are laid down limiting the hours of work to eight a day (to seven for persons under 18 years of age, and to six in industries which are especially hard or dangerous to health). Overtime is permitted only in exceptional cases, is limited to 50 days a year and to not more than four hours in

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

The tone-test is the acid-test of a phonograph.

The artist sings. Suddenly he ceases to sing—and the New Edison takes up the same song alone. Is there any difference between the living voice and that voice as RE-CREATED by the New Edison?

4000 such tone-tests have been given. 50 different artists have made them. 3 million people have heard them.

In every test, human ear has been unable to detect any difference between living voice and RE-CREATED.

What other phonograph manufacturer dare claim this—much less guarantee it?

Doctors Stand Amazed at Power of Bon-Opto to Make Weak Eyes Strong—According to Dr. Lewis

Guarantee to Strengthen Eyesight 50% In One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription, and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes, which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long-distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two or four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent Physician, to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is sold in this city by the leading druggists, including the Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley, Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson stores.

two consecutive days. A weekly rest of not less than 42 hours is allowed to all wage earners and a vacation of two weeks annually for all those who worked six months without interruption and a leave of absence of one month for all those who worked without interruption, not less than a year is provided for. No wage earner is allowed to work for a remuneration during his vacation.

In a similar way article 9 provides for the protection of the life, health and labor of the wage earners. Two kinds of inspection are mentioned—technical and sanitary. The technical inspectors must be engineers. The labor inspectors are elected, are given wide powers of investigation and control and are required to assist the trade unions and work committees in improving labor conditions.

It Smashes Individualism.

Such are, in brief, the main provisions of the Soviet labor code. Even the cursory examination made here shows that it embodies ideas radically different from those upon which our individualistic industrialism has been based. American industrial development has proceeded on the assumption that the individual can and must take care of himself politically and economically. The wage earner, no less than the employer or merchant or banker, has been expected to carry the responsibility for his own maintenance, to take his chances in finding a place for himself in the scheme of production, and to stake his welfare upon successful bargaining in selling his own particular commodity, namely his labor power. In accordance with our philosophy of individualism and natural inalienable rights, we have relied upon freedom of contract to bring about the best results of all concerned. We have interpreted the right to make contracts as a property right, which, in so far as the wage earner is concerned, means his right to seek an employer wherever and however he pleases and to acquire property in the form of wages. Our idea of liberty in relation to the worker has meant the right to quit work if conditions seemed to him unsatisfactory. On the other hand, the same constitutional guarantees in relation to the employer have been understood to mean the right to seek laborers and to acquire their services, and the right to run his business in his own way, including the right to "hire and fire" without hindrance.

Had this doctrine been strictly adhered to we could have had no protective labor legislation in the United States worth mentioning. But the wage earners of America, in common with those of England and other countries, rejected this doctrine in its bald form, because, in their experience, it did not jibe with the economic facts. They found that the equality of bargaining which was implied in the legal doctrine of free contract was constantly upset by economic inequalities. They proposed to establish the balance in two ways—by organization and by legislation. They have succeeded in both to a certain extent. Our labor laws now cover a wide range of industrial relations and limit the rights of employers and employes in a variety of ways. But we have not proceeded systematically or on the basis of well-recognized general principles. Our constitutions still embody the old ideas in their pristine firmness. Our Legislatures proceed more or less in response to the demands of new economic conditions. The courts are expected to work out the general ideas which will reconcile legal thought with economic fact. But so far the process has been slow and painful. This explains in part at least our greater confusion of mind and our failure to reconstruct industrial relations.

If we compare our doctrine of natural rights and freedom of contract in their original form with the Soviet code the contrast is immense. But if we consider the ideas that have been gradually disentangling themselves from the industrial facts, the result is different. Briefly stated, the industrial development in America, as in England and elsewhere, has tended to substitute more or less fixed relationships for contracts, organized planning for individual effort, and social rights and obligations for natural and merely formal rights. Our industrial discussions since the armistice have centered about collective bargaining, a living wage, shop committees, employe representation, limiting the right to "hire and fire" and so forth. Within the past few months state after state has passed or considered laws on compulsory investigation and arbitration which one way or another limit the rights of individuals.

RICHMOND, Va., May 15.—Announcement was made today of the transfer of the business and good will of the Richmond Virginian, morning newspaper, to the Evening Journal.

The Virginian will suspend publication with its Sunday edition. High cost of operating and paper shortage are declared to be the cause of the paper's suspension.

It's Easy to Peel Off All Your Freckles

The contrast between the freckles and the clear skin usually is so great that no bleach can be more than partially successful in obliterating the disfigurements. Ordinary mercolized wax is far better; it literally peels off the freckles. Get an ounce of it at the nearest drug store and tonight spread on enough to completely cover the face; remove in the morning with warm water. Repeat daily until every freckle has disappeared.

Rough blotches, pimpled skin, also common at this season, may be entirely gotten rid of by same method, without discomfort or inconvenience. The effort is decidedly worth while. The new complexion obtained being so clean, smooth and youthful.

LABOR ECONOMIST'S STUDY OF PROFITEERING'S EFFECT ON LIVING

mon. These companies had an average investment in 1916 of approximately $39,000, and in 1917 of approximately $43,000. Probably because of the smaller investment, the profit rates were much higher—101 per cent in 1916 and 148 per cent in 1917. Although it would be unfair to jump immediately to the conclusion that the profits of these brokers were exorbitant—for the relationship between returns and investment in each a business can hardly be treated in the same way as in a productive enterprise with large capital investment—still, it can be seen that the increased profits of brokers in 1917 undoubtedly added to the price paid by the consumer for the product. As a matter of fact, the average brokerage per case rose from 19.4 cents in 1916 to 33.7 cents per case in 1917, a rise which is more than is justified by the increased operating expenses.

The general conclusion is plain enough that the increase in price of canned salmon, and, in general, canned foodstuffs, was considerably more than was justified by increased labor costs or general increased costs. That the excess was based upon increased margins of profit seems a safe conclusion from the above analysis of costs in the industry. This conclusion is substantiated by the fact that profit doubled between 1916 and 1917, reaching the point in the latter year where they averaged over 50 per cent upon invested capital. In this industry the finger of the Big Five meat packers is again visible, reaching out to control meat substitutes. But to what extent these meat interests were able to influence prices it is impossible to say.

Profits Shown in Reports.

Turning from the reports of the Federal Trade Commission to the financial manuals, we find confirmation of the conclusion that there has been profiteering in the food industry. These manuals enable us to go back behind 1916 to the pre-war years. Taking a great variety of companies manufacturing everything from cereals to canned sea food, providing fruits, teas, groceries, etc., we find that their profits for the years 1916-1918 were double the profits for the pre-war years 1912-1914. Specific instances from the various branches of the industry furnish an interesting criterion for the increase in food prices.

In connection with the preceding discussion of the salmon-packing industry, it is interesting to note the increased profits of the Alaska Packers' Association, one of the largest concerns in the industry, and one which seems to have developed intimate relations with the meat packers. The average profits of this concern jumped from $436,967 for the pre-war years 1912-1914 to $1,312,329 for the years 1916-1918, approximately three times the former figures. This meant an increase in rate of return on investment from 7.6 per cent to 22.8 per cent. For the two years 1916 and 1917 this concern averaged over one-quarter of its capital stock each year.

The profits of the United Fruit Co. have been steadily increasing. The average for the pre-war years was $1,162,691, equivalent to 11.4 per cent on the capital stock. For the years 1916-1918 the average was over $13,000,000, a return of 26.4 per cent on the investment, while for the year 1918 the profits were over $14,000,000, approximately two and one-half times the pre-war average.

Flour and Cereals.

Turning to a representative of the flour industry, we find a similar increase in profits during the war years. The Standard Milling Co. increased its net earnings from an average of $857,257 for the years 1912-1914 to an average of $1,679,126 for the years 1916-1918. The fact that this company only shows a rate of 7.6 per cent in the earlier years and 14.8 per cent in the war years probably signifies heavily watered capital value, for, according to the Federal Trade Commission, the average profits of the milling industry rose from 12 per cent in 1916 to nearly 38 per cent in 1917. The commission's figures are based upon an investigation of 40 per cent of the industry.

The other cereal concerns show varying results. The Quaker Oats Co., making an average profit of over $2,000,000, or over 15 per cent for the pre-war years, increased its profits to double that figure in 1917, while the average for the war years was over $3.800.000, or more than 25 per cent. On the other hand, concerns such as the Shredded Wheat Co. and the National Biscuit Co. show little, if any, increase in profits due to the war. The Jewel Tea Co., handling tea and groceries, doubled its earnings as a result of the war, but as a result of the policy of capitalization, whereby an original investment not over $5000 apparently became $16,000,000 worth of capital stock with $12,000,000 written as capitalized "good will," makes it impossible to compare rates of return.

Pile-Up of Profits on Shoes.

An analysis of retail shoe prices in order to determine the various items upon which the consumers' money is expended is not so simple a matter as in the case of a product such as sugar or copper. For the primary product in the shoe industry passes from the packer to the tanner, thence to the manufacturer, and very likely to the wholesaler, before it reaches the retail merchant. Each one exacts his profit, so that when all profits are above normal these profits pyramid upon each other. In 1918 about three-fifths of the consumers' money spent for shoes went into margins taken by the various hands through which the goods passed. In other words, the actual cost of producing a pair of shoes is only about two-fifths of the price which the consumer pays. All of this is clearly brought out in the recent report of the Federal Trade Commission on The Leather and Shoe Industries (Washington, 1919).

The report just referred to traces the cost and profits of shoe making back to the hides. Unfortunately, no data is at hand which will permit a thorough analysis of hides sold by the big packers, as, to the packers, hides are merely a byproduct of their meat business, although an enormously profitable one. But the cost and the profit margins of country or nonpackers' hides is known, and from these data it is clear that the great increase in the price of hides during the past few years meant a greatly increased margin to the big packers, who control approximately 70 per cent of the American-grown product and a large proportion of the imported hides. Between 1914 and 1917 the price of packer hides

Cutting the Grass is Fun or Torture—

It all depends on the Lawn Mower

If you can't get a "Philadelphia" Lawn Mower it may be alright to take some other. But if you can get a genuine "Philadelphia" there isn't anything else to do.

Every part of a "Philadelphia" is mechanically perfect — they've been that way for fifty years. The blades are made of vanadium crucible steel. My! how they do cut. If you have any preference as to a particular style of mower you can gratify that preference in a "Philadelphia." There are seven different styles from which to select. And one of these styles costs less than ten dollars.

And besides seeds, plants, trees and lawn mowers we can supply you with all other lawn and garden needfuls—lawn rollers, hose, cultivators, garden tools and implements.

Our "Seed Annual for 1920" illustrates and describes everything needed for the garden and the lawn. You can get a copy free by calling at the store or by writing or phoning.

LABOR ECONOMIST'S STUDY OF PROFITEERING'S EFFECT ON LIVING

increased 68 per cent, as contrasted with an increase of only 42 per cent for country hides, although prior to 1914 the differential in favor of packers' hides had regularly been 12 per cent.

The Federal Trade Commission report analyzes the production costs of five tanneries producing an average of 184,000,000 pounds of leather per year. The cost of producing sole and upper leather is itemized for the years 1914, 1916 and 1917. From the figures given it is apparent that the percentage increase in the tanners' profit is in all cases above the increase in any other items. Thus profits increased from 176 to 303 per cent, while the only other item which shows anything like a corresponding increase is administration cost, which is, of course, largely made up of salaries of officials.

Between 1914 and 1917 the price of upper leather advanced 25 cents per foot. Analysis of this increase shows that 14.1 cents was due to increased cost of hide, 2.5 cents to the increased cost of other materials, 7.5 cents to the greater profit taken by the tanner, and only 1.2 cents to the increased cost of labor. And this despite the fact that upper leather shows the highest labor cost and the greatest increase in labor costs. As a matter of fact, the percentage of labor cost to the total cost of tanned leather is very small, and as the price has risen this percentage has declined. Labor in the tanneries received 6.84 per cent of the price paid for tanned leather in 1914, as contrasted with 5.48 per cent in 1916 and 5.85 per cent in 1917. On the other hand, tanners' profits absorbed 11.41 per cent of the price in 1914, 25.19 per cent of the price in 1916, and, despite, the excess profits tax, over 20 per cent in 1917.

The figures for sole leather differ slightly, but show the same general tendency.

Earnings More Than Double.

From this table it is apparent that the rate of earnings on investment in the tanning industry during the years 1916-1917 was more than double the rate for previous years, the average for 1916-1917 being 79.9 per cent, as contrasted with 14.7 per cent for 1914-1915.

The Central Leather Co. in its report as published in Moody's Manual shows average net earnings for the three years 1912-1914, inclusive, of approximately $5,000,000. This contrasts with an average of approximately $12,000,000 for the three years 1915-1917, and of nearly $15,000,000 for the two years 1916-1917. The average net earnings on capital stock were 6⅓ per cent for the years 1912-1914, 16½ per cent for the years 1915-1917, and over 20 per cent for the two years 1916 and 1917. This increase in earnings was not due simply to increased production, for net earnings represented 16 per cent of the gross sales of the company for the years 1916-1917, as contrasted with only 8 per cent for the years 1912-1914.

Tendency of Labor Increases.

From the material presented by the Federal Trade Commission's report relative to costs in the actual manufacture of shoes it is possible to draw certain very definite conclusions. In the first place, the amount which went to labor increased proportionately less than any other important item. As a matter of fact, the Commission points out that labor generally constituted a lesser percentage of the total cost in 1917 than it did in 1914. According to the report: "There is no shoe shown in the table where comparisons can be made in which the percentage was not less in 1917, and in many instances it was very much less than in 1914." In fact, the decline in the percentage of the cost which went to labor was marked. On the other hand, the percentage of the cost absorbed by leather was materially increased. Margins also steadily increased. According to the Federal Trade Commission:

"An inspection of the above table shows that of 50 men's shoes where comparisons can be made between 1914 and 1917, 34 had a gross margin of 7 per cent or more in 1914, and 38 were in this class in 1917. Only 10 had a margin of 20 per cent or more in 1914, while 17 had this high margin in 1917. In 1914 only two had a margin exceeding 30 per cent, while eight exceeded this percentage in 1917."

Big Margin on Women's Shoes.

In the case of women's shoes, the increase in margins was even greater. A general survey of the whole situation will, perhaps, make more clear just what has happened to the money paid by the consumer for shoes as a result of the increase in profits all along the line. For this purpose a single standard style medium-priced shoes has been taken, known to the trade as Russia Calf, bal, gw. By combining the data given in tables in the Trade Commission report, showing the various processes through which the leather passes before it reaches the consumer as a pair of shoes, it has been possible to make a table, which shows approximately the division of the consumers' money for the years 1914, 1916 and 1917.

From this analysis it appears how small a proportion of the price paid by the consumer goes to labor and how extravagant a proportion goes into the various margins of profit. It seems hardly believable that the entire cost of manufacturing shoes for which the consumer pays $8.50 is only approximately $3.46.

Administration Expense.

In general, the only items in the entire cost of a pair of shoes which increased 100 per cent or over between 1914 and 1917 were the profit items and the small item for administration expense (i. e., salaries of officials). The retailers' margin is by far the largest, absorbing over one-third of the price, but it does not show so large an increase as do the packers' and tanners' profits. As the largest tanneries are indirectly a part of the Big Packers' varied interests, it can be said without danger of contradiction that their profiteering is very largely responsible for the high prices of shoes. The retailer is also in large measure responsible, for his 102 per cent increase in margin means an increase of $1.82 per pair, and in this case the amunt is more significant than the percentage figure. The manufacturer appears to have increased his profits less than any of the other factors, although it should be mentioned that he took his highest profits in 1916, during which year they amounted to twice the amount which he took in 1914.

Level Advanced 10 Per Cent.

This merely indicates the fact that the general level of earnings for the shoe manufacturing industry advanced from approximately 15 per cent to approximately 25 per cent during the war years. And, as the Federal Trade Commission points out: "Notwithstanding the wide difference in the earnings of the first two years of the period and the last two years, the rates in 1914 and 1915 were liberal."

The above citations from the Federal Trade Commission's report may be supplemented by the financial statements of four large shoe manufacturing concerns, as reported in Moody's Manual. For the years 1912-1914 these four companies show average annual earnings of approximately $4,800,000. For the years 1916-1917 these increased to over $10,000,000. The corresponding rates of return on invested capital for these four great corporations more than doubled.

As to the retailer, it is impossible to show in figures the extent of his profiteering. It can only be pointed out that, according to figures furnished by a large and representative group of retailers to the Federal Trade Commission, a generous allowance for expense of selling would be 23 per cent of the selling price of the shoes. it has already been shown that the margin taken by the retailer had risen from 35 to 42 per cent by 1917, and that it was still rising. There can be no question but that there has been great profiteering in the retail distribution of shoes.

From figures at hand it would appear that the textile industry is no exception to the general rule of profiteering. Here again, from year to year, a greater and greater proportion of the price paid by the consumer for the goods he buys is going into manufacturing and retail profits, leaving a constantly decreasing proportion as wages to labor. As textile products are an item in every family budget, the fact that of the high prices prevalent today approximately 50 per cent is absorbed in profits is of immense significance.

How Cotton Cloth Price Advanced.

Statistical material covering costs in the textile industry is rather scant. But enough is available in Government reports to indicate the general tendency. For purposes of illustration two standard cotton cloths are chosen, blue denim, which is in general use for overalls, and gray sheeting, which has a multitude of uses, bleached and unbleached.

For the purpose of studying the division of the price paid by the consumer for these goods it is possible to compare the pre-war year 1910 with the post-war year 1919. For these two years the division of the price paid for blue denim is shown below:

	—1910—		—1919—		Pct.
ITEMS.	Cost per yd in cents.	Pct. of retail price.	Cost per yd in cents.	Pct. of retail price.	Inc. 1919 over 1910.
Material	7.32	38.53	19.48	38.96	166
Labor	1.22	6.42	2.33	4.70	92.6
Mill expense	1.69	8.89	2.10	4.20	24
Selling expense	.51	2.68	1.20	2.40	135
Mill profit	1.76	9.26	12.37	24.74	602
Retail margin	6.50	34.21	12.50	25.00	92
Retail price	19.00	100.00	50.00	100.00

In these figures it appears that in 1910 labor engaged in making up the raw material into finished product received about 6½ per cent of the retail price while the mill owner received 9¼ per cent and the retailer 34 per cent. Although in fairness we must deduct from the retailer's margin something for his running expenses, this margin of 6½ cents on a 19-cent article is exorbitant. Evidently in 1910 the retailer was the chief profiteer.

In 1919 the price paid by the consumer has risen from 19 cents to 50 cents per yard, an increase of 31 cents. Of this increase 1.13 cents went to labor, being an increase of about 93 per cent; 6 cents went to the retailer, the percentage increase being 92 per cent, while the manufacturer increased his profit by 10.61 cents, an increase of 602 per cent. This means that the profit of the manufacturer was approximately seven times as large in 1919 as it was in 1910. In 1919 the amount retained by the manufacturer and the retailer amounted to approximately 50 per cent of the price paid by the consumer, while labor's share had shrunk from 6.42 per cent to only 4.70 per cent of the total. The fact cannot be over-emphasized that under present conditions the consumer is forced to pay approximately twice what it costs to produce and distribute the goods used.

In 1910 profits absorbed 25 per cent of the consumer's money; in 1919 profits absorbed nearly 50 per cent. In 1910 labor received 11½ per cent of the selling price, in 1919 only 7 per cent. In 1910 the manufacturer received 9 per cent of the selling price, in 1919 his profits had increased to 23 per cent. During the same period the retailer's margin had increased from 16 per cent to over 25 per cent of the retail price. Labor costs had increased 115 per cent, the retailer's margin 464 per cent, and the manufacturer's profits by the enormous figure of 748 per cent.

Such profits should be reflected in the net incomes shown in the published reports of the large textile companies. Here again the material at hand is not so full as one could wish. But such returns as appear in Moody's and Poor's Manuals enable us to substantiate the above conclusions for eight large representative cotton and wool manufacturing companies. Roughly speaking the net income of these companies for the pre-war years 1916-1918 was five times as large as the corresponding total for the pre-war years 1912-1914.

The capitalization of these companies ranges all the way from $600,000 to $60,000,000, the capitalization of the great American Wooler. Co. This corporation increased its net annual income from $1,600,000 in the pre-war years to nearly $9,000,000 in the years 1916-1918, being an increase in per cent return on capital stock from 2.7 per cent to 14.9A. In 1917 its earnings reached the total of $13,883,155, a return of approximately 23 per cent on the capital stock. The average net income for the group of eight corporations increased from $3,734,215 in the years 1912-1914 to $22,630,562 for the years 1916-1918, meaning an increase in the return on capital stock from 3.9 per cent to 22.6 per cent.

In general the outstanding fact is that in recent years the manufacturers' and retailers' margins of profits have been absorbing much larger portion of the consumer's money than in earlier years, that today the amount absorbed by these two elements amounts to approximately one-half the price paid by the consumer for the goods, and that this is reflected in profits which, for the manufacturer at least, are many times those received in pre-war years. This establishes a very close relationship between profiteering and high prices.

CHORUS OF 30 FOR OPERA TO BE ORGANIZED THIS WEEK

Applications Being Received Daily By David E. Russell, Manager—Orchestra Being Assembled.

The chorus for the second season of municipal opera which will be given at the Open-Air Theater beginning June 8 and continuing for seven weeks will be organized this week. David E. Russell, manager of the Municipal Opera Company, is receiving applications at the headquarters, sixth floor of the Chamber of Commerce building, every day between 12 and 2:30 o'clock.

The chorus supporting the all-star cast will be 80 voices. A small professional chorus has been engaged in New York as a nucleus, but it is hoped that a large per cent of the chorus will be local singers.

As soon as the chorus is organized the rehearsals for "Firefly," which will be the first offering, will begin under the direction of Max Bendix, musical director.

An orchestra of 50 pieces, all St. Louis musicians, is now being assembled under the direction of Frederick Fischer.

Screens have been built on either side of the immense al fresco stage which add to its attractiveness and augment the acoustics.

The advance sale of seats is now well over $15,000, this amount being for season tickets. This is in advance of the season box office sale and it is expected that before the season opens it will be practically a capacity house for every night.

Try This Skin Treatment

WRING out a towel in very hot water and steam your face for a few minutes.

If you have pimples, blackheads, acne, oily or shiny skin, this steaming will soften and open up the pores.

Then pat on a little refreshing CLEAR-TONE liquid and let dry until a slight film of powder appears.

Gently massage with the tips of the fingers until the powder disappears.

You will find that the very first treatment will improve your appearance. And that before you have used up the contents of one bottle your complexion will have cleared amazingly.

What Science Discovered

Many, many people have been troubled and embarrassed by facial eruptions.

Mr. E. S. Givens suffered from this trouble for 15 years. He went through the usual experiences of trying all known skin lotions and treating with skin specialists.

After several years of persevering experiment he discovered the formula for CLEAR-TONE. His complexion cleared, his skin became smooth in a very few weeks.

Mr. Givens began in a small way to manufacture CLEAR-TONE to supply personal friends. But soon the demand became so great that this amazing cosmetic was put on the market.

GIVENS CHEMICAL CO.
251 Chemical Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

How to Get CLEAR-TONE

If you will simply send your name Mr. Givens will mail you a booklet in which he tells fully the story of this wonder-working lotion.

He will also offer you a bottle to try entirely at his risk. If within two weeks you are not delighted with results the bottle of CLEAR-TONE will cost you nothing.

Thousands of people have accepted this offer. Their letters of enthusiastic praise would fill a book.

You, too, are invited to make this trial. Do not send any money. Simply send your name and address today. There is no risk in using CLEAR-TONE. It is a refreshing and delightful lotion that will not injure the most delicate skin.

And if it does not, once for all, banish those unsightly eruptions and give you a smooth, velvety skin such as Nature intended you to have, the trial will not cost you a single cent.

In a short time all barbers and beauty parlors will be able to give you CLEAR-TONE treatments. But to obtain this trial offer and to secure a bottle of CLEAR-TONE, sent in a plain wrapper, to your own home, simply address

'VACATION VILLAGE' OF RED CROSS TO BE REOPENED SOON

30 Tents With Capacity of About 200 Persons to Occupy Forest Park Site West of Zoo.

"Vacation Village," the summer community camp conducted last year in Forest Park by the St. Louis chapter of the Red Cross, will reopen for the season as soon as weather permits, it was announced yesterday by Red Cross officials. Park Commissioner Pape has pledged the co-operation of the Park and Recreation Department.

The colony will consist of a village of 30 tents with a capacity of about 200 persons. Families otherwise unable to afford a vacation will be selected by 15 charitable and welfare organizations of the city to be guests of the Red Cross for two weeks. These organizations are the Provident Association, St. Vincent de Paul Society, Woman's Catholic League, Jewish Alliance, Neighborhood Association, Boyle Center, Markham Memorial, Kingdom House, Visiting Nurses' Association, Municipal Nurses' Association, City Hospital Social Service Department, Board of Children's Guardians, Children's Aid Society, Washington University Social Service Department and Home Service Section of the Red Cross.

The site of the camp is on former picnic ground No. 10, directly west of the zoo on high, well-drained ground with plenty of shade. The tents will face each other along one "street" to be named "Red Cross avenue."

Outing for Under-nourished Children.

Arrangements are being made to care for under-nourished children at the village. These will be selected by groups from the Red Cross Community kitchens and sent for a two-weeks' stay at Red Cross expense, as guests of the Junior Red Cross. Playgrounds will be installed by the Park Department containing swings, sand piles, see-saws and merry-go-rounds. There will be a water faucet with hose attached for "water fights."

A feature of each day's program will be the twilight story hour for the children, conducted by a storyteller from the Public Library. A sublibrary branch, with about 500 volumes for grown-ups as well as children, will be housed in a recreation tent, containing games, books, puzzles and musical instruments. There will be a program of band concerts and possibly on certain nights movies will be shown.

Lights will be put out at 10 o'clock, and special emphasis will be laid on the regulation covering quiet after that hour.

A hospital tent fully equipped will be placed on the grounds with a Red Cross nurse in charge, and physicians will be under call at all hours.

Negroes as well as white persons will be admitted, but separate living and eating quarters are being planned. The camp kitchen will be similar to the army field kitchen. All precautions will be taken to assure the sanitary preparation of food.

Protection Against Contagion.

The card of admission calls for a doctor's certificate of physical fitness. This will protect the villagers against the danger of contagion. A physical record will be kept of all persons staying at the camp. Their weight will be taken on entrance and on departure, and where it is found that further stay would be beneficial an extension will be granted. Miss Grace Anderson, superintendent of the Municipal Nurses' Association, will conduct a child welfare clinic on the grounds several times a week, when mothers can take their children to be examined.

This will be defrayed by the charitable organizations and the Red Cross.

The only charge will be a nominal one for meals. Those wishing to pay will find it so low that families will be enabled to spend the two weeks there at less cost for food than if at home.

A matron will be in charge, with assistants to see that all sanitary and camp regulations are carried out. The kitchen will be run under the management of the community kitchens of the Red Cross, Mrs. E. T. Senseney, director.

The camp will be built in co-operation with the Park Commissioner's office, which has furnished shower baths, kitchen and dining tents, and will set up street light and water connections.

Last year the camp opened Aug. 1 and closed early in September. Approximately 250 persons, mainly women and children, received its benefits. More than 2300 meals were served. The camp was started merely as an experiment, but its success last year has caused health officers to urge that it be made permanent.

To Have Wavy Hair Like Nature's Own

Here's a brand-new recipe of unquestioned merit that you should make note of, unless you are one of the few possessors of naturally wavy hair. It's very simple, for all you need do is to apply a little liquid silmerine before doing up the hair—with a clean-tooth brush—and in three hours you will find this has dried in the sweetest curls and waves imaginable. They will be just like "Nature's own," having no resemblance to the effect produced by a hot iron, which is so obviously artificial.

The application is really beneficial to the hair and gives it that lively luster so much desired. As it is so easy to obtain a few ounces of the liquid silmerine from your druggist—sufficient to keep the hair curly for many weeks—there's no reason now for putting up with either that straight, contrary hair or with the curling iron nuisance.

PILGRIMAGE TO STARKENBURG

Annual Devotion at Rural Chapel Will Be on May 24, 25 and 26.

The annual May pilgrimage of Catholics to the rustic chapel at Starkenburg, Mo., will take place May 24, 25 and 26, days of the Titular Feast of the Chapel.

A pious youth erected a little sanctuary in the wood under a dogwood bush near St. Martin's Church in 1888, and in it was placed a statue of Mary. Since that time, in the month of May, hundreds have visited the chapel which has been replaced by a larger one.

HOCKADAY

SAVES LABOR AND EXPENSE.

Stop experimenting with temporary washes of chalk, glue and water.

Don't use inside finishes which are hard to mix—and have no lasting qualities.

The mixing and preparation of Hockaday Interio Wall Finishes is very simple.

A Child Can Do the Work

All Hockaday finishes are thinned with a preparation called Hockaday Reducer or Thinner, which reduces Hockaday Paint to the right consistency. For example—ordinary first coat work requires the mixture of one part of reducer to one part of body and the covering capacity of one gallon mixed is about 500 square feet.

For second coat work it can be reduced down by adding one-eighth reducer, and the covering capacity for the second coat would be about 600 square feet per gallon mixed.

Prices as Follows:

Hockaday "Interio" or Body, per gallon $5.00

Hockaday Reducer or Thinner, per gallon $3.00

Figuring on the basis of above selling prices, the average price per gallon, after being mixed for two-coat work, would average about $4.50 per gallon.

CASTS ANNOUNCED FOR THREE SCOTTI OPERAS

Actor-Baritone and Florence Easton Lead Roster in Puccini's "La Tosca."

The casts for the three operas to be given by the Scotti Grand Opera Company at the Odeon on the evenings of Monday and Tuesday of next week have been announced. On the first evening, with the curtain rising at 8 o'clock, will be given Puccini's opera, "La Tosca," after Sardou's play, with Antonio Scotti in the most famous of his acting roles, that of the villainous Baron Scarpia.

On the second evening there will be a double bill—Franco Leoni's one-act music drama, "L'Oracolo," after C. B. Fernald's play of the old Chinatown of San Francisco, "The Cat and the Cherub," and Leoncavallo's two-act musical tragedy, "I Pagliacci." Scotti is to repeat the portrayal of the sinister keeper of an opium den, Chim-Fang, which was the chief feature of the first production of "L'Oracolo" in this city, last spring.

The cast for "Tosca" is promised as follows: Floria Tosca, Florence Easton; Marion Cavaradossi, Mario Chamlee; Baron Scarpia, Antonio Scotti; Cesare Angelotti, Louis d'Angelo; the Sacristan, Paolo Ananian; Spoletta, Giordano Paltrinieri; Sciarrone, Mario Laurenti; a jailer, Charles Oborn; and a shepherd, Mary Kent.

The roles in "L'Oracolo" are assigned thus: Chim-Fang, Antonio Scotti, Win-Shee, Charles Galagher; Hoo-Twin, Louis d'Angelo; Win-San Luy, Orville Harold; Ah-Yoe, Francesca Peralta; Hua-Quee, Mary Kent; and a fortune-teller, Giordano Paltrinieri. "I Pagliacci" is cast as follows: Nedda, Anna Roselle; Canio, Morgan Kingston; Tonio, Millo Pico; Beppe, Giordano Paltrinieri; and Silvio, Mario Laurenti. Carlo Peroni will conduct the three operas, and Armando Agnini will be stage manager. The latter is from the Metropolitan, as are most of the chorus and the orchestra.

Those of the singers to be heard here who are at present members of the Metropolitan or have been engaged for next season are the following: Florence Easton, Mario Chamlee, Antonio Scotti, Louis d'Angelo, Paolo Ananian, Giordano Paltrinieri, Mario Laurenti, Orville Harold, Francesca Peralta, Anna Roselle, Morgan Kingston and Millo Picco.

$37,813 FOR TEACHERS' FUND FROM SALES OF WASTE PAPER

Progress of Savings Practice Since 1916 Shown in Report Made to Author of Plan.

A report on the progress of waste paper saving in the public schools, made to Stephen M. Wagner, member of the Board of Education, who instituted it, shows that the practice has reached large proportions. In 1919 a total of 901 tons was collected. Since the schools opened last September, 566 tons have been collected, of which 513 tons consisted of newspapers and 53 tons of magazines.

Proceeds from the sale of the paper go to the fund out of which annuities are paid to teachers who retire after long service, and from which aid is given to teachers temporarily in distress. The pupils collect the paper and the collections are made by a truck, which delivers the paper to the purchasers.

Since the practice was begun, in 1916, $37,813 has been realized from the sales and, with the constantly mounting price of paper, the figure is being rapidly increased. Collection is stimulated by contests between different rooms in the schools.

Waste paper saving was begun as a part of the general scheme of saving in the schools. In the course of this campaign school children have purchased $504,915 of thrift stamps.

GARDEN CLUB'S FIRST FLOWER SHOW ATTRACTS LARGE CROWDS

Notable Collections on Display in Floral House at Shaw's Garden—Will Be Open Today.

Crowds attended the first annual flower show of the St. Louis Garden Club yesterday afternoon and evening at Shaw's Garden. The display was in the floral house, which, for the first time in the history of the garden, was illuminated. The show will open at noon today and close at 10 p. m. It is free to the public.

The exhibits include a commercial display and a number of amateur entries. One of these is a collection of more than 30 varieties of wild flowers grown within a radius of 20 miles of St. Louis, entered by H. J. Wichman of Webster Groves. There are tulips, roses, iris and columbines, entered by Eugene Angert, Mrs. Samuel C. Davis, Mrs. E. H. Simmons, Mrs. S. W. Fordyce Jr. and other members of the club. Old-fashioned cornflowers and 20 varieties of flowering shrubs were shown by Mrs. Herman von Schrenk.

Dr. von Schrenk, president of the Garden Club, stated that the entries were far beyond expectations, taking into consideration the cold, wet weather.

Trustee Resignation Resisted.

E. V. Matlack yesterday applied to the State Supreme Court for a writ prohibiting Circuit Judge Wurdeman of St. Louis County from accepting the resignation of the St. Louis Union Trust Co. as trustee of certain property which Matlack placed in trust for the benefit of his wife and son. The trust company pants to relinquish the trusteeship. Matlack declared that the parties involved could not agree on any other trustee, and that the trust would be disturbed by the resignation.

LEVY

GEORGE JOHN SCHULTZ

"Do you mean to say," Levy went on, "that you aint going to introduce me to the young lady?"

'TWAS in the month of June. In June the roses bloom, the hills and fields are clad in garments green, and the air is redolent with the fragrance of flowers and blossoms. This botanical bunk, however, applies only to the rural districts. In town it begins to get hot in June, the air is apt to be stuffy and noise and odors which you didn't notice in cold weather begin to get on your nerves. Those who have money, leisure and intelligence leave town in June. All of which is as it should be and shows how wonderful is nature, aided and abetted by man. While it has no bearing upon this story, it might just as well go in as a matter of record.

This story is confined entirely to Levy, Casey, Dora, Dora's father, Max Elberg, Lipsky, Fogarty, a couple of rabbis and a few others that sort of hang around the background. The scene is laid in New York's Ghetto, but it includes an excursion to a Long Island graveyard and touches lightly on the problem of Ireland and Palestine. Should this synopsis not look promising, the gentle reader can save a lot of time by turning to the sporting page.

* * * * * * * *

The truck and livery firm of Casey & Levy on Suffolk street had dissolved. In the vernacular of the east side the partnership had become machullah, which may be translated as bankrupt, busted, or "up the spout," according to individual taste. The partners had parted in seeming friendship. It is true that Casey had taken Levy into the back of the stable and had given him a sound thrashing, but Sam Levy was not the sort of chap to bear ill-will for a trifle of that kind. Or, if he did, he had a genius for concealing it.

"Y'see, Sam," Casey had explained, "ye didn't pay any attention to business. When I was driving a truck and leaving you in charge, you was playing the races. Ye're a nice lad and I like ye, but it was your being out of the office that made us lose the last big order. So, before we break up, I'm going to teach ye a lesson, so to speak."

A week later Levy dropped into the stable where Casey had found employment.

"I'm a new man, Casey," he said. "Everything what you said about me was right. I was a good-for-nothing and I don't blame you for that licking you gave me, only you might have left out that last kick. I got a fine job, I don't gamble any more—I don't even smoke. I turned over one of them new leafs and I settled down to business."

"I'm glad to hear it, Levy," said Casey. "Ye got a good head and if ye stick to business ye'll get away with it."

"How is things by you?" asked Levy.

"O, I can't complain," replied the stableman. "I got a good boss and the wages is good. Fogarty—that's the boss—comes from near my home in the old country. He's a—you know."

Casey winked significantly and Levy nodded.

"How's the cause coming on?" asked Levy. Casey shrugged his shoulders.

"It's only a question of time, answered Casey. The people of England is with us, but it's them damned aristocrats what's holding us down. If me and Fogarty could get them aristocrats in the back of the stable, 10 at a time, Ireland'd be free in a month."

"It's the same with Palestine," said Levy. "Our people ain't got a home in the world and the big bugs won't let 'em go to Palestine to live."

Levy's notion of Zionistic doctrine was as clear as his views on esoteric Buddhism—and interested him about as much. But, during his partnership with Casey, he had listened so many times to the latter's denunciation of England's attitude toward Ireland and the woes of his fellow countrymen that, merely in order to keep in the conversation, he had brought up the woes of the children of Israel as another instance of man's inhumanity to man. He had found that any recital of woes touched Casey's heart..

"You're right, Levy," said the stableman: "The Irish and the Jews got a lot in common."

"I was wondering," said Levy, "in case I want to get a carriage some day next week, if you could get your boss to listen to reason."

"Any time you want a rig," said Casey, "Fogarty's the man to give you a special rate. But what in the devil you be wanting with a rig? Are ye thinkin' of driving around the park by yerself?"

And now Levy blushed.

"Don't ask any questions," he said. "Maybe I'll come around for a rig and maybe I won't. There ain't no telling."

Levy ought, really, to be described, but this obligation is more easily recognized than fulfilled. To understand him thoroughly one must first know his race, then one must visualize the centuries of oppression which the Russian fragment of that race underwent, and then one must have observed some of the effects of the sudden freedom from bondage which came with the transplanting of their life roots to this new land of their adoption—effects that traverse the entire gamut of tragedy and humor.

Levy was 25. At the age of 10 he had been left an orphan, practically upon his own resources. Friends of his parents looked after him in desultory fashion, but, in the main, he was left to work out his own salvation. Certain elemental traits, such as honesty, kindheartedness, temperance and an imagination that struggled incessantly after vague, ill-defined, and ill-understood ideals, tended to keep him straight.

The credit of these belonged to the 30 centuries behind him. Other traits, equally elemental, such as irreverence toward his fellow man, a dislike of a humdrum existence, a preference to live by wits rather than by toil, and an easy come, easy go habit of mind, tended, just as strongly, to get him into constant mischief. Between these two tendencies he managed, on the whole, to get along rather well. Above all, he was always cheerful, always hopeful and always eager.

If this brings you any kind of picture of Sam Levy, you are welcome to it. Or, if you should care for an entirely different analysis of Sam Levy's nature, that of Dora's father, old man Seligman, is perfectly simple and comprehensible.

"That fellow Levy," was Seligman's verdict, "is the biggest bum, the worst lowlife and the freshest loafer I ever seen in my life."

It was in Seligman's printing and bookbinding establishment that Levy had found not only employment, but the sudden desire for a better and higher life. His employment is easily explained. Seligman wanted more orders and Levy had convinced him that he could go out and get orders. That, in a general way, is the basis of political economy, supply and demand and all that sort of efficiency stuff. When, however, a man suddenly finds out that he isn't good enough and wants to be better, the explanation is apt to be more complicated. Well——

Her name was Dora. She was the boss' daughter and she happened to be sitting in her father's office when Levy breezed in with quite a profitable order that he had obtained. She had pink cheeks and curling hair and sparkling eyes and —you know—all that sort of thing. And Levy just gasped when he beheld her. She, too, felt a wee bit of a thrill, but, being a girl, she did not betray herself openly as Levy did. Levy, you must remember, was exceedingly good looking—not very tall, but slender, well formed, bright-eyed and with frank, engaging features.

He laid his new order upon his employer's desk —never once taking his eyes from the girl's face —and pointed to the sum total.

"Maybe that's bad for a beginner," he said. Seligman grunted, absent-mindedly.

"D'ye mean to say," Levy went on, "that you ain't going to introduce me to the young lady?"

Seligman's absent-mindedness vanished with startling suddenness. He wheeled around in his chair and glared at his new salesman.

"Get out!" he cried, pointing to the door. Levy thought that he detected just the faintest expression of protest in the girl's eyes as she looked at her father and, somehow or other, he felt happy.

"Sure I'll get out," he said, amiably. "And, to tell you the truth, Mr. Seligman, I don't blame you at all. All my friends say I'm too fresh. But I—I just couldn't help it. She's so beautiful!"

Some 15 minutes later Dora Seligman, coming out of the building, beheld Levy waiting at the door, his hands behind his back.

"I was waiting to apologize for being so fresh," he said. She smiled in a friendly way.

"Oh, that's all right," she said.

"No, it ain't all right at all," said Levy, quite earnestly. "I mean just what I said." I never seen such a beautiful girl as you in all my life. I don't know anything about girls at all. Only I didn't had any business to say anything. Was you looking for a job?"

"Mr. Seligman is my father," said the girl.

"Oh, you don't say," said Levy, not the slightest whit abashed. "Well, Miss Seligman, my name's Levy—Sam Levy—and I just want to tell you that I was happy today just to look at you and, before you go home, I want you to take this along. Please take it! I promise I won't say another word."

He pressed into her hand a small cluster of roses that he had been holding behind his back. The girl, embarrassed, shy, and not knowing what to say, held the flowers in her hand. Levy bowed to her and entered the building.

Oh, Sam Levy! A year—two years, at the most —of schooling, might have perfected your grammar and equipped you with the conventional social graces, but 10,000 years in the university of life could never have improved the unconscious adroitness of your appeal to a girl's heart!

When Levy returned to his desk he took from his pocket a package of cigarettes and tossed it into the waste basket. No other act could have expressed so vividly to him his sudden desire to mend his ways. He also decided to work hard, lead a regular life, abstain from all bad habits and marry his employer's daughter. It was on the following day that he called upon his former partner, led up to the subject of Ireland and Palestine in order to engage his sympathy and made sure that he could hire a carriage at a reasonable rate. He intended to invite Dora to ride with him.

Not being a trained thinker, Levy, of course, could not review the situation logically and systematically and work out a coherent plan of action. But, starting from the one indisputable fact that he was crazy about this girl his mind evolved a series of impulses which, in the end, led to practically the same conclusion that any philosopher would have reached. He went to her father..

"Mr. Seligman," he said, "I know you think I'm fresh, but I'm just crazy about your daughter. Couldn't you fix it so that I could see her once in a while? She's awfully nice and—and I'm sure we'd get on together fine."

Seligman surveyed him contemptuously from head to foot.

"What do you think you are? A millionaire gentleman? Get out of here! Another word from you and you get fired."

Levy contemplated him deliberately for a moment and then he smiled. Levy had a very winning smile.

"No use getting mad about it," he said. "Maybe we talk about it some time in the future when you're feeling better."

Then he telephoned to Dora. The telephone operator in the office, thinking that he was delivering a message for his employer, promptly connected him with Mr. Seligman's house.

"This is Sam Levy," he said. "Could you come for a little ride around the park with me this afternoon?"

"Oh, no," was the answer. "I—I couldn't do that."

"It's very important," said Levy. "I just had a talk with your father and I got to have a talk with you. I'm coming up in a carriage at 3 o'clock."

"Does—does my father know you're coming?"

"Oh, my no!" said Levy. "But listen to me. You just be ready at 3 o'clock and I'll explain everything. It's very, very important."

"But I—I couldn't. Really, I couldn't," protested the girl.

"I'll be in front of the house at 3, sharp," said Levy.

WRITTEN TO THE CZAR DURING THE WAR

"Fighting Chaplain" Urges Building Up of Legion and Boy Scouts as Duty to U. S.

Father Francis A. Kelley, Advocates Bonus to Enable Men to Marry So Next Generation Won't Be One of Foreigners.

"THE greatest danger to America is the citizen who feels that he has done his full duty to his country, because he bought Liberty Bonds and sacrificed some comforts during the war, and who now sits back and thanks God the war is over."

This is the declaration of the Rev. Father Francis A. Kelley of Albany, the "fighting chaplain" of the Twenty-seventh, New York National Guard, Division, and winner of the Distinguished Service Cross and the British Military Cross for heroism under shell and machine gun fire.

Father Kelley, who made four public addresses in St. Louis in the last two days, has thrown the six-feet-one and the 247 pounds of his physique into the endeavor to stir war-weary and drive-weary citizens out of their lethargy, and to set them at work for the advancement of Americanism.

He is advocating, as the best means of building up Americanism, the strengthening of the American Legion, of which he is national chaplain, and the Boy Scouts, of which he is a national field scout master.

His speaking campaign, which he plans to carry through the United States, is being made without either salary or expense charge to the Legion or the Boy Scouts. His expenses, he said while here, are being met by friends who sympathize with his aims.

Legion Stabilizing Factor.

"The American Legion," Father Kelley said in an interview, "is the greatest stabilizing factor in the crisis through which America is now passing. The men who compose the Legion have obtained a new view, and new ideas of what America stands for.

"If the United States cannot look for its solidarity and its preservation, to the men who wore its uniform, to whom can it look?

"We do not desire a Government of, by and for the soldier. We gave the best there was in us to break a system of militarism, and God forbid that we should try to implant such a system here. We are for Government of, by and for the people, but we know that the people are not represented by those who merely wave the flag, make speeches and march in parades. They are represented by those who give of all they possess, and who offer not only money but life.

"No Man's Duty Ever Done."

"Those who are fit to fight are fit to take an active part in steering the ship of state, and America must look to them in peace as in war. The great need is that these service men shall keep the ideal of 100 per cent service, and shall not be among those who feel that they have performed their duty to their country, and that they can stand back and let it drift. No man's duty to his country and his flag is ever done.

"We of the Legion cast our ballots as individuals, but as an organization we are non-political. But if any party puts a plank of un-American construction into its platform, we are in politics unitedly against that party.

"Our organization is non-religious. The war taught us that no church has a corner on patriotism. We judge a man, not by his creed, but by what he is. Our men are too big for bigotry, and religious liberty means more to us than it ever meant before.

"People say we are demanding a bonus. We are not demanding—we are just wondering if the American people quite realize what we earned for them.

"The bonus would not pay the American soldier for what he did. God help the American people if they think they can pay, in money, for the chances that our men took with their lives. If the matter is to be considered that way, let us have a bounty system and an army of mercenaries.

Paid $3,000,000,000 for Nothing.

"Our Government paid $3,000,000,000, after the armistice, for work never executed, on uncompleted contracts. Yet there are those who say it cannot afford to pay $1,800,000 for the work which was accomplished by its soldiers.

"The Government can't pay the soldier for his blood and the chances taken with his life. But it can help him in re-establishing himself. Could a man re-establish himself in his work, and marry, on the $60 he got when he was discharged?

"The most important reason why the bonus should be given, is that it would enable men to marry who are now putting it off. The best way to preserve Americanism is to rear a generation of Americans, and the men best qualified to do this are our American soldiers. We must not leave to the foreign immigrant the task of supplying the next generation of our people.

"As the American Legion is the great stabilizing force of America today so the Boy Scouts of America must be made the great stablilizing factor of tomorrow.

Scouts Trained to Be Strong.

"The Boy Scouths are trained to be physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

"When we remember that 34 per cent of the men examined in the draft were rejected as physically unfit, we see what a great need there is for physical training. Those who were physically unfit by their own fault were unworthy to have others fight for them. Those who were unfit through neglect of physical training were not real citizens. The boy who fails to make himself physically strong, fit to render his country the service it has a right to demand, is a traitor. Slackers did not disappear with the end of the war; anyone is a slacker who fails to come up to the scouts' motto, and to be physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

"The greatest praise that our soldiers won in France was that they were the straightest morally of all the soldiers that the nations sent there.

"When our division, the Twenty-seventh, and the Thirtieth, which came from Tennessee, North and South Carolina, went to France, we were brigaded with the British. I always have to say, in defense of my own name, that we didn't choose our comrades, they were chosen for us. Well, we found the British soldiers saying, 'Oh, what's the use? We're fed up on the war.'

"We couldn't understand that for the first few days, but we came to see that Gen. Haig was right when he said that his men were fighting with their backs to the wall.

U. S. Brought End When It Came.

"In four months after we landed at St. Nazaire, we had attacked that big German force and hurled it back. I don't claim that America won the war, but America brought the end of the war when it came, and it did so because its soldiers were the kind of men that we are training the Boy Scouts to be.

"The Boy Scouts' training is not a military training primarily, but those who receive it will never be the kind who will hide behind the skirt of a religion, assumed for war purposes only, and declare themselves conscientious objectors.

"It is not pleasant to remember that our War Department kept these men in luxury and comfort, where they never heard a gun fired in anger, and that is sent them home with an honorable discharge, back pay and allowances, the same treatment that was given to the men who had offered their lives.

"I would say to that scum of humanity, 'If America is not good enough for you to fight for, it is not good enough for you to enjoy in time of peace.' We want men, in peace and war, whose ideal of service is 100 per cent. That is what the American Legion stands for today, and it is what the Boy Scouts represent in the America of tomorrow."

Described Fighting in Picardy.

Father Kelley, speaking at Central High School Friday night, described the fighting of Sept. 29, 1918, in Picardy. Dispatches sent from the front, within a week after that fighting, placed Father Kelley's name at the head of a list of recitals of heroism, and related that he went over the top three times with different commands of his division, and came out of the engagement "with his hair white." His hair is not white, but, for a man of 31, the gray hairs are plentiful among the black.

"The One Hundred and Sixth Regiment went in with 3300 men, to attack the Hindenburg line," he said. "It came out Sept. 28 with 619. At 4 a. m. the morning of the 29th, the other three infantry regiments of the Twenty-seventh Division, with three machine gun battalions, went over, under a barrage laid by the Australian artillery. Those splendid Australian gunners in the rear never failed us.

"The Germans dropped a counter-barrage of mustard gas. Man after man, in wet clothing, was scorched from chin to toes, and fell down a living blister, but another would take his place.

"Thirty-seven whippet tanks were ahead of us, to clean out the barbed wire. We saw a flash, a puff of smoke, and one of those tanks was gone. We saw 34 of them put out, and knew that Americans were lying dead inside them. Did that stop our boys? No; they were up and over without waiting.

Wind Spoiled Smoke Screen.

"The wind spoiled our smoke screens, and only the daring of our men protected them. We were crossing a flat valley, the hills to right and left held by the Germans. Enfilading fire swept our ranks, right and left, to the center. Rows of men fell as if the legs were cut from beneath them, and more rows came on in their places.

"One battalion of the One Hundred and Seventh lost communication. Unless it could be reinforced, it would be surrounded and wiped out. A battalion of the One Hundred and Fifth was sent, and in 30 minutes it had established communication with the Fourth British Army and taken 300 prisoners.

"Then came a series of barrages, and our men would advance 15 to 20 yards, and would then be repulsed five or seven yards, but never so far as they had advanced. At 10:30 orders came from the British headquarters that a barrage would be dropped at 11:15, and that the command must advance to its objective, and 'hold it living or occupy it dead.' At 12:50, word was sent back that we had reached the objective and were holding it living.

"The British General kindly sent back word that we could rest the remainder of the day. But our men somehow didn't care to rest in the front line. They sent back word in the language which the War Departments don't recognize, but which they all understand, 'To hell with your rest! Give us a barrage now.'

Got Barrage and New Objective.

"They got their barrage, and they took a new objective, the top of a hill looking down on the Hindenburg line. It was a corkscrew of rings and spirals, strung with barbed wire, not one row of it, but four rows. Behind this barbed wire, concrete machine gun posts, concrete dugouts and concrete snipers' posts.

"At 2:30, under a smoke screen, our men went down the east slope of the hill, and with practically no warning, found themselves in hand-to-hand conflict with the enemy. Under barrages and counter-barrages we reached the foot of the hill at 5:30 then began to climb the next Quinnemont Farm Hill. In the eagerness of this advance, our men left some snipers behind them. They suffered for this in the loss of their comrades, and they were criticised for failure to do their mopping up, but it shows their dash and spirit. About 6, they began climbing the last hill, under a terrific short-range fire. The fire suddenly stopped, and our men became nervous for the first time. But when our scouts reconnoitered, they found the ground cleared to the top of the hill. Our men literally ran up that hill, and as they tried to look through the smoke to see what was on the other side, five British aviators came over us. 'They dropped a message in the front line of the 105th. It said, 'you've got the Germans running like hell, and the Hindenburg line is yours.'

"That night, searching prisoners, we found copies of a proclamation of Von Hindenburg, with general orders for the defense of the line to which, he said, 'we have given our name.' The order continued, 'Though we may never go farther west, the enemy will never come farther east, and when the enemy shall come, on bended knee, to seek terms of peace, we will tell him that peace must be made here, and that this shall henceforth be the western boundary of the German Empire.'

"Well, Von Hindenburg hadn't made the acquaintance of our American boys when he wrote that."

PRIEST MAKES PLEA FOR VIOLATOR OF PROHIBITION LAW

Maker of Wine for Own Use Fined $25 After Pastor Says He Did Not Know Law.

The Rev. J. Komara, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, 1030 Chouteau avenue, appeared in the Federal Court yesterday to plead for leniency for one of his parishioners, charged with violating the prohibition law, by making wine for his own use. The defendant was Joseph Kofviva, of 910 Carroll street.

The priest told Judge Faris that he, himself, did not know until after reading Judge Faris' opinions from the bench, that the law prohibited persons from making wine for their own use. At the time of the offense—last September—he, as well as Kofviva, believed that it was permissable. He added that the prisoner could not read or write, and that two of his children had died of influenza during the winter.

Judge Faris said that the circumstances were in Kofviva's favor. However, he said, it is the duty of persons like the priest, and other leaders in alien communities, to inform others of such laws. He fined Kofviva $25. Friday, in Judge Faris' court, a plea was made in behalf of Edward Ponath, a barber of 5147 Easton avenue, charged with a similar offense, that Ponath was a native born American, and thought he had a right to make his own beer. The Court said then that Ponath's "Americanism" only aggravated his case, as he should have known the law. He fined him $500.

LATE ICE BRIDGE AT NIAGARA

By the Associated Press.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., May 15.—One of the latest ice bridges in many years has formed in the Niagara Gorge from the American Falls to the Maid of the Mist landing on the Canadian side.

The solid formation is due to continued cool weather, a heavy flow of ice from Lake Erie and a steady north wind.

NEW CAR ROUTES GO INTO EFFECT TODAY

Fourth Street and Tower Grove Lines to Make Loop at Fourth and Pine.

The new plan of routing Tower Grove and Fourth street line street cars, recently announced by the United Railways was made effective today.

The Fourth street line did loop on Franklin avenue and the Tower Grove line on Lucas avenue. Under the new routing the farthest north of both lines will be Fourth and Pine streets. The Fourth street car will go westward from that point over the present Tower Grove car route to Grand avenue and Arsenal street. Instead of looping there as previously done, the Fourth cars will proceed north on Grand avenue and will follow the present Fourth street route eastward.

The Tower Grove cars on the westward trip will go south from Fourth and Pine streets to Chouteau avenue, following the present Fourth line route to Grand avenue and Arsenal street, proceeding thence westward over the present Tower Grove route to Clifton Heights,. Eastward the Tower Grove cars will follow their present route.

The purpose of the rerouting is to eliminate the "wye" at Grand avenue and Arsenal street on which the Fourth street cars now turn, impeding traffic. The new plan also removes two car lines from the congested downtown district north of Olive street.

The suit was filed Friday, and when word reached Canty at the Planters Hotel a check for the amount, $1992.82, was sent immediately to the manager of the Hotel Jefferson.

Mrs. Canty resides at the Hotel Jefferson and Canty at the Planters. Canty said that the matter was one of oversight.

Doesn't Hurt a Bit

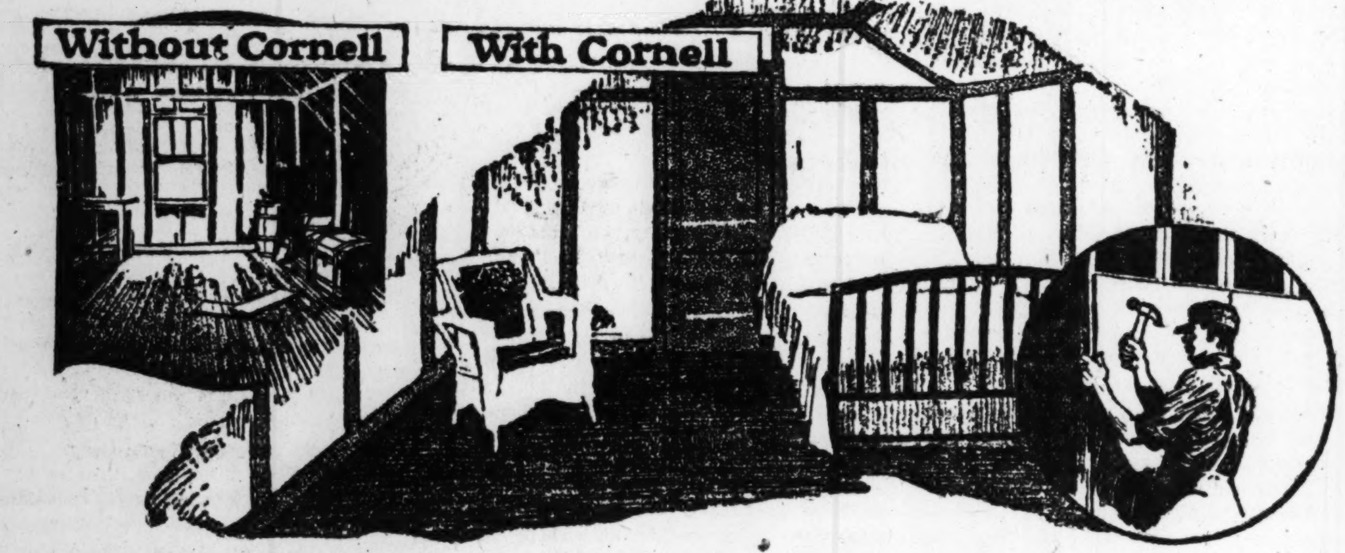
Apply a few drops of "Freezone" upon that old, bothersome corn. Instantly that corn stops hurting. Then shortly you lift it right off, root and all, without pain or soreness.

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between toes, and the hard skin calluses on bottom of feet lift right off—no humbug! Try "Freezone."

"FREEZONE" costs but few cents at drug stores

Cornell-Wood-Board

Triple Sized, Takes the Place of Plaster—for Walls, Ceilings, Partitions, Repairs, Alterations and New Work



Will You Rent Your Attic for $25 Per Month?

In Homes, Stores and Factories—Spare Space Now Pays Big Returns

Living and working quarters are in such demand that thousands of people are finishing up their attics, basements, spare rooms and other waste space with attractive Cornell-Wood-Board walls and ceilings.

When space is as valuable as now, a few dollars spent for Cornell-Wood-Board will pay big returns in rents or added rooms—a guest chamber, nursery, cozy sewing room, den, office or shop. Two comfortable rooms are often obtained from one large room subdivided by a Cornell Partition. This strong, rigid wood-board takes the place of lath and plaster; and it is far more easily applied, and cannot crack, chip or fall.

Triple-Sizing Protects Against Moisture

Cornell is favored by architects, carpenters and builders because its internal and external sizing resists absorption and expansion, especially in damp weather.

Coupled with our pure wood fiber construction it enables us to guarantee that Cornell will not warp, crack, buckle or chip, if our directions are followed.

Experts favor Cornell also because of its mill-primed surface (both sides) which saves you the cost and labor of a priming or sizing cost.

For Small Rooms "Cornell 32"

The 32-inch width is a Cornell feature that produces the most charming panel designs for hallways, small rooms and borders. For large rooms, broad partitions and factory construction requiring wider panels, "Cornell 48" is recommended.

Lumber yards in every city are prepared to supply you—but ask for "Cornell-Wood-Board" by name—for no other wall-board is like it.

If your dealer is out of samples, write direct to us for panel plans, samples and prices.

Cornell Wood Products Company, General Offices, Chicago, Ill.

Our modern mills at Cornell, Wis., and extensive timber lands insure the fulfillment of all guarantees and contracts

EXPRESS EMBARGO AROUSES INTEREST IN TRUCK TOUR

Capacity Loads to Be Carried by 45 Machines Entered for Trip This Week to Cape Girardeau.

The announcement yesterday morning by the American Railway Express Co. of an embargo, until further notice, on all outbound express with only a very few exceptions for preferential shipments, has caused many shippers to look to the Ship-by-Truck tour to handle some of their most urgent shipments to the towns en route.

The officials of the tour had previously arranged for almost capacity loads for most of the 45 trucks which will take part in the tour, but an effort will be made to handle as many of the late consignments as possible.

Almost the entire trip of nearly 400 miles will be over dirt roads and for this reason it was found necessary to limit the size of the trucks entered. This materially reduced the tonnage to be carried. The freight taken, however, will exceed 50 tons.

Three Loads of Print Paper.

Among the consignments are two truck loads of print paper for the Cape Girardeau News and another truck load to the Jackson (Mo.) Cash Book. The International Shoe Co. is sending two truck loads of shoes to Cape Girardeau and intermediate points. One of the largest shipments is 5000 pounds of chicken feed being sent by the Eureka Mills Co. to a southern Missouri dealer.

Both the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and the Firestone Co. are making shipments of tires to their dealers en route. Both of these concerns have entered their own trucks in the tour to carry the shipments. Two truckloads of Budweiser will be sent to Cape Girardeau.

For the return trip, freight approximating 45 tons will be waiting for delivery to Southern Illinois towns when the trucks reach Cape Girardeau Wednesday evening. A large portion of this will be lumber and building materials in small lots to be delivered to the various towns reached on the return trip.

20 Firms Have Routes.

At the present time there are about 20 firms in St. Louis who operate daily over ship-by-truck routes to nearby cities, but none of them undertakes a trip of the length outlined for this tour. Truck transportation out of St. Louis is now confined within a radius of approximately 50 miles. This is due largely to the miserable road conditions which are found in Missouri and Southern Illinois.

In all towns en route, every effort will be made to create enthusiasm in favor of good roads—and especially in the bond issues which the motor trade hopes will be submitted to the voters of Missouri next fall. A number of speakers have volunteered to accompany the trucks. Good roads and ship-by-truck meetings have been arranged in more than 30 towns.

The St. Louis tour is part of a national movement to demonstrate the efficiency of the motor truck for short-haul transportation. During this week similar tours are being held in nearly all of the principal cities of the country. Both Gov. Gardner of Missouri and Gov. Lowden of Illinois recently issued proclamations designating May 17 to 22 as ship-by-truck week in both of these states.

Y. M. C. A. to Open River Camps.

Arrangements were completed yesterday by the Central Y. M. C. A. for an employed boys' camp on the Meramec River, five miles from Eureka, Mo. At a nominal cost working boys will be taken to this camp for week-end vacations during the summer. Another Y. M. C. A. camp on the Meramec near Bourbon, Mo., will be opened June 17 under the direction of Robert M. Frehse. This property is called Camp River Cliff and consists of 60 acres among the foothills of the Ozarks.

PART OF CAR PLANT CLOSES

Freight Congestion Causes 300 Men to Be Laid Off.

Accumulation of finished material in the plant of the American Car Co. at 1518 South Vandeventer avenue resulted in a temporary closing of a portion of the plant yesterday, when only about 150 men were at work in place of the 450 usually employed. Officials said congestion in the railroad yards had shut off material for a brief time and that supplies, anxiously sought by railroads, could not be sent out.

At the offices of the American Car and Foundry Co. it was said that switching operations had been progressing favorably in their East Side yards and that there had been no stoppage of operations.

THE game over—then a quick, sure putt to a long, cold drink of Ward's Orange-Crush! Good? You bet it is!

There are few golf clubs in which Orange-Crush and Lemon-Crush are not the favorites at the "19th hole." Quality, purity and flavor have won this tribute—golfers drink only the best. There is satisfaction in knowing that all the delicious flavor comes from the delicate, fragrant oils pressed from the fresh fruits, purest sugar, and citric acid—the natural acid of oranges and lemons.

MARSHALL WOULD HAVE VOTED 'NO' ON DRY AMENDMENT

Vice President Says, However, He Favors Enforcement of Law, Now That It Has Been Enacted.

SAYS MANY SENATORS DID NOT FAVOR ACT

Believes Lawmakers Should Vote According to Personal Beliefs Without Consulting Wishes of Constituents.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1920.)

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Vice President Thomas R. Marshall has presided over the Senate of the United States for seven years and can therefore be expected to know whereof he speaks when he says that if prohibition had been submitted to secret vote, it would not have gotten 20 votes in the Senate.

The writer asked the Vice President to amplify his statement, which was made originally before the Virginia Bar Association.

"I want it to be understood at the outset," said the Vice President, "that I believe in the enforcement of the constitutional amendment on prohibition. It is here and is the law and should be enforced. But I believe that if the amendment had been voted upon according to the individual convictions of members of the Senate it would not have gotten 20 votes.

"Now I am not imputing motives to anybody. I have never seen any representatives of the brewers or the Anti-Saloon League around Congress and wouldn't know them if they were there. I believe that the men who voted for prohibition and for woman suffrage, for instance, thought the people—a majority of their constituents—wanted these amendments passed. But that isn't my theory of representative government.

Theory of Government.

"As I told the lawyers at Richmond, the people of this country didn't intend, in my judgment, that their representatives should be guided by their constituents, but that elected representatives should act for them. I don't think when people hire a lawyer that they should ask him to do what they want. Advice should not come from the client to the lawyer, but from the lawyer to the client. If the client doesn't like the advice he can get another lawyer.

"That's the same with representative Government. The people, in my opinion, should trust their representatives to act for them. If they don't like what their representatives do, they can select others and thus repudiate what has been done."

"Then if you had been a member of the Senate, you would have voted against the prohibition amendment?" the Vice-President was asked.

"Oh, yes," was the reply—"And my views have been well known. Mind you, I do not use liquor; never serve it at my table and I would to God that no else did. But I object to the way prohibition has been imposed, though again, I must insist, now that it is here, that it must be enforced.

"As a matter of fact, irrespective of the question of personal habits, members of the Senate whose views about the police powers of the several States coincide with my own, surrendered their opinions when they voted simply because they thought it was the wish of the people of their States. That isn't leadership nor representative Government in my conception of the term.

Lawyers Losing Influence.

"Indeed, lawyers, like statesmen, are losing their influence because they are not telling their clients what is the law and what should be done. Instead, lawyers nowadays are listening to boards of directors and trying to accomplish what these boards want done—often against the best judgment of the lawyers themselves."

The Vice-President was indorsed by the Virginia Bar Association for the presidency—a compliment of the occasion, no doubt, for Mr. Marshall isn't a candidate, active, passive, receptive, or even interested. Maybe if he were he wouldn't express himself so frankly.

"Y" SCHOLARSHIP FUND HERE INCREASED $6000

War Work Council So Far This Year Has Allowed $19,325 to St. Louis for Education.

The War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. yesterday granted St. Louis an additional $6000 as a fund to provide former soldiers, sailors and marines scholarships in any school they may choose. This brings the total scholarship fund awarded to St. Louis by the "Y" to $19,325, not including $3220 for collegiate scholarships.

Already 203 former service men in St. Louis have taken advantage of these "Y" scholarships. Fifty St. Louis boys have been awarded collegiate scholarships and 136 former soldiers are taking courses at Central Y. M. C. A. under the provisions of the awards.

The automobile school at the Central Y. M. C. A. is now the largest in St. Louis and one of the largest in the United States. Forty-two courses of study were given during the last year at Central "Y" with a total attendance of 51,870. This year new attendance records are being set in every branch of the school.

Application for scholarships will be received at any Y. M. C. A. in the city or at the general offices, 1873 Railway Exchange Building. Any honorably discharged service man is eligible to scholarship.

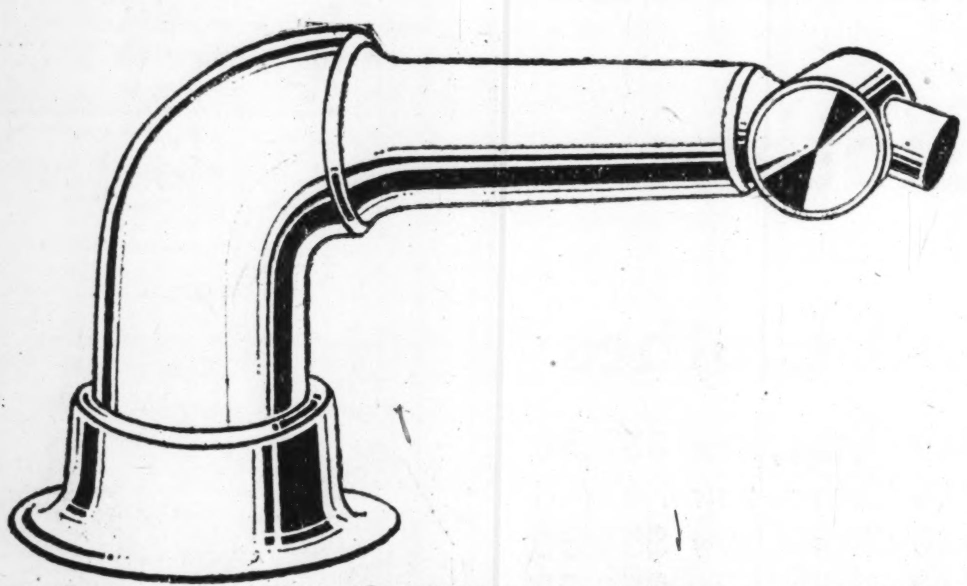
THE INSTRUMENT OF QUALITY

Sonora

CLEAR AS A BELL

The Highest Class Talking Machine in the World

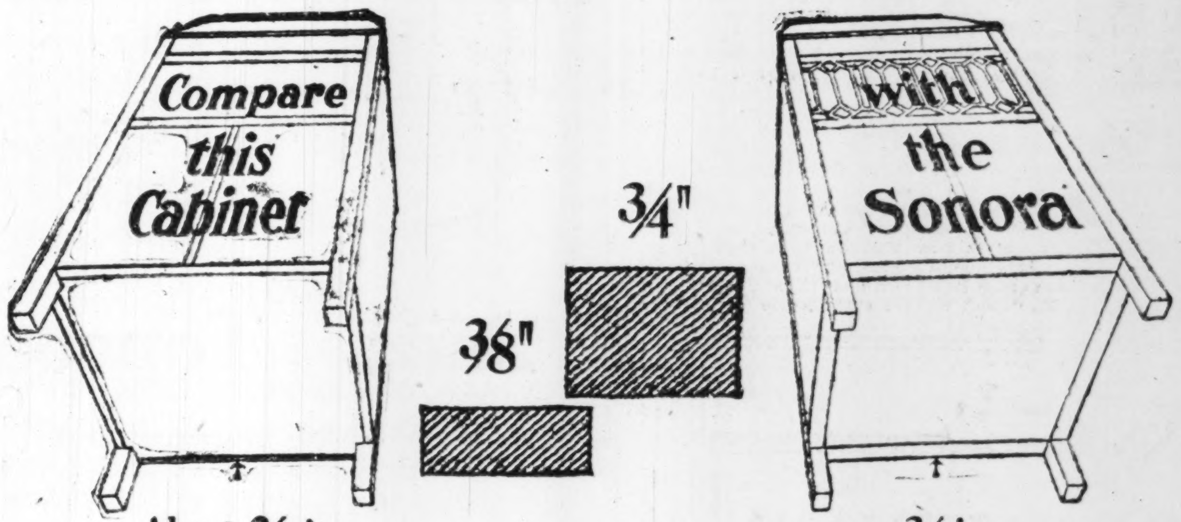
FIND out what the TONE ARM of the phonograph offered to you is made of. Sonora's TONE ARM is ALL BRASS (like a cornet) because ALL BRASS gives a matchless tonal quality.



The Sonora TONE ARM is ALL BRASS drawn to shape by enormous hydraulic pressure. ALL BRASS costs us more but gives you a superb tone. Be sure you get an ALL BRASS TONE ARM and not a cheap zinc-lead-tin casting.

IN most phonographs—other than Sonora—zinc-lead-tin castings (which are much cheaper than ALL BRASS) are used for tone arms.

Tone arms made of such castings are porous and brittle. They give an inferior tone. You want ALL BRASS and not a zinc-lead-tin casting for a tone arm.



About 3/8 in. 3/4 in.

Before you buy find out the thickness of wood in the cabinet. Don't be deceived by pieces added to the bottom to hide flimsy construction.

AS another typical instance of superiority, study the Sonora cabinet. It is of the finest workmanship and no expense is spared to produce the very best quality.

The wood is 3/4" thick. Some manufacturers consider wood 3/8" thick to be sufficient, but the makers of Sonora don't.

SULPHUR CLEARS ROUGH, RED SKIN

Face, Neck and Arms Easily Made Smooth, Says Specialist.

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching, eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

COCOANUT OIL FINE FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

RECEIVER TO TAKE CARMEN'S DEMAND TO U. S. COURT

Agrees to Ask Permission to Submit Matter to State Public Service Commission for Arbitration.

The Receiver of the United Railways yesterday agreed to the proposal of the Street Car Men's Union that the demand of the men for increased wages and improved working conditions be submitted to the State Public Service Commission as a Board of Arbitration. He had previously replied to the suggestion with a request that the men withdraw their requests at this time.

A letter to President Nelson of the union yesterday stated that the receiver would ask permission of the United States District Court to refer the demands. In his previous request for withdrawal of the demands, which was refused by the men, the receiver stated that granting of the demands would mean a 10-cent street car fare in St. Louis and that the granting of any increase would result in a correspondingly higher fare.

The men replied with a statement of their belief that the public of St. Louis would not oppose any increase in fare necessary to give the street car men a living wage.

The demands of the men are for a pay schedule of 75, 80 and 85 cents an hour, according to the length of employment, to replace the present schedule of 50, 55 and 60 cents an hour. Nearly all employes are paid at the highest rate.

The present rate was established last year by the Public Service Commission, acting as a Board of Arbitration. It was immediately followed by an application for increased fare by the company, which then had a 6-cent fare. This was granted and an 8-cent base fare established. That rate was found to yield greater than the needed revenue to pay the wage advances and the commission recently reduced the fare to flat 7 cents.

A further demand of the men at this time is for improvement of working conditions. The agreement in force provides for an eight-hour day, but the hours of many of the men are divided between the morning and evening rush hours. The demand is now that all runs shall be continuous eight-hour runs and that men working less than eight hours shall receive eight hours pay.

A LIFELONG CURE FOR PILES

Persons who are afflicted with Piles are in constant misery. There is especial danger in such diseases, as you are liable to get Cancer of the Bowels or Consumption.

Piles make a person dread the time when the bowels must move, as it is always accompanied by the most excruciating pain.

Years ago it was supposed that the only Cure for Piles was to have them cut out. That cure, however, was more painful and dangerous than the disease and many people preferred to suffer along with it.

DR. HENRICH'S PILE TREATMENT

has demonstrated that the Surgical Operation for Piles is a thing of the past, because the knife nor scissors never did and never will cure Piles permanently. "The Henrich Cure is Safe and Sure"—that's what hundreds of men and women know that have tried and been cured by this Mild Medical Method.

Dr. Henrich's Pile Treatment is effective in all varieties of Piles—Itching Piles, Bleeding Piles, Protruding Piles and Blind Piles. It acts promptly and the Cure is for Life.

CONSULTATION AND EXAMINATION FREE

Every day, except Thursday afternoon, in the Scott Building, from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Call at once, as delays are dangerous.

Read what Mr. John J. Schmidt, Cashier of The American Bank, of De Soto, Mo., says about Dr. Henrich's wonderful treatment:—

De Soto, Mo., Oct. 28, 1915.

W. P. Henrich, Ph. G., M. D.

Dear Doctor:—I take great pleasure to report to you that I am entirely cured of my Piles of 20 years' standing. I cannot thank you enough for advising me to take your wonderful treatment which I did in preference to that of others who use the knife and chloroform.

There is absolutely no cure in medicines or salves. I tried all I read or heard of, only to get a little relief and be worse after a few days. Your charges are very reasonable for such a life cure. I advise every Pile sufferer to take your Pile treatment at once, to be healthy and happy.

Thanking you again and wishing you much success in your specialty, I am

Very truly yours,
JOHN J. SCHMIDT.

WILLARD SPEAKS ON ROADS' NEED OF RATE INCREASE

Tells C. of C. Proposed 30 Per Cent Advance Will Leave Charges Relatively Lower Than Ever.

LINES SHORT 100,000 CARS, 2000 ENGINES

Believes Transportation Act Will Stabilize Railroad Investments and Make Them Attractive Eventually.

Even though railroad freight rates are increased 30 per cent as desired by the roads, they will be lower than the freight rates of any other country in the world and will be relatively lower than ever before in the United States, according to Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio, who spoke yesterday before the Chamber of Commerce at the Planters Hotel on the need of the roads for increased revenue.

"By that statement," he said, "I mean this: Never before could a workman, by the expenditure of one day's wage, ride as far upon a passenger train as he can at the present time. Never before would a ton of coal, a bale of cotton, a ton of steel, or a bushel of wheat buy as much transportation as it will today or as it will buy when the rates are raised, if they are raised, as we suggest."

Willard took, for purposes of his discussion, figures for the roads of the Eastern territory, which is that territory east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers.

Gives Railroad Figures

He further took, to show the railroads' present plight, figures on operating income and operating ratio, commonly accepted as true barometers of the prosperity of any corporation.

"The railroads in the eastern territory during the last full year of Government operation yielded a net operating income of $182,000,000 from gross earnings of more than $2,570,000,000, which was an operating ratio of 88 per cent," he said. "For the 10 years prior to the war the operating ratio of the Eastern region roads was about 68 per cent. It was 74 per cent in 1917. Good business in any industry demands that the operating ratio shall not exceed 75 per cent. On the basis of last year's business, the eastern roads now need about $544,000,000 increase in revenue to establish an operating ratio of 75 per cent, which is about the sum of the increase now being asked.

"Now that amount of increase represents about 21 per cent of the gross earnings of the carriers during that period. The railroad managers, however, have not asked for any increase in passenger rates and hence it will be required to advance freight rates about 30 per cent to obtain the desired sum."

Willard then touched upon the lack of equipment and the poor physical condition of the railroads as the result of reduction of normal upkeep during the war period. "It was customary for the railroads, before Federal control," he said, "to buy something more than 100,000 new freight cars, from 2000 to 3000 locomotives and from 2000 to 4000 passenger cars. During Federal control, lasting 26 months, the Government bought only 100,000 freight cars, 2000 locomotives and no coaches. They bought less in a 26-month period than the railroads themselves had been in the habit of buying in a 12-month period. On a conservative estimate those roads today are short at least 100,000 freight cars, 2000 locomotives and from 4000 to 5000 coaches, and nothing adequate yet has been done to remedy that shortage."

7½ Per Cent Interest.

Willard here took up the difficulty of railroad financing, stating that the railroads were being asked to pay 6, 7 and 8 per cent for money with which to refund bonds now bearing only 3½ per cent interest. "Interest rates are just as much a part of transportation cost," he said, "as are wages or the price paid for a locomotive. The Pennsylvania Railroad, one of the strongest corporations in the world, with an unbroken dividend record of more than 50 years, recently was forced to pay 7½ per cent for money. Yet I recently saw in a bank window in Pittsburg that securities of the Canadian Pacific Railroad were being offered for sale to yield 6 5-8 per cent. That means that the Canadian Pacific can borrow money cheaper in the United States than can the railroads of the United States.

"If we are to have private operation of railroads in the United States, you should have it on a sound economic basis or not at all. Private operation will fail unless the railroads can obtain on a favorable basis each year at least $1,000,000,000 of new capital for equipment, improvements and extensions. This can only be accomplished by well-established credit.

"I believe that the transportation act will accomplish what I have in mind. Some believe that the limitation on railroad earnings are so narrow that railroad securities will not be an attractive investment. I do not share that belief. I believe that effect of the law will be to stabilize railroad investments and when we finally get adjusted, railway securities will be more attractive than ever before. If I am mistaken, the law ought to be changed.

Says Business Can Stand It.

"Now about the rates themselves. It has been stated that business cannot stand the burden of higher rates. I do not believe that statement. The accounts of the railroads show that their operating expenses have increased 100 per cent in the last three years, while their gross revenue has increased only 36 per cent. I do not believe that the increases asked are too high. But if they are, no serious harm could follow, because the transportation act places certain restrictions on excess earnings.

"The case is one where the high cost of living to the railroad is exactly the same problem as it is to the individual. It is to your interest that it be dealt with in a fair and prompt way."

POLITICIANS IN DARK AS TO FARRINGTON'S PLANS

Judge Surveys Situation Here, Will Decide Soon Whether to Run for Senate.

Judge John S. Farrington of the Springfield Court of Appeals departed at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon for his home in Springfield after a survey for a day and a half of the political situation in St. Louis in an effort to reach a decision as to whether he would become a candidate against Breckinridge Long for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

He told friends shortly before his departure that he would reach a decision before Tuesday.

Political friends of Farrington, with whom he discussed the situation in detail Friday night, were then of the opinion that he would be a candidate. These same friends were convinced after talking with him yesterday that he would not be a candidate.

Meantime, Thomas H. Fisher, manager of the Long campaign, had made public a letter written by Farrington to Long Jan. 29 last, in which Farrington pledged his support to Long, and expressed a willingness to do anything he could to aid him in his campaign. There also had come into circulation reports that the Long organization was preparing to open up a fight on the Gardner administration and Ben M. Neale, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, who are charged by some of Long's supporters with being the principal influences urging Farrington to oppose Long.

Admits Writing Letter.

Farrington admitted having written the letter. He added, however: "That was quite a while ago, nad before the thought of becoming a candidate myself had ever occurred to me."

The seeming determination of some of the Democrats connected with the State organization to bring out a candidate against Long is reported to be arousing the ire of the Long supporters to an extent that they are about ready to begin issuing statements about the State organization, and it is threatening to start a factional fight within the State committee. Six of the members of Long's campaign committee are members of the Democratic State Committee.

It has been common knowledge among politicians for several months that Neale, and some other active Democrats were not satisfied to have Long head the Democratic ticket in the November election because they did not believe he would add strength to it. From this sentiment grew the possible candidacy of Farrington.

While it does not appear that Neale or Gov. Gardner has taken any open personal part in bringing out opposition to Long, the Long supporters are charging the activity up to Neale principally and to Gardner through the fact that some of his appointees have been more or less active.

Basis for Neale Connection.

The basis for the Neale connection appears to be largely that he is the clerk of the Springfield Court of Appeals, of which Farrington is a member, and that if Farrington should resign to become a candidate for Senator, Neale might be in line for the appointment as Judge. This is a rumor which has been going the rounds of politicians, though without any element of confirmation.

Fisher refused to discuss the possible candidacy of Farrington further than a brief formal statement, in which he said that Farrington declined to become a candidate for the nomination for Governor several months ago because it would mean that he would have to resign as Judge, creating a vacancy which must be filled by election in a district which normally is Republican.

The term of one of the other Judges expires this year and Farrington's resignation would mean the election of two Judges. Democrats fear that two Republicans would be elected and that thus two of the three Judges would be Republicans.

Fisher said he thought the reasoning Farrington used regarding the governorship, for which there are five candidates, would apply equally as to the senatorship, for which there is only one.

However, Farrington made no announcement of his intentions before departing for Springfield. The opinion generally expressed by those who talked with him was that he would not be a candidate.

This does not necessarily mean that Long will be unopposed, however. Willard D. Vandiver, United States Subtreasurer, is still a possibility. Vandiver said yesterday afternoon that "there were several good Democrats who might consider entering the race," and that "they would not have to reach a decision before June 4, the last day for filing."

CHICAGO FOOD DIRECTOR PREPARES MEALS FOR 29 CENTS

Takes Role of Restaurant Keeper to Prove Soup and Roast Beef Prices Are Too High.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 15.—Russell J. Poole, Chicago food director, took the role of restaurant man today to prove that prices of 15 cents for soup and 40 cents for roast beef are more than they ought to be. Members of the Council Cost of Living Committee were his guests at luncheon.

"This meal costs 29 cents per man," he announced, passing up a platter full of potatoes.

"How much for the roast beef," asked an alderman, helping himself.

"Thirteen cents per man," was the response.

"In a restaurant it would cost you anywhere from 40 cents to $1.50. This pea soup is thicker than you get in a restaurant. It costs 6 cents a bowl. Potatoes cost 4 cents a portion, tomatoes 3 cents and bread and butter 3 cents."

"Of course," he added, "the restaurant overhead costs must be figured but even at that there is no reason why a piece of roast beef should cost from 40 cents to $1.50."

UNION ELECTRIC TO PAY MORE FOR POWER

Higher Rate to Public Because of $277,777 Increase to Keokuk Dam Not Planned.

A petition by the Union Electric Light & Power Co. for permission to pay the Mississippi River Power Co. $277,777 a year more than it now pays for water power received from the Keokuk dam, was approved yesterday by the Public Service Commission. The new rate is made effective for 10 years, beginning Aug. 1, 1919. The annual payment of the Union Company under it will be increased from $1,078,200 to $1,355,977.

"No application for increased rates because of this added expenditure for power by the Union Company is contemplated," President Egan said yesterday. "The contract of the Union Company with dam company provides, as is known, for a readjustment of the charge for water power at stated intervals and that the readjustment shall be upon the basis of the prevailing price of Illinois coal. The dam company invoked this clause for the first time last August. The Union Company refused a readjustment upon this basis, though informed, it appeared competently, that the demand could be enforced. We made a counter proposal. We determined from sworn statements of the dam company to the Illinois Public Service Commission, the actual expenditures in the construction of the Keokuk dam and prepared an offer to the Keokuk company, which, it appeared, would give a fair return on the actual cost of construction. That offer was the figure approved by the Public Service Commission."

It was stated in hearings before the Public Service Commission that, if the coal clause was enforced, the added cost of Keokuk power at this time would be approximately $865,500 a year.

The United Railways, which is a consumer of water power obtained through the Union company, was apportioned a share of the increased cost, the Commission ordering that it pay $758,633 a year to the Union company instead of $618,750.

The contracts under which the United Railways now obtains this power are attacked in the Seaman suit, which resulted in the present receivership. They are declared to be inquitous in that they yielded excessive profit to a middle company controlled by the North American Co., which also controlled the railways and thus were for the benefit, not of the railways, but of the North American Co.

ARTISTIC TRUTH COSTS CARTOONIST $1500

Creator of "Penny Ante" Testifies He Loses Playing Poker to Get "Local Color."

Jean Knott's artistic conscience costs him one-tenth of his income, he testified yesterday in the Circuit Court at Clayton. In order to obtain humor, atmosphere and color for his comic serial, "Penny Ante," he explained, he finds it necessary to play poker. But he is such a poor player, continued he, that his devotion to realism costs him "large sums."

"If you played penny ante 10,000 years you couldn't lose $100 commented an attorney for Mrs. Elizabeth E. Knott, who is suing the creator of "Let the Wedding Bells Ring Out" for divorce, and asking for an allowance of $400 a month and $1000 for lawyer's fees.

"I lost $1500 in the last 12 months," protested the cartoonist who admitted that his salary is $15,000 a year from a New York syndicate. He declared that, counting his poker loses and other expense, his net income is not more than $6000 a year.

Studio Costs $1200 a Year.

"I have to keep up a studio," he asserted, "and that costs me $1250 a year. I have to maintain my own living quarters, as my wife invited me to leave the house. I have to make six trips a year to New York, which cost me $2000. I am allowed only $200 expenses for two of these trips. I hire an assistant at $20 a week, and spend $300 a year on telegraph tolls. My insurance is $900 a year."

In response to a question from Mrs. Knott's attorney, the cartoonist denied that he had $10,000 worth of liquor stored in the cellar of his mother's house. "It's only $400 worth," he said, "and it's in my own apartment. All I've got in the bank is $500. I was so hard up I had to sell my automobile. I sold it to a friend, and agreed to keep up the insurance if he would let me use it sometimes."

Pays Rent for Wife.

He said he thought $100 a month for his wife would be sufficient, as he pays $85 a month rent for the seven-room apartment at 6300 Enright avenue, where Mrs. Knott and their child live, and also pays the grocery bills. He exhibited canceled checks to prove the last.

The household expenses, he said, were too high when he lived at home. He was asked whether the servant girl didn't quit, and said "yes."

"Yes, but not with me," exclaimed the cartoonist.

Mrs. Knott testified that her husband failed to pay household bills, cut off her credit at the stores, and refused to allow her more than $100 or $150 a month, despite his salary and "other resources." Knott declared he had no other means of income, as the terms of his contract with the New York syndicate forbid him to do outside work. Judge McIlhinney took the suit under advisement.

KIDNAPED JEWEL OF A SERVANT'A DIPLOMAT

Preserves Silence While Woman Who Loses Her Appeals in Vain to Prosecutor.

The question is, will Carrie Schwartz, jewel of a housegirl, stay put? Mrs. William F. Pettker, 446 Dover place, who has her, thinks she will. Mrs. Paul L. Estel, 2033 South Second street, who lost her, hopes she won't. And Carrie? Well, Carrie is nothing if not diplomatic. "Ich weiss nicht," says Carrie.

Mrs. Estel has asked the prosecuting attorney to help her get Carrie back, but it seems like the statutes are not very clear in respect to the carrying away of Carrie by Mrs. Pettker while Mrs. Estel was not looking.

Statutes aside, the case turns, by consent of the contenders, on the question whether Carrie worked first for the Pettker relationship or the Estel connection. Mrs. Pettker says Carrie worked first for her Aunt Emily Schmoll. Mrs. Estel says she worked first for her mother. And Carrie? "Ich weiss nicht," says Carrie.

Noted for Her Flapjacks.

For the last three years Carrie has been making her justly celebrated flapjacks for Mr. Estel, who likes flapjacks. For four years before that she made French toast for Aunt Emily Schmoll, who is fond of French toast. When Mrs. Pettker, not long ago, decided that she needed a housegirl, her Aunt Emily suggested Carrie. Mrs. Pettker went to see her. The interview was in the presence of Mrs. Estel. It was an unhappy half hour for Carrie. It grieved her that she could not work for both. As it was, she just couldn't decide. She would let Mrs. Pettker know. After Mrs. Pettker left Mrs. Estel called up Mrs. Schmoll and said that Carrie had decided thta she didn't want to change.

Estes drove to the country last Sunday, leaving Carrie to watch the place. Mrs. Pettker and her sister, Mrs. Verne Lacy, 7009 Michigan avenue, wife of an Assistant Circuit Attorney, drove down in Mrs. Pettker's limousine, taking along a green checked suit and a hat. They told her how much nicer it was in Dover place and Carrie said she was willing to go, but she hated to leave while the Estels were away. But they got her to change into the green checked dress and hat and led her to the limousine.

Neighbor Remained Neutral.

Mrs. Cornelius Ragan, who lives near, wanted to know what they were doing with Carrie. Mrs. Pettker said they were taking her for a ride and wanted to leave the Estel's key with Mrs. Ragan, but Ragan, from the upstairs window, advised her not to get mixed up with it and they drove away with Carrie and the key.

A few hours later Pettker and Assistant Circuit Attorney Lacy drove back and gave the key to the policeman on the beat. Lacy wrote on his card: "The policeman on the beat has your door key," and shoved it under the door.

When the Estels came home the neighborhood was all astir over the "kidnaping." The neighbors told them Carrie had been carried off. The policeman gave them the key. Estel said things. Mrs. Estel wept. Thursday they asked Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Wilson to do something about it.

"Allowed" Her Money.

Mrs. Pettker says she is going to pay Carrie $20 a month and keep her always. Mrs. Estel says she didn't pay Carrie wages, but "allowed" her money whenever she wanted it. She thinks Carrie will be back in a week or two.

Carrie's trunk and her bank book are still at Estel's. The latter calls for $435. Mrs. Estel says Carrie saved it from the wages she received from her mother. Mrs. Pettker says Carrie saved that $435 from the wages Aunt Emily paid her, Carrie won't tell.

Carrie was starting out with the Pettker infant for an airing when a Post-Dispatch reporter called. She said she liked her new place very well. Did she like it better than her other place? Carried shrugged her shoulders and smiled.

"Ich weiss nicht," she said.

Lincoln Eyre Articles in Pamphlet.

For the first time since the end of the war, November, 1918, a correspondent has succeeded in thoroughly investigating the conditions in Russia and the results of Bolshevism. Lincoln Eyre, the Paris correspondent of the New York World and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, entered Russia last November. He spent three months studying the results of the rule of Lenine and Trotzky. Mr. Eyre has seen Russia from the inside and has witnessed all the workings of the "Red" regime. He approached his task with an impartial mind and his conclusions may be relied upon as giving a true picture of the Russia of today.

Special articles from Mr. Eyre, printed in the Post-Dispatch, have been grouped and issued in pamphlet form. Any reader of the Post-Dispatch who is interested in the subject may have a copy if he will send his name and address, together with 3 cents in postage stamps to cover cost of mailing. CORN CONTINUES RISE ON RAIL CONGESTION

Export Call for Foodstuffs Also Bull Factor During the Week.

Despite some hesitancy at times, the extraordinary upward sweep of prices in the corn market has continued this week. Railway traffic difficulties were largely responsible, and so, too, was active export call for breadstuffs.

Persistent embarrassment met in obtaining corn at leading terminal markets, available for immediate use focussed the attention of traders almost continually on questions of transportation. Hopes of a gradual betterment of supplies were roused by orders on several Western roads that preference be given to grain loading, but the congestion failed to yield, and pessimism as to the outlook was voiced by one of the most prominent railway officials in the country. Action of the Canadian Wheat Board in hoisting the price of Canadian wheat 35c to 40c a bushel counted as a decided further bullish factor in the corn market, and put special emphasis on subsequent urgent European demand for wheat and flour from the United States.

Oats were weakened by Canadian competition and by weather likely to promote growth.

Provisions sympathized with the advance of corn.

In the cash grain market spot wheat was 2c higher and corn 1c to to 2c higher. Spot oats were ½c to 1c higher. Following are sales quotations: No. 2 red winter wheat, $3.10; No. 3 red winter $307@3.09; No. 2 corn, $2.12; No. 6, $2.04; No. 2 yellow, $2.16; No. 3 yellow, $2.14; No. 6 yellow, $2.03; sample yellow, $2.02; No. 4 white, $2.08; No. 2 white oats, $1.17; No 3 white, $1.17; No. 2, $1.15.

CORN UP IN CHICAGO, WITH EXPORTERS BIDDING FOR WHEAT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 15.—Corn rose today to new high-price records for the season, but failed to hold well. Much of the strength came from wheat, which was in great demand to ship to Europe. On the other hand, possibility of a rail strike settlement early next week was an evident bearish factor toward the last. The market closed nervous, at ¼c to ⅛c net advance, with July $1.78¼ to $1.78⅜ and September $1.64⅝ to $1.64¾. Oats finished ¼c down to ⅝c up, and provisions ⅛c to 30c.

With exporters hoisting their bids for wheat, it did not take long for the corn market to ascend, in sympathy, and during the first half of the day the majority of traders acted as if there was little chance of any immediate relief for the scantiness of grain supplies at terminals. Later, however, belief expressed by a prominent dealer that the Federal Government conference here Monday would result in a wind-up of the switchmen's strike led to considerable selling on the part of the holders and to a sharp reaction from top prices. It was also said that 20,000 cars would be sent from the East to handle grain.

Oats were governed mainly by corn.

IRREGULAR TRADE IN LIVESTOCK PAST WEEK

COMPARATIVE LIVESTOCK RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle, calves	16,979	15,714	20,177
Hogs	64,216	82,858	81,980
Sheep	5,811	7,359	11,230
Horses, mules	890	1,639	1,608
Totals	87,896	100,570	114,995

While ther was no erratic fluctuations in the trade in cattle at the St. Louis market the past week, the trade was, nevertheless, inclined toward irregularity a greater part of the session, tendency being slightly lower in some instances. The close of the session found bulk of the killing cattle steady to 25c lower, while stockers and feeders revealed a generally steady tone.

Steers on the native side were in moderate showing, although in the quarantine division receipts were the largest of the season, the week's supply embracing over 4000 South Texas steers. Bulk of the quarantine beeves cleared at $10.75@11.10 per cwt., or 25c under close of last week. Native steers sold at $11@12.25 on bulk and finished steady to 25c lower. Top on native cattle was $13.50 for two loads of beeves averaging 1397 lbs.

Butcher yearlings sold off 25c on bulk, exceptions holding steady. Fat cows held steady a greater part of the week and enjoyed fair action. Late Thursday, however, trade slumped 25c in many instances. There was no change to canners and cutters. Bulls, both beef and bologna types, lost the activity manifested the previous week and sold off 25@50c.

Stocker and feeder cattle were again in light supply throughout the session and displayed no material change in values. Veal calves held up well throughout the week, finishing strong. Top to outsiders went up to $14, good to choice veals selling largely from $13@13.50 and fair to good lights bringing from $12.50@13.

Hog Receipts Light.

Movement of hogs to market attained only moderate proportions the past week, supply totalling only 65,000 head or a drop of about 30,000 from normal. Because of the narrow spread between St. Louis prices and those prevailing at the principal eastern points, there was very little shipping trade, as eastern firms prefered to buy their hogs nearer home. Packer buying was the principal life of the trade. Light hogs show a decline of 40 to 50 cents for the week, with 230 to 260-pound hogs about steady and heavies 25 to 50 cents higher. Bulk of light hogs sold from $14.75@14.85 on the close as against a range of $14.25@14.25 a week ago. The top in the final session at $15.00 compares with a $15.40 high mark last Saturday. Medium to strong weights averaging 230 to 260 sold from $14.25@14.60 and heavies from $13.50@14.00. Pigs declined sharply late in the week and are selling from $14.25 down some real light weights bringing $9.00@10.00. Roughs are about steady with the bulk from $11.50@12.00.

Sheep Price Decline.

Although receipts experienced about a 50 per cent cut at the sheep house, this fact did not halt the downhill movement that started a week or ten days ago and has carried prices to the lowest point in several weeks. Clipped lambs close 50@75c lower with the top at $17.50, while fat clipped ewes are selling from $10.50@11.00 or $2.50 lower than two weeks ago. Spring lambs have shown little change, buyers being pretty eager for this class with the result that steady prices were maintained and the best continue to sell around $20.00. Canners sell from $3.00@5.00 and choppers and bucks from $7.00@8.50.

Horse Market Strong.

On a comparatively light run, horse trade at the St. Louis market the past week showed a slightly stronger trend on the larger types. Receipts were kept down to a small total by shippers, the latter being reluctant to overload the market while shipping facilities were still restricted.

Slight improvement in railroad transportation service has resulted in the past few days, the embargo against shipments of horses to the East being lifted in several instances. Freight service is also considerably improved to the East and other lines are operating close to normal, it is said.

The South came in for a fair number of chunks and loggers the past week and demand also existed from the East for heavy horses and Pennsylvania types. Small southerners were in rather narrow outlet and trade on such was weak.

Market continues here for cavalry horses, both American and Cuban types being in demand.

Mules Extremely Dull.

An unusually slow mule trade got under way here the past week and although supplies were not large in volume, sellers had considerable difficulty in moving supplies. A few of the extra big mules were in request, but small, thin stock found practically no outlet, such kinds being held over in many instances throughout the week. Local dealers here experienced some difficulty in obtaining feed supplies because of the strike and for this reason were reluctant to buy from the commission department anything other than was actually needed for immediate orders.

CURB MARKET FIRM, WITH LARGER DEALINGS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 15.—There was a better feeling on the curb market today in sympathy with the firmer tendency displayed on the Stock Exchange. Dealings were somewhat larger than heretofore in the last week and inside interests were inclined to take a more active part in the transactions. Although some houses reported slightly better outside demand it was the general impression that the major part of the buying was covering of shorts. Some traders who have been bearish for a week or more were purchasers of several of the leading issues.

Indian Packing was an exception to the general trend, being in free supply and dropping to a new low record of 7¼, with a feeble later rally on short covering.

American Woolen rights were a shade higher and fractional advances were made in many other issues, including Retail Candy, United States Steamship and Aetna Explosives. The oil shares generally were higher.

DIVERGENT VIEWS HELD ABROAD ON MONEY OUTLOOK

Special Dispatch to the New York Evening Post and St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 14.—There is sharp divergence of opinion here regarding future monetary developments. Some are urging that if trade demands for accommodation continue on the present scale, still higher money rates with heavy borrowing from the Bank of England are inevitable.

Other quarters, however, take the view that the climax of prices and trade activity have been reached and believe outstanding feature this autumn will be lower prices and unemployment. The immediate prospects, therefore, are cheerless in either direction for labor is in a truculent mood and already the rise in the cost of production and of living is insured by the rise in the price of coal, which nevertheless will be followed by fresh wage demands.

Atmosphere Uncomfortable.

Apprehension of these possibilities and in addition the recently established higher level of money are occasioning liquidation of stocks, thus confirming those who always asserted that speculative activities were considerable in volume. Capital is assailed at every point. Labor is increasing its demands daily. Government is taking its toll in excess profits duties and threatens a levy on "war wealth" while those conducting the housing bond campaign, which is on a financially unsound basis are threatening a housing loan and rationing of houses if the public response is not satisfactory. Altogether, this creates an uncomfortable atmosphere.

There is considerable anxiety also over your position. Even under favorable circumstances it was believed that you would experience a severe strain in the approaching autumn, and it is feared that this may be aggravated by the presidential election.

French Position Better.

At a banker's dinner this week the Chancellor of the Exchequer made a great point of the Government's earnest endeavor to provide for the early redemption of our foreign debt including that owed in America. The Governor of the bank plainly suggested that Britain should show much indulgence concerning the indebtedness of our allies to us, on condition that such allies put their financial houses in order.

The rally in French exchange is due partly to speculative operations, but also to some genuine improvement in the French position. French national revenue in April showed an increase of 59 per cent over the estimates, the previous increases for January, February and March having been 41 per cent 37 and 44 respectively.

REPORTS OF RAINS BRING FIRMNESS IN COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, May 15.—Reports of excessive rains in parts of Texas and Oklahoma with unseasonably low night temperatures in the belt led to renewed firmness in the cotton market during today's early trading. The opening was firm at unchanged prices to an advance of 28 points, near months being relatively easy under scattering liquidation which seemed to come largely from the South. They soon firmed up with the new crop positions, however, and active months sold some 20 to 30 points above last night's closing figures, with July selling at 38.37 and October at 36.18. New Orleans was relatively firm at the start and sent buying orders here, while there was some further Liverpool buying of July.

The early advance carried October contracts about 53 points above the low level of yesterday and attracted scattered realizing for over the week-end. Later fluctuations were irregular in consequence, but there was no improvement in the crop news and the market closed steady at a net advance of 12 to 35 points.

Cotton futures closed steady: May, 40.60c; July, 38.26c; October, 36.11c; December, 35.15; January, 34.54c.

Spot cotton steady; middling, 41.60c.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 15.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"Wall Street impressions concerning a movement in the markets—especially when that movement has been one of liquidation and falling prices—pass from one phase into another with great rapidity. One week, all the discussion will be as to when the 'reaction' in stocks will have run its course and the advance be resumed. The next week, every one will be asking whether the market has not started on a long decline, whose scope nobody can predict. A week later, Wall Street begins to believe that the stock market has pretty much completed its liquidation, but is so far from being cheered up by that belief that it talks of nothing but the impending reaction and calamity which was foreshadowed in other markets and other industries by the fall on the Stock Exchange, and which is now about to begin.

"The truth is, however, that all this series of inferences and conclusions was plainly indicated months ago by the action of the money market, where the conditions which are behind the whole turn of events in and out of Wall Street were first reflected.

Compared With 1903.

"Many comparisons have lately been drawn with 1903 by old stagers in the financial community, but not always with recognition of the analogies between that year and this, in the way that Wall Street's eyes were slowly opened to certain obvious facts. There had been then, as now, an immense prosperity, a prolonged and successful speculation during four years and a great rise of prices for everything. Before the end of 1902 it was evident that credit was overstrained. Bank deficits occurred, there were the usual appeals to the treasury for help (the treasury did not 'restrict' Wall Street in those days) and severe money stringency followed. Sixty-day Stock Exchange loans at '6 per cent and 1 per cent commission'—which meant a 12-per-cent per annum rate for time money, were quoted along with 8-per-cent commercial paper. The stock market declined, but the professional manipulators, the newly made millionaires would at once bid up prices again. There were even speculative 'corners' in stocks—many people remember the 'Gates crowd' and the Louisville and Nashville—which compared very respectably with 'Stutz' and other achievements of the present day.

"Then all of a sudden, came a great break, from which there was not the usual recovery and then the fall in prices outside the Stock Exchange. Between the spring of 1903 and the autumn of 1904, Wall Street was merely picking up news of financial and industrial reaction. No 'panic' occurred, but the compulsory reduction of credit facilities, easily obtained, unwisely used and difficult to surrender, left some marks in the insolvency records before the readjustment was over.

History Repeats Self.

History repeats itself in the large result of common causes, but not always in the details of circumstances; therefore, it must still be left to conjecture just how far the financial and industrial movements which followed the "credit crisis" of 1903—the last which gave any close parallel to the present money market—should be duplicated now. There was a great decline in commodity markets and in the immediate profits of industry. The price of iron and steel declined 35 per cent within 12 months, other commodities of manufacture 10 to 20 per cent. Employment of labor was undoubtedly much reduced; the constant increase of wages which had been going on since 1898 was distinctly checked and the "traffic blockades" of 1903 came to an end.

"But the reduction in cost of necessaries was far from uniform. The wheat crop and the cotton crop both ran short with the result that textile goods and flour actually rose in price. Cotton went up $42 per bale and wheat 45 cents a bushel in face of the reduction in other necessaries. After a year of reaction, liquidation, and dull trade, the forward movement was resumed; even speculation taking an active hand again.

Europe Lent Money.

"We have yet to see whether history will repeat this sequel. It may easily do so in the wheat and cotton season of 1920, with conditions what they now seem to be. The revival of speculation and the renewal of advancing prices, after the reaction of 1903 and 1904 was over, came from two facts in the situation—very large bank reserves and very easy money, as a result of the drastic liquidation, and such abundance of money on the European markets that they loaned to American borrowers whatever was asked for.

"One of these circumstances may be repeated in the sequel to the present readjustment. The other can hardly recur, for the great surrounding influences of international finance and trade are altogether new. But the economic future will for a good while to come remain an obscure and impenetrable problem.

Wall Street News and Comment

— SPECIAL DAILY —

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 15.—On two points at least the best Wall Street judgment is agreed at the close of the week. The first is that stocks for the most part are low, that is, that they are selling at prices which are well justified on the basis of actual values. The second is that the credit position so far as it relates to the Stock Exchange is uncommonly strong, that brokers' loans are, comparatively speaking, at a minimum and that the open speculative account is small. The liquidation which has occurred this week may be traced to two sources. On the one hand some of the industrials have been sold on the knowledge that the particular business condition of their companies was no longer favorable and that profits were on the decline. On the other hand, there has been a great deal of selling by business men throughout the country who have needed money for their business and have had difficulty in renewing their loans at the banks. The credit stringency and the efforts made to lessen it have thus reacted upon the security market not directly as was the case last autumn when Wall Street's own loans were being called but indirectly through the curtailment of credit in commercial lines which has forced business people to throw over security investments in order to raise funds which they are no longer able to obtain at the banks.

It is never possible to foresee the limits of a liquidation based upon the ground of such necessity. All that can be said is that the decline toward the end of the week had evidently gone far enough to attract an offsetting buying power from insiders who have the best knowledge of what values really are and from outside investors who realized that stocks were cheap intrinsically.

This buying power proved sufficient to check the downward movement and to discourage further bear raiding.

Situation Brighter.

The general situation unquestionably is brighter than it was a week ago. The most important development is the pressure that is being brought to bear from all sides upon the authorities at Washington to help relieve the traffic blockade which is such a serious handicap to the business of the country and which is one of the main causes of the credit tieup. Exactly what form relief measures will take has not yet been made clear. But the main thing is that the appeal for relief has been brought forward so strongly that it can no longer be doubted that something must be done and done very, very soon.

One feature of the program will be to strengthen railroad credit, make it possible for roads to raise for the purchase of equipment which they need and this can only be done if the Interstate Commerce Commission puts a liberal interpretation upon its new powers of rate making under the railway act. It is this consideration which lies behind the optimistic sentiment regarding the railway shares which is to be found in the best quarters in Wall Street. The car and locomotive builders are sure of a capacity business for a long while to come. They are the producers of what is now the nation's supreme necessity outside of food. Consequently the equipment stocks are looked upon with favor.

Steel Issues Favored.

The steel companies will benefit by any comprehensive program of increased railway expenditure and stand to gain enough from this source to counter-balance any losses they may sustain through diminished demand in other directions. Therefore, the steel stocks are placed in the category of those having favorable possibilities in the situation of the next six months. On the other hand there is no doubt about the reality of the banking effort to restrict credit in lines that are less essential. This policy already begun is pretty sure to be emphasized with the result that the business of this class of companies will be cut down.

The market has done a good deal of discounting in this direction in its recent severe decline. This discounting may have gone far enough to prepare the stocks concerned for a period of smaller profits. But in any new forward movement that may start the motor shares and the stocks of other companies which are dependent for their big return upon the free spending habit will hardly be the farovites they were before. It also is known that the business of the leather companies is not good, that the crude rubber market is depressed and that the corners affected are carrying large inventories which they will have to mark down. These are only some instances to show that the market of the next few months will be a discriminating one and will have to distinguish with great care between stocks of companies where the business outlook is fairly promising and those of companies where it is not.

Gold Would Help.

The most acute phase of the credit problem is the harvest demand which will begin to be felt to some extent next month and which will be brought into full play toward the close of the summer. It is the extra strain of this crop moving demand coming upon a credit position already sufficiently delicate, that has been looked forward to with most apprehension. This has given urgency to the propaganda for relieving the congestion on the railroads, permitting the movement of blockaded goods and releasing a very large amount of bank loans required to carry these goods in store houses. If the proper relief is not found for the railway tangle the other way out of the difficulty will have to be another large importation of gold. If we could get from Europe another $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 gold between now and September it will go far toward meeting the harvest requirements. As the credit question stringency and the fear of its getting still worse has been the impelling motive back of the recent Wall Street decline, it is difficult to overrate the effect upon the market of a definite announcement that large transfers of gold to this country from abroad were a certainty.

Foreign Exchange Market.

NEW YORK, May 15.—The foreign exchange market showed a firmer tone in today's trading, moderate advances being made in sterling and continental rates. Sterling grain bills were in the market on a fairly large scale, but their influence was offset by some covering against sales of long sterling, which is now becoming due.

Do You Need Capital to Enlarge Your Business? Get It at Lowest Cost

If you need a large amount for expansion of your business, get in touch with me at once. I can install a securities selling organization in your own place of business, if desired. Surety bonds furnished. I know my business, and my business has been that of marketing securities for over twenty-five years.

I have raised millions of dollars for corporations. I operate on a large scale, acting only for high-grade concerns, using conservative, dignified methods.

I will not enter into a contract unless your business is established and on a dividend-paying basis. You must have good reasons for raising money for expansion. You must furnish an audit of your books by a certified public accountant. You must comply with laws governing the sale of corporation securities.

I have all the facilities. I furnish the customers. I direct everything. The larger the amount you need the better. "Low cost for raising funds and quick action" is my slogan.

Answer by letter, stating the capitalization of your company; par value; amount you wish to raise; present earnings; names of officers and directors; stock issued and outstanding; number of stockholders, etc. All of which will be treated strictly confidential and data returned to you upon request. $10.00 per share—at par. All common stock fully paid and non-assessable. Come in and see this simple, wonderful machine. This stock is being rapidly subscribed and will soon be withdrawn.

1—YARD-O-METER is a measuring and computing device for the use of merchants who sell dry goods, etc., manufacturers of clothing, milliners and others.

2—YARD-O-METER is simple in construction—unerring to measurement—computes accurately—easy to operate—simplicity itself.

3—YARD-O-METER computes to the half-inch—measures absolutely accurately as small an amount as one-eighth of an inch.

4—YARD-O-METER has only one working part in the cloth measuring mechanism.

5—YARD-O-METER has no gears in the measuring mechanism that will cause play and are very apt to be responsible for errors in measurements.

6—The demand for YARD-O-METER need not be mentioned. The keen-thinking mind will readily determine the possibilities of this wonderful invention, when we tell you that the price at which it sells is easily within the reach of even the smallest user.

7—A reasonable profit will be made on each machine sold and in a very short time YARD-O-METER should make wonderful progress—likewise large returns for the stockholders.

8—As an investment the stock of the YARD-O-METER Corporation offers a splendid opportunity. It is a matter of common knowledge that industrial stocks have earned the largest dividends in the history of the world. All of the stock of the YARD-O-METER Corporation is common stock, which will entitle the holder to his full share of the large returns which, no doubt, will be made possible by the manufacture and marketing of the YARD-O-METER.

9—The management of the Company will be in the hands of capable St. Louis business men and those especially trained and experienced with reference to the manufacture and sale of YARD-O-METERS. In order that the company might preserve the full benefit of the moneys realized from the sale of its stock, it has decided to sell its own stock and we would, therefore, kindly ask you to make the subscription directly to the General Offices of the Company, Sixth Floor, Commonwealth Trust Building, 415 Locust street.

Stirring Picture of Starving Women and Children in Hospitals and Orphan Asylums of Hungary

Long Suffering From Want of Proper Food Evidenced in Thin Faces and Weak Bodies —Much Tuberculosis Among Children.

By MADELEINE Z. DOTY.

Who recently returned from a tour of investigation of conditions among women and children in Austria and Hungary.

New York, May 15.

This is the story of Miss von Pott. I met her in Vienna at Dr. Picquet's hospital. She had come to ask for soap. She was helping the American Mission feed school children.

The children's heads were full of lice. There was nothing with which to wash them. She could stand it no longer.

But soap was more precious than gold in Austria. Dr. Picquet needed all he had for his children's hospital. She had to go away without any.

I asked her to lunch with me. She was very slender; there was an occasional flush on her cheeks. It was the flush of weakness, not of health. She wore a plain blue tailored suit with real lace collar and cuffs and white kid gloves and carried a lovely little handbag. Everything about her spoke of breeding. She was the typical aristocrat, the aristocrat who moved in court circles.

But she was so thin; her cheeks were hollow, there were drawn lines about the eyes.

She ate ravenously. I took her to the best hotel. There for enormous prices one could get a real meal. When she had finished she looked at my plate. "May I take what is left? she asked.

The Diplomat's Family.

She took out the daintiest of pocket handkerchiefs. She brushed the remnants into it; then she put it into the silk-lined bag. Without a quiver, quite simply she said: "I no longer have any pride. We are starving. My family will envy me because I have had meat. It is long since we have had any."

It was unbelievable, but it was true. A diplomat's family was starving. Miss von Pott's uncle had been an Austrian Ambassador. The family still wore different clothes; they still lived with quaint formality. But their only food was the regulation ration. It was not enough and they could buy no more. The pension allowed diplomats was that paid under the old regime. With the depreciation in money this pittance was not enough even for rent.

They were slowly being squeezed to death.

There was a diplomats' kitchen for destitute diplomats. Here the starving aristocracy could eat. They sat next to their former servants and consumed cabbage soup. The von oPtt family ate at the kitchen. But cabbage soup is not very nourishing. Miss von Pott's mother was dying. She had lost 40 pounds. I had a few cans of sardines and a little sweet chocolate brought from Switzerland. These I gave Miss von Pott for her mother. Seh was very grateful When she found I wanted to study starvation in Austria, she said: "Let me take you about." Each day we lunched together. Each day she took the scraps left back home.

Pangs of Starvation.

I do not know that I was good to Miss von Pott, for who feeds her now? But she was very appreciative. She said, "I will eat everything you give me, for I must keep up my strength for my family." "And," she added, smiling, "it is only in the early stages that starvation hurts. Then you suffer hunger pangs and get angry, but after three or four weeks you do not feel it. Only you get weak. You have no vitality. I have none."

She took me first to a maternity hospital. It was a stone building, cold and bleak. There were no flowers anywhere. The wards were shabby. The beds had blankets but no white spreads. The pillowcases were ragged. There is no cotton. The physician was glad of our visit. We were the first visitors in six months.

He took us through the wards. He showed us the mothers. Thin, spent creatures they were. Only one had enough vitality to nurse her baby. I looked at the babies; tiny, weazened creatures, 1, 2 or 3 days old. One mother had twins. The babies were sucking milk bottles. But when I looked I saw the bottles held no milk. In each was imitation coffee (coffee ersatz). And when I raised my head a mother's face turned toward me flushed and quivering, and haunting mother eyes followed me as I left the room. For how long can a new-born baby live on coffee ersatz?"

Fortunately, the number of babies born in the maternity hospital is only one-third what it was before the war.

Next we went to a day clinic. Here each morning mothers brought their ailing little ones. The children were from 1 to 3 years of age. The little naked creatures were placed on the doctor's table.

Some were bloated from improper feeding, others were skeletons. All had curved legs and backs. The doctor brought them to me. He bent the tiny arms and legs; bent them straight back where there are no joints.

"Rubber children," he said. Then he pressed the little head. The skull was so soft it gave under his fingers.

"It is hopeless," he said. "We need milk and cod liver oil, and we have none," and he added angrily, "I do not want money. I want food."

He gave the babies back to their mothers. They turned away with tears running down their cheeks. Of

Mohawk SILK GLOVES

"I ALWAYS look for the Mohawk name and the Indian Girl mark in the hem when I buy Silk gloves. Someone once told me that no two pairs of hands are alike in all the world, and I marvel that season after season I can buy the same size Mohawk Silk Gloves that fit as though made just for me. The silk is beautifully lustrous and I get lots of wear out of every pair." (NAME ON REQUEST)

STIRRING STORY OF DISTRESS AMONG THE CHILDREN OF AUSTRIA

what use the doctor? Still, they came, hoping against hope.

"Is it enough?" said Miss von Pott.

"No," I answered; "I will see it all."

Next day she took me to an orphan asylum. Many of the children had been made orphans by the war. There were 660 children; 400 had tuberculosis.

There was no milk and no eggs. They were given vegetables, war bread and coffee ersatz. The bedding was scanty. There were few sheets and no soap. An attempt at washing was made once a week.

In a yard divided by a fence were listless, silent little boys and little girls. All were ill from want of food. Some had swollen bodies, others were skeletons. Children of 10 and 12 looked to be 5 and 6. In the girls' yard were two tiny boys dying of tuberculosis. They sat on a hard wooden bench.

Children Too Weak to Walk.

The nurse looked at them with pity.

"They want to lie down," she said. "We ought to have easy chairs, but there are none."

Upstairs in the wards were the children too weak to walk.

In a clothes basket wrapped in rags was a baby 10 months old. Tragic eyes looked out from a pallid face. The baby had had pneumonia, now it was dying of tuberculosis. The father had been killed in the war, the mother was breathing her last in a nearby hospital.

In another room were three children dying. One, about 4, with golden curls, lay upon the bed quivering with convulsions. Great sobbing gasps came from between the little lips, the eyes were scarcely open.

On the next bed a baby sat propped up. Her body was a swollen lump; her legs two sticks; she was too long unfed to help.

The third kiddie was in the last stage of consumption. But she still clung to life. In her hand was a tiny music box. It played one tune. Endlessly she ground out that tune to her dying companions. The minutes ticked and life slipped away. No milk, no mother's breast, no kiss. These little lives went out alone.

But why go on? In each ward it was the same. It was a charnel house. The nurses were too few. They were hungry and desperate. They did not like to see babies die.

Line Up for Farewell.

As we left, the little ones lined up in the yard to say good-by. Hundreds of baby faces with pathetic eyes looked up at me, and broken little bodies bowed and curtsied and lisped in chorus, "God bless you."

I turned and fled. Miss von Pott hurried after me. She seized my arm. I clenched my fist. She took my hand. We had long ceased to remember we were from enemy lands. We were women and the world was dying.

"Do you know," said Miss von Pott, "I have been wondering if the children in Russia and Hungary have more to eat than they have here, because, if they have, we might better become Bolshevists. What difference does it make, as long as we are fed?"

We went back to Miss von Pott's home. The family all lived in one apartment, for economy. It was tea time. They still had a little real tea. There was no milk and no sugar, but tea hour was sacred. Mrs. von Pott presided. She was as fragile as the china. A breath would have blown her away. There was an exquisite tea tray, the daintiest of china, and linen napkins. We hung breathless over the steaming liquid and nibbled a tiny portion of impossible black bread.

"This," said Mrs. von Pott, "is the great moment of the day. I live for it. But soon our tea will be gone."

"A Nation Starving."

It was hard to leave Miss von Pott, hard to go back to America, where they would not understand, where I could not talk. For, in the face of suffering, suffering of children, everything else is forgotten. Women like Miss von Pott and myself, who had seen what we had seen, temporarily had no differences. It was all merged in anguish.

We hated war, we hated the man's

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

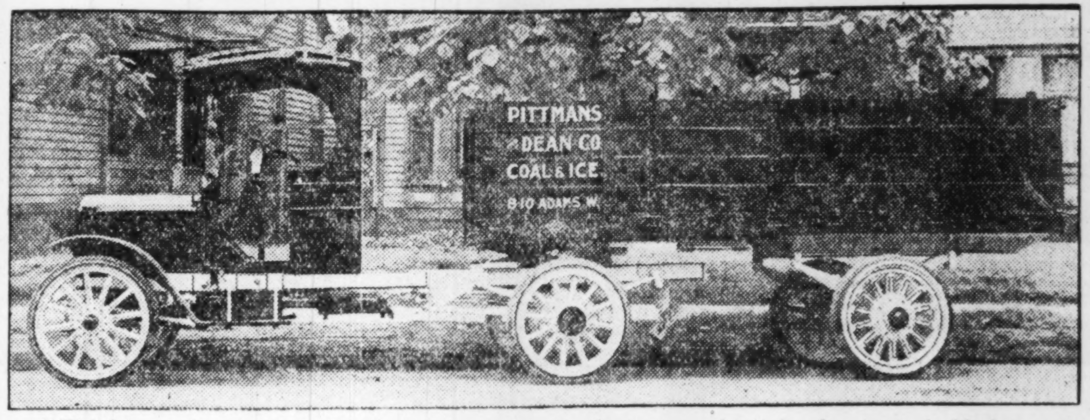
Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant, and you appear years younger.

Tractor and Fruehauf Trailer For Hauling Coal and Ice

CUT INVESTMENT ONE-HALF



"The big saving in a trailer and tractor is the first cost which is about one-half the cost of a truck of equal capacity." (Signed) PITTMANS & DEAN CO., Detroit.

This big coal and ice company uses a light truck to pull a 4-ton semi-trailer, handling loads that could be carried only by the large truck costing twice as much as the small tractor and trailer combined.

Fruehauf Trailers will cut your hauling costs. The saving starts with your first investment. You can haul anything on the trailer that your truck will pull.

"Gets-It" Tonight Farewell To Corns!

Hurting Stops At Once—Corns Loosen and Lift Off.

Off comes that old misery maker, 'twixt your thumb and finger. Not even a struggle left in it after "Gets-It" has done its work. A few drops of "Gets-It" takes all the "pep" out of any corn or callus, stops its pain and loosens it so it almost falls off of itself.

It's no more trouble to lift off a corn after "Gets-It" is through with it than it is to brush a loose hair off your head. It works just that easy. Isn't it silly, then, to suffer from a corn day after day? Isn't it common sense to put a few drops of "Gets It" on and be rid of the nuisance for good? Takes less of your time to permanently lose a corn with "Gets-It" than it does to "trim" it just once the dangerous razor, knife or file way. There's no "fail" in "Gets-It." It can't fail.

KING'S DAUGHTERS AND SONS

International Order to Open Meeting Here Thursday.

The International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons will meet in a five-day convention at the Planters' Hotel beginning Thursday evening. Addresses of welcome will be delivered by State President Mrs. C. S. Burns of Kansas City, Miss Jennie Greenwood of St. Louis and Dr. Z. B. T. Phillips.

The Friday session will be given over to the reports of officers and standing committees. The Saturday session will be devoted to junior work, with an automobile trip in the afternoon. Services will be held Sunday at the Second Presbyterian Church and Dr. McIvor will deliver the sermon. The convention will close Monday after the discussion of unfinished business and a consecration service. The organizatio has a national membership of 75,000, including 750 Missourians.

850 STUDENTS HELPED FUND

They Added $12,326 to Washington U. Salary Endowment—Alumni Raised $100,000.

The number of contributors to the $12,326 added to Washington University salary endowment fund by students at that institution, is announced as about 850. The exact number of contributions was 900, but some students repeated. Seven students gave in excess of $100 each. These included Miss Florence Forbes, $550; Mrs. T. B. Armistead and Miss Carrie Mollow, $500 each. Lock and Chain's gift of $25 was the only students' organization aid.

The alumni campaign in behalf of the same fund is said to have virtually ended with about $100,000 raised. The largest contributor to this was the New York body, the total being above $14,000.

WILL NOT PLAY FOR ENGINEERS

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers, at its annual meeting here the last week in May, will not be entertained by Thyrsus of Washington University with a production of its annual play, "If I Were King," which was given at the Odeon last Wednesday and Thursday evenings. The play was to have been presented at the Municipal Theater.

It is explained that the project was abandoned because of disagreement over the financial feature. The engineers were to have paid $1400 for the entertainment, from which three men students who negotiated the arrangement were to have paid all expenses and given to the cast $100. The cast members demurred to loss of time during examinations.

STIRRING STORY OF DISTRESS AMONG THE CHILDREN OF AUSTRIA

physical world of combat that let children die. We wanted the mothers of the world to join hands and see that every baby was fed.

Said Miss von Pott: "My class has made the poor suffer, now we must pay. Austria is old and rotten. Women have been kept down. They were told woman's place was in the home. They have lived for dress and entertainment. When the war came the women were helpless.

"A friend in England writes, 'Occupy yourself with your painting. You must learn to work.' I am glad to work. I have no longer pride. I am helping the American mission feed school children. If only all could be fed. But a whole nation is starving."

We said good-by with tears. I do not know whether Miss von Pott is still alive. I have not heard from her. She owned a house and land in Belgium, but she was not allowed to go there and claim them. Her thoughts often turned to Belgium. It was her second home. She said:

"I dream every night of my home in Belgium. I dream of my animals, of my dogs and horses and cows. I dream I am kissing them."

The world owes a great reparation to women and children. Its task now should be to pay the debt.

Red Blood for Pale People!

A big supply of red blood corpuscles is what helps to make any man or woman have a healthy, pink complexion and cherry red lips. Resort to paint and powder are totally unnecessary and besides that, are harmful. Three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, if used regularly for several months, seem to create a greatly added number of millions of the red and white corpuscles of the blood, and not only improve the color, but add increased flesh to the thin and frail body. These tablets promote assimilation, absorption and digestion, and this splendid aid to nature's forces transforms the complexion and figure. They are prescribed by physicians, but being of a perfectly harmless character, self-administration is being followed by many, who obtain them direct from any well stocked apothecary shop.

Accomplishments in Two Years of Air Mail Service, Soon to Touch St. Louis

Efficiency Demonstrated Under All Weather Conditions, Postoffice Report Says—Performance Indicates High Standard of Mechanics.

WASHINGTON, May 15.

WITHIN a few weeks, according to announcement by the Postoffice Department, the air mail service will be extended to St. Louis. Established two years ago on May 15, the service is said by the department to have been operated with "phenomenal success," air mail routes now extending from Washington to New York, from New York to Chicago and from Chicago to Omaha.

A survey of the proposed route from New York to San Francisco is now being made, and the department promises that service over it will be started as soon after the beginning of the fiscal year (July 1) as the necessary equipment and landing fields can be perfected.

"The complete efficiency developed in the operation of the air mail service," says the department, "has put an end to the skepticism as to the practicability of air transportation and grealy advanced the commercial utility of aviation.

"When the air mail service was established there was division of opinion among authorities as to whether flying would be possible under adverse weather conditions. The Postoffice Department has demonstrated that mail can be carried by airplane under all weather conditions, winter and summer.

"During the second year the postal airplanes covered a total mileage of 498,664, transporting 538,734 pounds of mail. The average percentage of performance, including flights under the most adverse conditions, was 87 per cent for the entire year.

"The New York-Washington route operated daily with an efficiency of better than 90 per cent. Its success justifies the extension of the service from New York across the Allegheny mountains to Cleveland and Chicago, and the success of that undertaking resulted in Congress authorizing a daily round trip air mail service during the coming fiscal year across the continent from New York to San Francisco.

Time and Money Saved.

"During the last winter, the most severe in some time, the air mail operated successfully, advancing the mail practically all the time from 12 to 16 hours over train time, had the trains arrived on schedule time. However, the train schedules between New York and Chicago were notoriously bad during the winter months.

"Economically, the air mail has been justified as signally as it has been justified as a flying proposition. Not only has the cost of operations kept far below what the original friends of the air mail had anticipated, but, by reason of the operation of the service between Washington and New York, there has been a saving to the Government at the rate of $42,500 a year and a saving between New York and Chicago at a rate of more than $100,000 a year. That means that in carrying first-class mail matter which requires distribution on the trains the air mail operates more cheaply than do the distributing cars on trains, wherever there is a large quantity of mail to dispatch.

"When the New York-San Francisco route starts, the air mail which will leave New York at daybreak will be in Omaha that same day before sunset. Mail leaving New York Monday morning will arrive in San Francisco by 9 o'clock Wednesday morning. The best schedule by train would be for mail to leave New York at 8:40 p. m. and arrive in San Francisco at 12:30 p. m. on the fourth day. The railway mail service can accomplish this only if it makes the transcontinental connection at Chicago, and this connection is missed whenever the train is as much as an hour late.

Recognition of Service.

"The air mail can be 12 hours behind its schedule from New York to San Francisco and still beat the train mail into the Golden Gate City by 20 hours if the train connection is made at Chicago, and by 44 hours if that connection is missed.

"This is only the beginning of commercial aviation in the United States. It is being accomplished with military planes, which are not adapted for commercial service. The work that has been done by the Postoffice Department has received perhaps greater recognition in Europe than it has by the people of this country. Foreign diplomatic representatives have sent the fullest reports to their Governments about the air mail operations, and have expressed to the Postoffice Department their admiration of the service, its dependability and economy.

Efficiency Developed.

"The air mail has developed a staff of excellent aeronautical mechanics, the result of whose work is seen by the records of some of its pilots. One pilot in eight months made 160 trips with but a single forced landing, due to mechanical trouble. On the Chicago-Cleveland division in 1919, 205 consecutive trips of 325 miles each were made without a forced landing. The air mail has come to New York from Washington and from Chicago in gales and snowstorms which tied up harbor shipping. It has arrived in Cleveland and in Chicago when it was the only means of transportation operative. During the recent tornado that passed over Ohio and Illinois, in which 103 persons were killed and buildings were wrecked, the air mail made its flight through that storm and arrived safely with the mail in Chicago.

"In the two years' operation only six pilots have lost their lives while transporting the mail.

"There is nothing in prospect that would justify any man in saying that the airplane soon will carry all of the mail or all of the passenger transportation of the country, but it will be a most effective aid in speeding up commerce and production."

Junior C. of C. and W. U. Debate.

The debate between teams of three each, representing the Junior Chamber of Commerce and Stump Society of Washington University, originally arranged for last Monday evening in Graham Memorial chapel, will take place tomorrow evening in the auditorium of Mary Institute, Waterman and Lake avenues. The proposition is that the United States should intervene to give Mexico a stable Government.

Washington U. Surkuss Thursday.

Pralma and other student organizations of Washington University are co-operating in plans for the annual Univee Surkuss, scheduled for Thursday, 1 to 11 p. m., the proceeds to go to the salary endowment fund. Last year's best features are included, among them a minstrel show, to be reinforced by the women's glee and mandolin clubs. New features announced include a pre-medic lunatic asylum and an imitation cafe under idrection of thel awyers.

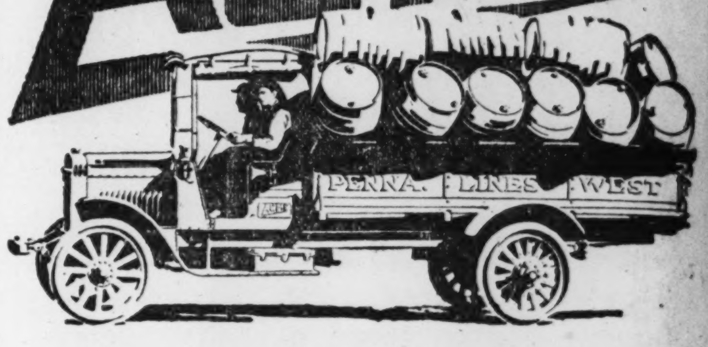
ACME



Confidence In Acme Proved Construction

Eight hundred out of every thousand owners of Acme trucks selected Acme because Acme proved construction gave them a definite basis upon which to determine truck performance. Investigation shows these owners believe that no other truck assures them such definite standards of service—and they backed their belief by buying the Acme. Not one owner of an Acme has ever regretted the purchase of an Acme—and the investigation covered every Acme truck in America.

Acme Qualities That Win

For easy riding, easy driving, power and operating economy, and low repair costs and uninterrupted service, Acme stands out conspicuously in the entire motor truck field. THE NEW Scripps-Booth

A Unit of the General Motors Corporation

THE even greater worthiness of the new Scripps-Booth models—designed, machined and built in the new factory—evidences the advantages which result from ideal production facilities and close affiliations with many of the largest motor car builders.

These new cars are distinctively Scripps-Booth in design, comparing in appearance with the finest motor cars—low, straight-lined and lustrously finished in a variety of colors. Their appointments include many unusual features found only in the Scripps-Booth models.

Real comfort is obtained by deep upholstery, extra long, wide springs and a wheel-base of increased length to give easy riding qualities, yet to provide for a short turning radius. Scientific construction with an even distribution of weight, gives these models strength without bulk and road steadiness without excessive weight.

The Scripps-Booth six-cylinder valve-in-head motor develops ample power for all conditions—flexibility for congested traffic, with speed and hill climbing ability to meet all requirements.

HURLBURT

Nine Years of Supremacy

The Hurlburt Truck is the pioneer of worm-driven trucks and its mechanical features have been so refined from time to time that today it is recognized as the leading motor truck.

The first Hurlburt Truck made is still in daily operation in New York City after 150,000 miles of service.

John Wanamaker
Adams Express Co.
American Express Co.
Board of Education, N. Y. City
Police Department, N. Y. City
Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co.
Hecker-Jones-Jewell Milling Co.
Standard Oil Co.
Otis Elevator Co.

Hurlburt Trucks were used by the Allied Armies in Europe, the American Y. M. C. A. and the K. of C. for transport work in France. Hurlburt Trucks are now used for carrying sugar in Cuba and for transport service in hilly Porto Rico, and in the recent riots protected the streets in Buenos Aires.

In every instance the ideas embodied in the Hurlburt Truck have proved the soundness of the original design — a design that has carried its advantages into present-day production and kept it years ahead of competition.

Hurlburt Trucks and Hurlburt parts are made of carefully selected materials by expert workmen in our own plant. Specifications in:

1½-2 Ton 2½-3 Ton 3½-4 Ton 5-5½ Ton

Hurlburt Trucks will shortly be assembled in St. Louis to meet the demand for quantity production in the Western territory.

Agency applications are invited. All agencies will be allotted June 1st, 1920. St. Louis territory available for dealers.

Spirit

The mysterious power of money and the marvels of machinery in their influence upon the progress of the world will always pale into insignificance in the brilliant light of the magic spirit of willing men.

You might possess all the wealth of the world and all the machinery in Christendom, and yet be poor indeed if you lacked association with men who know the joy of honest united effort.

Happy is that organization which is dominated by the spirit of serving others, and this spirit, expressed by men who have joy in working and sharing with one another, commands rewards in personal satisfaction and happiness which exceed in value the money for which it will ever serve as a powerful magnet.

Bridge the Gap Between the Operation and Profits

What is this gap?

It's the time you lose in unloading. When you start to haul with motorized equipment, you find that your invested capital must be figured in thousands, where it used to be figured in hundreds. Consequently your fixed overhead expense has advanced and your percentage of gross profit must be increased to meet it. Just what does this loss in unloading time mean to you? Bridge that gap by installing Woods St. Paul Hydraulic Hoists and All-Steel Dump Bodies. We maintain complete and adequate service at all times for Hydraulic Hoists and Steel Dump Bodies.

BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

"Now I Can Walk," Says Mrs. Southcott of Medina.

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson of Buffalo, "one that I would rather have than a thousand dollars."

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big hearted, rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment, to sell at all druggists for 60 cents a large box."

Read this letter, written February 14, 1918, by Mrs. Albert Southcott, of Medina, N. Y. It seems like a miracle, but it is true, every word of it.

I know it because I get similar letters almost every day from people who have used my ointment for old sores, eczema and piles.

Is it any wonder I am happy!

Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

Dear Sirs—

"I was an untold sufferer from an old running sore and ulcers. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6½ inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again.

"You may use this to recommend your ointment if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it." Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott, Medina, N. Y. Mail orders filled by Peterson Ointment Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Judge & Dolph, E. A. Medler, Enderle Drug Co. and Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. will supply you.

TRY THIS IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

WASHINGTON U. GIRLS TO GIVE "AS YOU LIKE IT" TUESDAY

Play for Teachers' Endowment Will Be at Municipal Theater in Forest Park.

Girl students of Washington University will present Shakspeare's "As You Like It" Tuesday evening at the Forest Park Municipal Theater to assist in raising the sum promised the teachers' endowment fund of the university by the Washington University Women's Council. More than 100 girls will be in the play, all the parts, male and female, being filled by girl members of the council. Old English song numbers and folk and other dances will be interspersed.

Costumes used in the big Margaret Anglin production of the same play at the outdoor theater a year or so ago will be used by some of the principals. The effect of the first scene will be heightened by the placing of a brightly lighted castle at the back of the stage.

Between act one and act two, when the scene changes to the Forest of Arden, the stage managers will make use of the new steam curtain idea to shut off the view of the audience.

Another innovation will be the new lighting system. Towers are being constructed at either side of the stage, from which all the stage lighting will be done. Some beautiful effects are promised in the dance scenes with this new system.

PAGEANT AT ODEON TODAY

The fifty-first annual rally of the Missionary Host will be held at the Odeon at 3:30 this afternoon, when a pageant play, "The Great Trail," will be given by a large cast in costume. All of the Episcopal schools of the city will attend, and the treasurer of each will announce the amount of money given by the children to Bishop Tuttle and Bishop Johnson for missions in the State.

Mrs. Willard Bartlett will have the role of Gentle Flower, the captive maiden, who calls on Mother Church to help her convert the Indians; Mrs. George E. Norton will play the part of Mother Church, Miss Bertha Bates, Christmas Eve, Mrs. W. O. Hill, Trinity Sunday, Miss Mary Franklin, Ash Wednesday, and parts of other church seasons and the Indians will be taken by men and women who have acted in other pageants.

SCHUMANN-HEINK IN CONCERT

Mme. Schumann-Heink will give a concert at the Coliseum, May 27, for the benefit of the newly-established Catherine Springer Home for employed women and girls. The singer will contribute a substantial portion of her usual concert charge to the treasury of the home.

Arrangements are in the hands of the Executive Board of the Home, which has worked out a program of the more popular music, and decided upon a correspondingly popular scale of prices.

STANDARD EIGHT
A Powerful Car

THE Standard Eight's story is simple. The engineers of the Standard Steel Car Company had perfected the steel construction of the world's railroad rolling stock.

They believed that they could build an automobile of power which would be a light car and yet would give full riding comfort.

They went ahead and did it.

The Standard Eight's powerful motor, throttled or full lunged, will meet the demands of any situation in road or traffic. The car's balance gives riding comfort. Its light weight is appreciated in figuring operating costs and upkeep. See the new models on display.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

the disturbing factor in Russian thought."

MY RECOLLECTIONS. By J. Messenet. A charmingly written autobiography of the great French composer, beginning with his admission to the National Conservatory of Music at the age of nine.

BEST SHORT STORIES OF 1919. By E. J. O'Brien. Yearbook of the American short story.

FOOD FOR THE SICK AND WELL. By M. J. Thompson. A practical little volume of recipes and suggestions on diet for the sick, for convalescents, and for those who are well and wish to remain so.

FAMOUS MYSTERIES. By J. E. Watkins. A collection of stories concerning people of supposed royal birth, and of literary and criminal mysteries which have puzzled historians, detectives and students of crime.

CELEBRATED SPIES AND FAMOUS MYSTERIES OF THE GREAT WAR. By George Barton. A combination of real stories which for absorbing interest, can compete with the most thrilling tales of fiction. The curious disappearance of Lord Kitchener and the case of Edith Cavell are two of the subjects treated.

FROM NEWTON TO EINSTEIN. By Benjamin Harrow, Ph. D. This little book attempts to give, in popular form, an account of Einstein's contributions to our ideas of time and space, as well as to our knowledge of the universe in general. His work is so largely dependent upon the work of Newton and his successors, that the first part of the book is devoted to a discussion of the latter.

THE ARMY WITH BANNERS. By Charles Rann Kennedy. "A divine comedy of this very day, in five acts, scene individable, setting forth the story of a morning in the early millenium." The theme is Christianity and the travesty of it by the vast majority of its professors, presented with unhesitating and remorseless sincerity.

FRENCH FOR THE TRAVELLER. By J. S. Keyworth. The author, who assumes that the traveler has some acquaintance with the essential features of the French language, has undertaken to prepare a handbook suitable for those whom business or pleasure may take abroad.

HOW TO MAKE LIFE A SUCCESS. By Jules Fiaux. The author's object is to demonstrate to his readers that nothing is an evil or a misfortune in itself, but that we ourselves in a great measure invite needless suffering by our manner of regarding those things that seem to cause unhappiness and dissatisfaction with life. He believes that the cultivation of will-power enables us to meet real disappointments and sorrows.

SELF-TRAINING. By H. Ernest Hunt. Hints are offered as to the best method of cultivating the memory and exercising a healthful control over the nervous system. The author points out that the truest self interest is shown to lie in the service of humanity and the secret of character building in "Regeneration From Within."

TEXTBOOK OF FILING. By James N. McCord. A complete book on filing—it applies the numerous systems now in vogue to the various lines of business and to the professions, giving up-to-the-minute suggestions on matter of office routine, cross references and the different ramifications of filing that are in use today.

TRAILIN'.—By Max Brand. From the "Wild West" show in New York to the bullet-riddled house and the lonely grave in the hills in the West, Anthony Woodberry is relentlessly tracking down the man whom he believes to have shot his father. As usual, at the end of his trail, he finds life and love.

PRISONERS OF THE RED DESERT.—By Capt. R. S. Gwatkin-Williams. The common belief is that there is no romance about modern war. However true this may be as a rule, there is certainly no story of the war, real or imaginary, more strangely romantic than Capt. Gwatkin-Williams' true record of his experiences in the late war. The author was the commander of H. M. S. Tara, which was torpedoed in the Mediterranean, and he gives a graphic account of how the survivors were held in captivity by the wild Senoussi tribe until rescued by the British forces in North Africa, gallantly led by the Duke of Westminster.

BALANCED TO ZERO
Why does the Aero-EIGHT pick-up so swiftly and have so great a fund of reserve power?

An aviator can tell you the moment he takes the wheel and feels the car respond to the touch of the accelerator.

It's the minute balance of every unit that enables the mechanism to respond without effort or restraint when under way.

Aerotype engineering has increased the limits of motor car possibility, and Cole engineers have been the first to apply these principles to the automobile.

Aeroplane balance is one of the characteristics which the name of the Aero-EIGHT implies. It is balanced to zero, so that every unit is able to function 100 per cent.

A Statement by the ORCUTT Storage Company, St. Louis, Mo.

Your monthly inspection of our fleet of service motor trucks was made yesterday. Your inspector reports them all in good order. We consider our SERVICE Trucks the finest and best adapted vehicles for the transportation of fine furniture that are in use today. The handling of furniture without damage to the finish has always been a problem. We feel that we have solved this problem by using the long wheel-base Service motor trucks with storm and dustproof solid paneled bodies. In addition to the service that these cars are giving you will observe they make a very good appearance. In many instances our patrons request certain of our trucks to move them which they have seen on the street. During the past five years we have not had a Service truck laid up for repairs for more than two hours. This has enabled us to serve our patrons promptly and shows the efficient service that the Scudder Motor Truck Company are rendering to users of Service motor trucks in this city.

Experienced buyers look deeper than first cost—they base their selection on three main points of comparison; the truck itself, what it has accomplished for others, and the service back of the truck.

Owners like SERVICE strength and power—they like the dependable manner in which it performs—and its ease of operation. They appreciate the increased haulage efficiency and the valuable business prestige which results.

To meet every haulage need of every user, SERVICE Motor Trucks are built in 80 different combinations of power, speed and capacity from which to choose the one best suited to your requirements.

And remember this—a SERVICE Truck must not only be sold, it must stay on the road. To assure this a most unusual service is maintained. A large repair department, thoroughly equipped with efficient, modern machinery and in charge of experienced mechanics, guards against delay in making necessary repairs or replacements.

NEW NATIONAL PARK IN UTAH IS OPENED

Contains 8000 Acres Surrounding Zion Canyon From Which It Received Name.

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, May 15.—Zion National Park, Utah's greatest natural wonder, was officially opened to the public today.

During the coming summer and fall it is expected it will be visited by thousands of tourists from many parts of the United States. Zion Park, the nation's newest park, is located in the southwestern part of the State and was created by act of Congress Nov. 19, 1919. It has an area of approximately 80,000 acres.

Rugged scenery, similar to that of the Grand Canyon, is Zion's greatest drawing card, and the region in which it is located has changed but little since the early Mormon colonization days.

Many New Wonders.

Many new wonders are being unearthed within the park boundaries. Chief among these are ancient cliff dwellings, located high up on the hills. These dwellings have never been explored by the present generation because of their unaccessible location and are visible only through strong field glasses.

Photographs taken of the ruins with long-distance cameras, however, show the crude houses to be in a perfect state of preservation, and during the coming summer a party of archeologists plans to make extensive explorations of them. How they will gain access has not yet been determined, but scientists connected with the University of Utah here declare it will be possible, if no other way is found, to lower the explorers over the tops of the cliffs by means of ropes.

Stephen T. Mather, director of the national parks service, United States Department of Interior, after an extensive tour of Zion Park last fall declared words were too humble to describe the scenery there. He described its rugged cliffs as among nature's "greatest works."

Linked With Mormon History.

Within the boundaries of Zion Park is Zion Canyon, from which it received its name, and it was through this section that many early Mormon pioneers passed. Much early Morgon history is linked with Zion Canyon and the territory surrounding it is almost wholly settled by people believing in the Mormon faith.

Many towns in the vicinity of the new park have erected hotels to accommodate the influx of tourists expected, and both the Government and the State of Utah have made extensive plans for a network of automobile highways.

ANCIENT IRISH FAMILIES TRACE BACK TO MILESIANS

Tradition Relates That Eremon, One of Eight Sons, Was King About 1700 B. C.

Old Irish families trace their descent to the Milesians, who conquered the country, according to Bardic tradition, about 1700 B. C., says an exchange. The Milesians originated in Scythia, but migrated to Egypt, and thence to Spain, where they became rulers of the land. They are named after Miled, the head of the clan that went to Ireland. Of his eight sons, Eremon became king of all Ireland. There were 117 of his successors until the advent of St. Patrick.

The Milesians had been preceded by three other races, the Parthalonians, who, according to tradition, came from Greece about three centuries before the deluge. They were all wiped out by the plague. Following them came the Firbolgs, who had scarcely taken possession of the land before the Tautha de Danaan (Tribes of the God Dann) arrived, also from Greece, and brought with them the Lia Fail, or stone of destiny, which they set up at Tara. They totally defeated the Firbolgs and remained in undisputed possession of Ireland until the arrival of the Milesians.

The latter, the progenitors of all Irishmen whose names contain the "o'" or the "mac," developed a high civilization long before the Christian era. They had the clan system, the direct legitimate line of nobility and paid high honor to scholar, statesman and soldier. Their nobles were merely heads of the clans and did not, as under the feudal system, own the land. This was the property of the whole clan in common, and certain parts of it were set aside for the support of the chieftains. It was a perfectly democratic system.

After the introduction of Christianity by St. Patrick, Ireland soon became one of the centers of civilization, and its missionaries did much to spread Christianity in Western Europe.

PAIGE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA

THE man who tempers economy with wisdom directs the expenditure of his money judiciously. He is more concerned with ultimate values than with mere cheapness of price.

It is to this type of person among motorists that the Paige car most appeals.

We, of the Paige Company, have always taken the view that unless a car has the qualities essential to comfort, lasting satisfaction and pride of ownership, it would be dear at any price.

So we built the Paige Glenbrook according to our ideas of what a real motor car should be—a car which would be not only a reliable vehicle of transportation but also a car of beauty, comfort and power.

The Ready Acceptance of

CHALMERS

is Nation-wide

WHEREVER automobiles are discussed the merits of "Hot Spot Chalmers" are freely conceded.

For its Ram's-horn and Hot Spot devices have solved the problem of extracting the maximum power from low grade "gas."

And Chalmers performance has proved that those engine troubles which are almost invariably associated with the use of this low grade "gas" have been eliminated.

Hot Spot "heats up" the raw "gas," "breaks it up" and vaporizes it into a "cloud."

This makes just the right kind of fuel for the cylinders.

Ram's-horn, with its easy air bends, rushes the "cloud," at a speed estimated at 100 miles an hour, an equal distance to each cylinder, and when the spark plugs ignite the "gas" you get results.

These two devices have done much for Chalmers. They have given it remarkable smoothness. They have brought down the item of repairs and replacements to an almost negligible sum per year.

Many now say Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world. Quality First

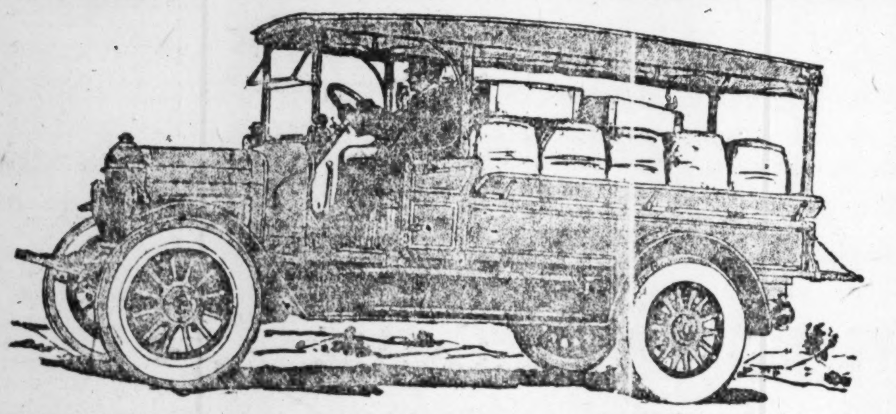
MOTOR TRUCKS



Stewarts cost less to run

In seven years of progressive truck building, the Stewart engineers have refined and eliminated a pound here and there until now the Stewart is a 100% truck, powerful and durable beyond the last factor of real safety.

The Stewart is economical because Stewart simplified design eliminates hundreds of needless parts, produces a simpler, stronger truck, easy to operate and keep in order. With less weight there's less wear and tear, less delay and expense for repairs and replacements, less expense for tires, gasoline and oil.

Every dollar you put into a Stewart is a live, working producing dollar.

CANDIDATES SUPPORT CHILD WELFARE LAWS

Aspirants to Governorship Answer Questions Propounded by Dr. Wallin of St. Louis.

Six candidates for the office of Governor, two Republicans and four Democrats, have replied to a letter addressed to them by Dr. J. E. W. Wallin, director of the psycho-educational clinic and special schools for the Board of Education, and chairman of the committee on defective children for the Missouri Children's Code Commission. Their replies have been made public by Dr. Wallin.

In his letter of inquiry, Dr. Wallin asked each candidate whether, if elected, he would take an active and aggressive interest in the child welfare bills prepared by the Children's Code Commission; and whether he would make it his policy not to veto child welfare measures merely because they carried an appropriation. In explaining the latter request, Dr. Wallin said, "Practically all the children's code bills in the past killed by the Governor have been vetoed because they carried an appropriation."

McJimsey for Measures.

E. E. E. McJimsey, Republican, of Springfield, replied that he was earnestly in favor of all child welfare legislation of a practical character. He inclosed an editorial from his newspaper, the Springfield Republican, censuring Gov. Gardner for his veto of some of the child legislation passed at the last session of the Legislature.

Arthur M. Hyde, Republican, of Trenton, wrote that he was in accord with the general idea of child welfare legislation, but did not wish to commit himself to definite measures without knowing their details.

Frank H. Farris, Democrat, of Rolla, replied that he was at all times in sympathy with legislation for the benefit of children, especially of defective children. He said he would take an active interest in such measures, and that, if a proposed code were submitted, he would refer to it specifically in his first message to the assembly. He said he would not veto child welfare measures merely because of an accompanying appropriation.

Crossley Makes No Promise.

Lieutenant-Governor Wallace Crossley, Democrat, wrote that he would take a personal and official interest in child welfare measures, and would urge the Legislature to give them careful attention. He said he could make no promise as to bills carrying appropriations, but added "I should be glad indeed to see the State expend liberally of its resources in behalf of the little children."

Charles H. Mayer, Democrat, of St. Joseph, wrote that he would take aggressive action in behalf of child welfare measures, and would not veto a bill simply because it carried an appropriation.

John M. Atkinson, Democrat, of St. Louis, replied that he was willing to answer both Dr. Wallin's questions in the affirmative. He said he appeared before the last Legislature in behalf of children's code measures, as a member of a committee representing the Chamber of Commerce.

MAPLE TREE FULL OF SYRUP

Sugar Developed in Trunk Exerts a Pressure Downward.

The maple tree in early springtime becomes a syrup jug. It is mighty good syrup, too, when one can get the real stuff.

The puzzle used to be how and why this happens. Now the secret is understood.

Beneath the bark of the maple's trunk and branches is a cellular structure, in which starch is stored. The starch is food, and when spring comes it is wanted to make new growth.

But the tree cannot digest starch, and therefore the latter is converted by enzymes (inorganic ferments) into sugar. The sugar, dissolved in the tree sap, is carried in the form of a thin syrup to all parts of the tree, distributing nourishment.

The syrup flows upward and outward toward the twigs and budding leaves, and the warmth of the sun causes it to expand. There is gas, too, in the cellular structure of the sap wood, and it expands under the same genial influence.

The result is a pressure downward, and so, when a hole is bored in the tree trunk, the syrup trickles out. A good-sized sugar maple tree will yield 50 quarts, or enough to make three pounds of sugar when boiled down.

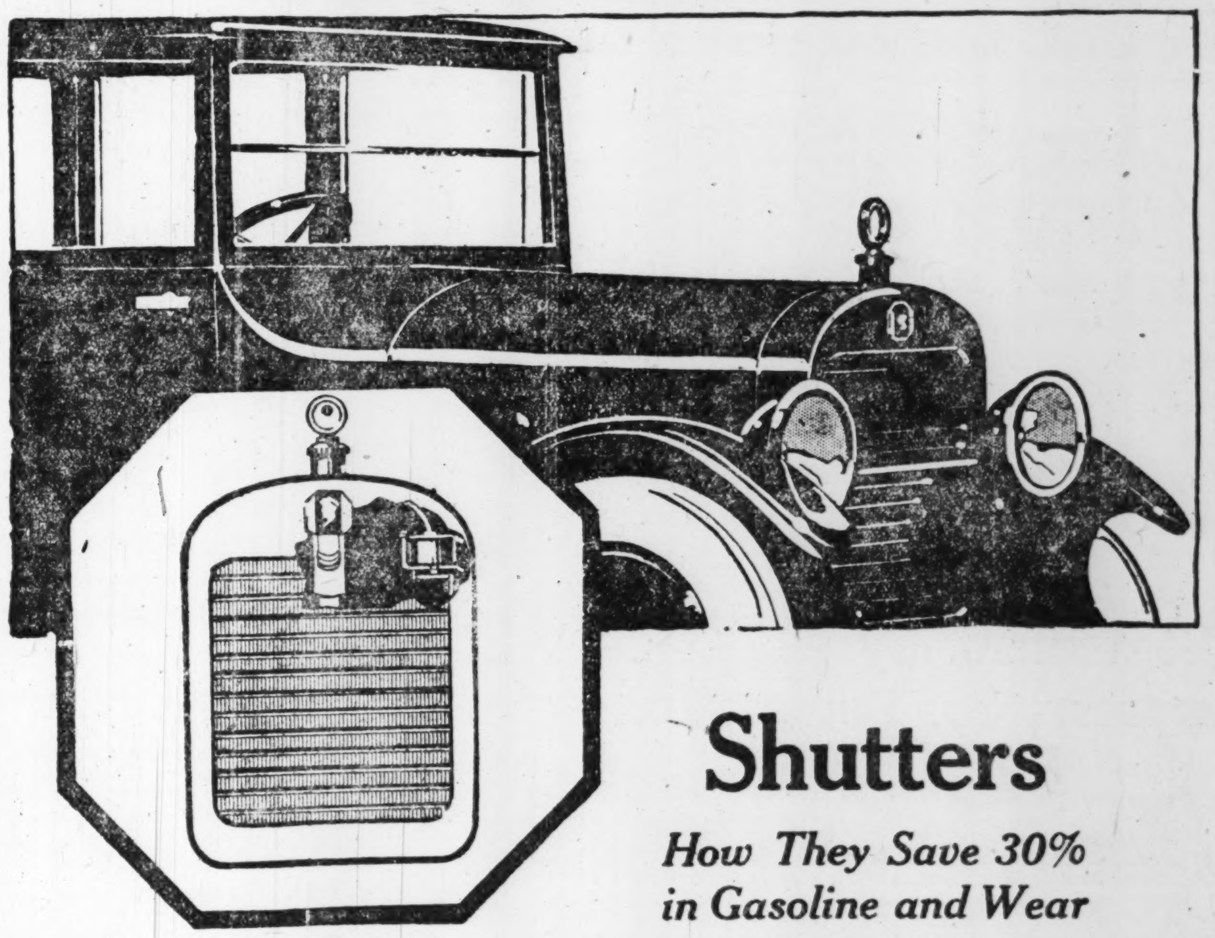
Columbia Six



Shutters

How They Save 30% in Gasoline and Wear

The radiator shutters on the Columbia Six are automatically opened and closed by a powerful thermostat, keeping the motor at the most efficient temperature in winter and summer.

Naturally, this results in a remarkable saving in gasoline and motor wear and tear, averaging around thirty per cent.

There are just two ways to prove this for yourself. One is to ask any owner of a Columbia what automatically controlled shutters save him. The other is to drive a Columbia of your own.

A Device that Thinks and Acts for the Driver

The thermostat is an exclusive Columbia feature.

Columbia owners don't have to worry about carburetor adjustment. The thermostat makes that unnecessary.

They don't have to buy expensive hood covers. The shutters, closed by the thermostat, keep the warm air under the hood.

The thermostat thinks and acts for the driver in winter and summer.

ST. LOUIS U. PAGEANT AT ODEON THIS WEEK

Performances Thursday, Friday and Saturday to Mark 100th Year of Institution.

The St. Louis University Centennial Pageant will be given at the Odeon Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, with Saturday matinee, in celebration of the completion of the hundredth school year of that institution.

The pageant, which has been under rehearsal for more than two months, is described as an allegorical exposition of the life, history and achievements of the university since its establishment and the influence it has exerted in life of the Middle West.

The story of the pageant opens with a picture of the arrival in St. Louis of the founders of the university, and their reception as they step from their bark canoes by a group of savages. An Indian ceremonial dance will mark the close of the first tableau. Scenes of similar character will mark the close of each period until the final tableau, which shows the university as it stands today.

Principal male parts will be enacted by students and former students, among them being Joseph Hardy, who will be the Youth; Jerome Simon in the part of the Evil Genius; Fred Maurer as the Spirit of War; Emmett Taylor as St. Louis, and Lawrence Honig, as Learning. The leading woman role, that of Alma Mater, will be played by Miss Miriam Benoist, while Belgium, the home of the founders of the university, will be taken by Miss Charity Grace.

The first, or Indian scene of the pageant, is handled by the students of the university department of arts; the second and third episodes are in the hands of the department of law. One of the scenes and the final tableau of the second act is being taken care of by the medical students, and the big scene of the third act is being handled by the dental department.

Among the dancing numbers are two Belgian dances, by the students of Loretto College, and a selected group of alumnae from various Catholic acadamies; a dance of the Angels, by the students of Maryville Sacred Heart Academy; the Dance of the Nations, by the students of St. Joseph's Convent, and solo dances by Misses Leonore Cahill, Cornelia McNair and Florence Warner. There will be a chorus of more than 60 members, while the Knights of Columbus Choral Club will handle one of the big scenes.

Although the presentation has been called a pageant, it is in reality, more of a masque. The characters are all allegorical and most of the action is presented through singing and dancing.

FERTILE VALLEYS ONCE LAKES

Seas Once Covered Part of Northern Asia.

Many of the most fertile valleys and plains in the world appear to be the bottoms of ancient lakes laid dry.

Most of the great rivers were formerly successions of lakes, like the St. Lawrence. The level spaces between the Allegheny Mountains and other parallel chains appear to have been inland lakes, until the rivers which descend from these heights formed for themselves exits. The Euxine and Caspian Seas, as well as Lake Aral and several others, are the remains of an extensive sea, which covered the great part of the north of Asia, according to the belief of Peter Simon Pallas, the German naturalist. It has been conjectured that the opening of the Bosphorus was the occasion of the draining of this ocean in the midst of Europe and Asia.

Fund for Jugo-Slav Relief.

Of this amount $95,092.27 was donated by Americans, through the Serbian Aid Fund, organized by Mrs. Grouitch, the American-born wife of the Jugo-Slav Ambassador. The remainder was raised by the Jugo-Slavs of the United States, who have also shipped about $1,000,000 worth of clothing to their war-stricken relatives.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery to others, who took it with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging, he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. All druggists have been appointed agents for Allenrhu in this vicinity with the understanding that he will freely return the purchase money on the first two bottles to all who state they received no benefit.

KNOX RESOLUTION TO END STATE OF WAR PASSED

Alleged 'Master Mind' in $5,000,000 Bond Theft Surrenders and Tells Story of His Flight

RAILROADS, 'ON VERGE OF PARALYSIS,' APPEAL TO I. C. C.

ASK COMMISSION TO DIRECT ALL PASSENGER AND FREIGHT HAULS

Establishment of Priority Loading Orders Similar to Those in Effect During War Urged to Facilitate Movement of Food and Fuel Where Needed.

SHORTAGE OF LABOR AND CARS CAUSES

Lines Ask That Operation of Federal and State Laws Be Suspended in Order to Center Control in Federal Body.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Railroad companies are on the verge of paralysis so far as the effective movement of freight is concerned, according to admission today by the principal carriers in a petition to the Interstate Commerce Commission, requesting the immediate establishment of preference and priority in freight shipments, such as existed in the first stages of the war, and assumption by the commission of all powers delegated to it in emergencies by the transportation act. The petition virtually prays that the Interstate Commerce Commission assume complete charge of the movement of both freight and passengers.

Principal reasons assigned by the carriers for the existence of a developing transportation crisis are: Shortage of labor; shortage of cars and transportation due to restricted equipment building during the war; widespread diversion of equipment during Government control, and unusually heavy traffic in all classes of commodities.

The petition states that, in the opinion of the companies, the situation is such as to warrant and require emergency action similar to that taken when the country entered the war.

The roads ask, also, that they be allowed to curtail passenger service where necessary, but indicated this had been done only in extreme cases.

It was requested that the commission set aside its regular policy of holding formal hearings; that no formal summons be issued, and that no answer be returned. All of this should be done as a means of expediting the effective dates of orders given by the commission, it was explained. The railroad officials represented to the commission that there was no immediate hope of obtaining enough equipment and that no time for proper repairs is permitted.

Ask Use of Emergency Powers.

Continuing, it says:

"Under these conditions, which promise to continue for some period of time, the public interest requires, and the carriers are entitled to ask, the exercise of the emergency powers granted to the commission by the transportation act, so that necessary food, fuel and other vital commodities directly affecting the cost of living and the life and comfort of the people may have preference and priority in movement.

"That equipment, particularly box, refrigerator, stock and coal cars needed to move these commodities may have like preference and priority in movement to those sections of the country where they are currently required for loading.

"That for these purposes and under the orders and directions of the commission, the carriers may be authorized, so far as necessary, to postpone or delay the loading and movement of other less important commodities, including, to the extent that may from time to time be necessary, the reduction of existing passenger service; and generally to take such other action as the commission under the exercise of the powers aforesaid may find proper and necessary, to currently meet the conditions aforesaid.

Suspend State Laws.

$600,000 IN WHISKY DISAPPEARS FROM BONDED WAREHOUSE

Evidence Seized by Prohibition Enforcement Officers in Chicago Missing.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 15.—"The evidence," worth $600,000, upon which Government agents had built their hopes of numerous convictions in illicit liquor operations, has mysteriously disappeared. The confiscated liquor stocks secured in raids between July and Jan. 16, and stored in the Sibley warehouse, has gone from there and left no trace, it is declared.

This is a bonded warehouse, and supposed to be surrounded by all the safeguards the Government thought necessary. It was noticed that when a case came to trial, the particular liquor seized in that case was missing.

A force of auditors went to the warehouse today to check up the confiscated stocks, but there was nothing to check up. How the smuggling away of this immense quantity of liquor was carried on is a mystery.

Auditors are said to have found records incomplete, with no receipts for liquor withdrawn.

Disappearance of the evidence means that the Government suits against several persons for violation of the prohibition act will fall flat.

WHISKY PRESCRIPTIONS NOT LIMITED WHEN MERITORIOUS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Physicians are not limited to 100 whisky prescriptions every three months if more are required for meritorious cases. This interpretation of a recent ruling was given today by Prohibition Commissioner Kramer to Representative Dyer of St. Louis, who had received complaints against the limitation.

Kramer said that the ruling was a "caution" to State officers against permitting the issuance of too many prescriptions, but that there was no limit on the number that might be issued where they were necessary.

FATHER OF TRAIN ROBBER DIES ON WAY TO GET BODY

End Comes in Bucklin, Mo., Hotel, to Man, 70, Whose Son Was Killed in Chicago $75,000 Robbery.

BANDIT'S MOTHER NUMBED BY SORROW

Son Had Been Well Behaved Until He Left St. Joseph Recently, Ostensibly to Seek a Job.

(By Long-Distance Telephone From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.)

BUCKLIN, Mo., May 15.—The hand of tragedy has fallen with crushing force upon the aged shoulders of Mrs. L. T. Walton. Yesterday morning her son, Horace, 22 years old, was shot to death in Chicago while trying to escape with the loot from a mail car he had robbed, and today her husband, 70 years old, died here from the shock caused by his son's tragic end.

Tonight, in the lonely room of a hotel, surrounded by strangers and bowed beneath an overwhelming weight of sorrow, she waited helplessly for the arrival of a friend, to advise her whether to continue on her journey to Chicago to get the body of her son, or to accompany the body of her husband back to their home in St. Joseph.

Three weeks ago Horace Walton, a well-behaved young man who had been graduated from the St. Joseph High School, and who was an active member of the Y. M. C. A., said good-by to his aged parents and departed for Chicago, ostensibly in search of work. Yesterday they received the grim news that he had perpetrated a daring holdup, stolen $75,000, mortally wounded one policeman and wounded another in an attempt to escape, and finally, brought to bay in an apartment house, had been riddled with bullets by the police rifle squad with which he had battled desperately.

Became Ill on Train.

The feeble old couple prepared to go to Chicago to claim the body and boarded a train in St. Joseph last night.

Soon afterwards Mr. Walton fell critically ill, and it was necessary to remove him from the train to a hotel here. A physician was summoned, but he failed rapidly, and expired shortly before noon today.

Mrs. Walton was alone. Sympathetic strangers ministered to her as best they could, but there was little they could offer in the face of what had come to her. Death's second descent upon her family within 36 hours left her numb to their offers of sympathy. Sitting in the bare and desolate little hotel room, beside the bed upon which lay the body of her companion, she asked only that some friend be summoned to tell her what she should do.

She waited tonight, sleepless but dry-eyed, for the silence of the village to be broken by the incoming train upon which a St. Joseph neighbor was coming to take charge of the body, and accompany her back to the remnants of her home. Other friends, it was said, would go to Chicago for the remains of the youth whose ill-starred but bold adventure cost his own life, his father's, and left his mother's a pathetic wreck.

Waltons, Father and Son, May Be Buried at Champaign, Ill.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 15.—A. B. Sanford, assistant manager of the Hotel Robidoux here, where L. T. Walton was employed as night clerk, left tonight for Bucklin. He said he would meet Mrs. Walton there and if she is physically able they will take Walton's body to Chicago. Burial of father and son probably will be at Champaign, Ill., the former home of the Waltons, he said. The father and mother had planned to bury the body of young Walton beside relatives in a Chicago cemetery.

An inquest will be held at Bucklin tomorrow morning, according to Sanford. Walton had been in poor health for several years.

Reports connecting Horace Walton with a big holdup in Detroit two years ago are denied by former

UNRECOGNIZED IN PASSING NEW YORK POLICE PARADE ON WAY TO GIVE SELF UP

Spends Night in Jail Despite $60,000 Bail That Had Been Prepared—Contempt of Court Charge May Be Held Against Him.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Jules W. (Nicky) Arnstein, putative master mind of New York's $5,000,000 bond theft plot, got away with his joke today, in entering the city and surrendering in the face of the police without recognition by them, but he did not succeed in his carefully laid plans to keep out of jail.

Despite his triumphal entry into the city early in the morning, his success in surrendering himself to the District Attorney's office before the police knew he was in town, and his ability to supply the $75,000 bail required to hold him on the charge of grand larceny, Nicky's great desire to remain at liberty was twice thwarted.

In the middle of the day, after bail on the larceny charge was fixed at $75,000, instead of the expected $60,000, Nicky had to languish for two hours in the Tombs, while a bond broker was hustling to raise the added $15,000.

Then, when he walked out of the Tombs, he enjoyed only a moment of liberty before he became a Federal prisoner on a writ which Saul S. Myers, counsel for the National Surety Co., had obtained from Federal Judge Knox. This was a surprise to Nicky.

Before Judge Knox, Nicky was held in $25,000 bail, making $100,000 in all, that he was required to furnish during the day, and was ordered to testify before United States Commissioner Gilcrist in the involuntary bankruptcy proceedings the National Surety Co. started against him in February.

Spends Night in Jail.

His refusal to answer questions before Commissioner Gilchrist led to his return before Judge Knox, who is considering whether to hold him in contempt of court. Meanwhile, he was locked up in Ludlow Street Jail tonight.

As soon as he was sent to jail for the second time, his friends began to scurry around in the hope of raising $25,000 more to gain freedom for Nicky. Until the tables were turned by Meyers, everything was going Nicky's way, and even though he had to go to jail he was able to console himself with the thought that he outwitted the police. Moreover, he had not remained in the Tombs—his pet aversion. Nicky was arrested in the District Attorney's office when he appeared there with his wife, Fannie Brice, the actress, and his attorney, William J. Fallon.

Among the offenses laid to Arnstein and his associates are the thefts of negotiable bonds, usually Liberty Bonds, valued at more than $5,000,000. Messengers employed by Wall street houses were parties to these robberies, according to the District Attorney's office.

Easily Eluded Police.

The elusive "Nicky" for whom the police from coast to coast and even the Canadian authorities have been searching since last February, in finally fulfilling his oft-repeated promise to surrender himself, appeared at the District Attorney's office bright and early.

According to his story, he arrived at the Pennsylvania terminal from Pittsburg at 9 o'clock this morning and went directly to Columbus avenue and Ninetieth street where, by pre-arrangement, he was met by his wife, Fannie Brice, an actress, in her automobile. He used her machine, he said, because the police had listed the number of his own car.

Passes Police Parade.

Finding Miss Brice and Fallon awaiting him, he entered the machine and drove down Fifth avenue with them in broad daylight. Despite the fact that his pictures, with advertisements offering a reward for his arrest have appeared in newspapers over all the continent, he sped down the thoroughfare unrecognized.

Just to heighten the effect, "Nicky" ran into his police pursuers, thousands strong, forming for the annual New York police parade.

The Arnstein car held up for several minutes as the blue coats fell in line and when he continued on his way to the Criminal Courts Building, "Nicky" passed mile after mile of policemen, reviewing them from his machine, as it were.

When Arnstein's machine passed the grand stand erected for the police parade, he arose from his seat and mockingly lifted his hat to the high officials of the New York police force. Fearing he would be recognized, Miss Brice pulled her husband down into his seat, and some of the police, misinterpreting the scene, concluded it must be a fight, and started toward the machine, but were reassured by the three passengers, and returned to the parade.

A score of detectives were leaving the Criminal Courts Building when Arnstein arrived there. Just to make a spectacular finish, Arnstein had the car driven around the building several times, and then stopped under the bridge of sighs. Leaving the automobile, the trio entered the building unrecognized.

An elevator operator and not a detective, was the first to recognize the elusive "Nicky." Benny Jackman who runs one of the lifts in the building, had his curiosity aroused by the mysterious car encircling the structure. He said he was pretty well convinced it was Arnstein when he saw a man dressed in a business suit, with a heavy blue overcoat and a gray golf cap, get out of the car.

"Nicky" Arnstein's Story of His Flight On Discovery of Bond Plot Feb. 12

Jules W. (Nicky) Arnstein today gave to the New York World the following exclusive account of his movements since he disappeared from New York City February 12.):

NEW YORK, May 15.—Jules W. (Nicky) Arnstein, Fannie Brice, his actress wife, and William J. Fallon, their attorney, were discovered by a reporter for the World at 9:30 this morning in a slowly moving automobile at Fifth avenue and Fifty-ninth street.

The reporter had received a tip late Friday night that Arnstein would made a triumphant entry into the city some time during the early hours of the morning, and, suiting the occasion to such a momentous public event, would naturally come down Fifth avenue on his way to the Criminal Courts Building.

It was declared that Arnstein would surrender in time to view the police parade and cheer some of the bluecoats who have been assigned to hunt for him since Feb. 12. The discovery of him riding down Fifth avenue did not completely surprise the reporter, who had kept vigil since midnight.

Traffic was moving slowly at the time of the discovery. Driving the car was Bill Fallon, whose beaming countenance was partially hidden by a new plaid cap. The lawyer-chauffeur was hailed and the automobile stopped. The lawyer invited the reporter to jump up behind him.

In stepping into the car, Fallon's derby hat, which lay on the floor, was crushed, and Arnstein and his wife laughed. They sat holding hands in the back seat of the automobile and immediately invited the reporter to sit between them, which invitation he accepted.

On the way down Fifth avenue, policemen all dolled up for the parade passed in busses and automobiles and cast only a casual glance at the occupants. Even the traffic police, all of whom knew $2500 reward was offered for the capture of Arnstein, showed extreme courtesy in their duty toward the shining car. Some of them smiled a friendly greeting.

Arnstein is a most affable fellow, with a very engaging smile. Frequently during the ride of triumph downtown he reached over and tightly squeezed his wife's hand.

"You don't know how glad I am to be once more with my husband, who is not guilty of the crimes of which he is charged," said Mrs. Arnstein. "Oh, gee! look at the fine-looking cop standing over there on the corner of Forty-fifth street. Say, hubby, I'll bet he would be a Tartar when aroused."

"I wouldn't be surprised," answered Arnstein, with a broad smile, nudging the reporter.

Mrs. Arnstein commented on the change in his appearance through the absence of his mustache.

"Oh, well, Fannie, I had that shaved off in Cleveland, as I recall. I didn't want certain people to be-

PACKERS' PROFITS QUADRUPLED IN FIRST WAR YEARS

"Big Five" Averaged $192,000,000 From 1915 to 1917, Says Special Report of Trade Commission.

"ACCOUNTS NOT KEPT BY ACCEPTED FORMS"

"Methods Do Not Show Profit Based on Percentage of Investment"—Advertising Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Profits made by the big meat packing companies in the first three years of the war, 1915 to 1917, "doubled, trebled and quadrupled," according to a special report of the Federal Trade Commission made public tonight.

From 1912 to 1914, the report said, the "Big Five"—Morris & Co., Wilson & Co., Cudahy Packing Co., Armour & Co., and Swift & Co.—made average annual profits of $59,000,000, while in the next three years their net return averaged $192,000,000.

The commission called attention to the packers' announcement that profits amounted to "only two or three cents per dollar of sales" and said that in an industry like those under consideration which turn over a product rapidly, this is the equivalent of a high rate of return on net worth (15 per cent or more).

"Rate on investment, not rate on sales, furnishes the correct method whereby the reasonableness of profits may be determined," the report added.

Financial statistics used by the packers in their recent advertising campaign "are not based on accepted methods of determining costs and accordingly dependence cannot be placed upon them," the report said. "The whole accounting system of the packers must be revised before dependable figures can be found showing costs and profits by specific products or even for the business as a whole."

At the beginning of 1919 the report estimated the combined assets of the big five at $1,300,000,000, their combined net worth at $535,000,000 and aggregate sales for previous year at $3,200,000,000. And the several companies have grown to these proportions principally from profits retained "in the business," it added.

Profits retained have been generally capitalized by issuance of stock dividends, it was said, so that of the present outstanding stock, "only about forty per cent represents cash contributions on the part of stockholders."

KNOWS HIS FORD CHUG AND NABS MAN 'BORROWING' IT

Belleville Owner's Testimony Convincing to Court and Defendant Gets $10 and Costs Fine.

Every Ford automobile has a chugging all its own, or so said Oliver Funk of Belleville, in a Justice Court there yesterday, when he explained how he apprehended Aloys Volshaller, 18 years old, of Bartelso, Ill., Friday night in the act of driving the Funk Ford down East Main street from its parking place in front of a saloon.

Funk said he was drinking with a friend when he heard that distinctive chug which marks his car, whereupon he rushed out and pummelled Volshaller severely.

Volshaller told the Judge he was not stealing the car, but only "borrowing it to take a couple of girls for a joy ride." He was fined $10 and costs.

"EPIDEMIC OF GIRL BABIES"

PARIS, May 15.—France is suffering from a peculiar affliction and the authorities, medical men and social economists are much concerned about it.

"An epidemic of girl babies is sweeping over the country," as a certain magistrate put it. Naturally, France, whose man power was so greatly reduced by the war, desires that many more boy babies than girls should come into her world.

SENATE VOTE 43 TO 38, THREE DEMOCRATS SUPPORTING MEASURE

Reed of Missouri, Shields of Tennessee and Walsh of Massachusetts Vote With Republicans.

TWO REPUBLICANS IN OPPOSITION

President Is Expected to Veto Measure as Soon as It Reaches Him; Underwood's Views in Debate.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The Senate this afternoon, according to schedule, indulged in the political gesture of passing the Knox peace resolution, declaring the state of war with Germany and Austria at an end. After concurrence by the House, whose own resolution declaring a formal state of peace was discarded in favor of that proposed by the Senator from Pennsylvania, the measure will be sent to the President. Nobody here doubts that a veto will be forthcoming.

The vote, 43 to 38, was almost strictly along party lines. Only Nelson of Minnesota and McCumber of North Dakota, both mild reservationists in the treaty fight, broke from the ranks of the Republican majority. Nelson's vote was counted against the resolution, and McCumber, though not actually voting, was paired against it. On the Democratic side, Reed, Shields of Tennessee and Walsh of Massachusetts voted with the anti-administration forces. Gore of Oklahoma would have done so had he been present.

For the first time since the rejection of the treaty, the galleries were packed and crowds stood at the doorways. The House adjourned early and many Representatives watched the proceedings from the rear of the chamber. Postmaster-General Burleson, who is always on hand on important political occasions, occupied a seat on the Democratic side.

Usually a big crowd of listeners has an inspiring effect on senatorial oratory, but today the speechmaking proceeded on a mediocre level.

Senator Harding tickled the crowd when he referred to Senator Jones, first as the Senator from Arizona, then as the Senator from Arkansas, and finally credited him again to Arizona. The Jones in question hails from New Mexico.

Galleries Are Packed.

Again the galleries laughed when Senator Hitchcock in the midst of an impassioned sentence, at five minutes to four, the hour set for the vote, declined to yield to a Republican who wanted to get something said. Vice President Marshall administered his customary mild rebuke to the disturbers and doorkeepers went among the crowds telling them to keep quiet.

The only discordant note on the Republican side came from that sturdy old viking, Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota, who makes no bones of his dislike of the "irreconcilable" policy that killed the treaty. Harding was saying that passage of the resolution would serve notice on the world that no one man could run the United States of America.

"Can 12 men on this side of the chamber run America?" interrupted Nelson.

"Well," retorted Harding, "they can do it better than one."

Senator Hitchcock, who made the main Democratic plea for rejection of the resolution took a cue from Nelson's remark and declared the measure was designed for no practical purpose, no altruistic purpose but only for the purpose of showing that not the President, but certain Senators are "running the country."

Roll Call on Resolution.

The roll call on adoption of the resolution follows:

REED AND KING PROPOSE REPEAL OF MANY WAR LAWS

WASHINGTON, May 15.

BILLS calling for the repeal of much war legislation were introduced today by Senators Reed of Missouri and King of Utah, both Democrats. Senator Reed, in one resolution, proposed the repeal of all war-time extensions of the President's powers, while the Senator King proposed repeal of the Overman and the trading with the enemy acts, as well as statutes authorizing the Shipping Board to suspend the law in order to permit foreign-owned vessels to engage in coastwise trade.

OVERSIZE DELEGATIONS MAY BE CONTESTED AT CHICAGO

Right of Extra Delegates to Sit in G. O. P. Convention to Be Decided by Committee.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 15.—The right of oversize delegations to the Republican national convention, elected already by several states, to sit in the meeting will be decided by the Contest Committee.

Examination today of the convention call discloses that it provides that contests shall be deemed to exist wherever a state elects more delegates than provided for by the call.

As a result, the right of Mayor William Hale Thompson, Republican national committeeman from Illinois, to representation on the State's "big eight" will be contested. The Republican State convention chose a "big 10" instead of the eight delegates at large to which the State is entitled, giving each of the 10 four-fifths of a vote. Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Nevada and Virginia have elected double delegations, with a half vote each, and Texas is said to be planning the same action.

DANIELS DECLARES NAVY PREPARED AS FUNDS PERMITTED

Says Dewey's Preparedness Plan Was Carried Out as Far as Possible—Decline During Taft Regime.

"WILSON 3 YEARS AHEAD OF PUBLIC"

In Refuting Sims' Charges, Secretary Declares George von L. Meyer Did Not Provide Enlisted Men.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Secretary Daniels' testimony today before the Senate Naval Investigating Committee was devoted to answering Rear Admiral Sims' charges that the navy was not properly prepared for war in 1917, and that adequate steps toward complete preparedness had not been taken after the world war started. He reviewed naval records of the Roosevelt and Taft administrations and his own recommendations from 1913 to 1917, and said:

"President Wilson and Congress were in advance of public opinion in 1913 when three dreadnoughts were authorized as against one in 1912.

"In view of the war needs," he continued, "I grant you that it (the navy) was too small in all these years, but the record is complete refutation of the criticisms you have heard regarding securing personnel, ships and munitions before the United States entered the war."

Dewey Prepared Plans.

After the European war broke out Admiral Dewey, then head of the General Board, submitted a plan for preparedness that was approved and carried out "as far as the funds granted by Congress would permit," Daniels said.

"The shortage of enlisted men charged by Admiral Sims, like the shortage of officers," Daniels said, "was inherited by the Wilson administration."

Former Secretary George Von L. Meyer, of the Taft administration, came in for criticism in this connection. Daniels charging that Meyer failed to provide a single enlisted man toward overcoming the shortage that existed when President Taft took office. It was not until the Wilson administration that any effort was made to establish a real naval reserve, he charged.

Not Enough Midshipmen.

Shortage of officers, was due, he said, to the fact that for many years prior to 1916 there had not been enough midshipmen appointed to the Naval Academy.

"As it takes four years to graduate an Ensign, any lack of officers in 1916 could not fairly be charged to the Wilson administration," the witness asserted, adding that he began taking steps to correct the shortage when he took office.

Daniels outlined his views of future naval building programs and reiterated his recent statement before the House Naval Committee that unless the United States should become a member of the League of Nations, it must build a navy at least equal to any other in the world. He said he would recommend renewal of the three-year building program if the league covenant should not be ratified.

Fell Back Under Taft.

He told the committee that when he assumed his post he found the navy under President Taft had "fallen back" as the United States, which had advanced to second place among naval powers in 1907, dropped back to third in 1911.

"Between March, 1913, and September, 1916, the navy was increased in personnel, material and efficiency more than in any similar place period in our history," said the Secretary.

The pre-war attitude of the United States towards preparedness was shown by President Roosevelt's message to Congress in 1905, declaring that "it does not seem to me necessary that the navy should—at least in the immediate future—be increased beyond the present number of units," said Daniels. President Roosevelt and President Taft were both forced to take the positions they did toward naval building by public opinion, the witness said.

Wilson Message No Criticism of British Navy, London Mail Says.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 15.—"President Wilson and the Admiralty" is the subject of an editorial in the Daily Mail, which says:

"There has been a tendency in some quarters here to treat President Wilson's private message to Admiral Sims as reflecting upon the British navy and its work during the war. That is to mistake facts. The President's message did not criticise the navy, but urged the importance of a strong offensive policy on the Admiralty. It said much less than the Daily Mail had previously said, and, as events have proved, with good cause.

"So far back as April 30, 1917, in dealing with the rapid and dangerous development of the submarine campaign, the Daily Mail pointed out that the war at sea could never be won and the U-boats defeated with 'a weak naval policy which can only be described as a theory of passive defense.' In this view many of the younger and many of the senior officers of the British navy concurred. President Wilson, in advising the most vigorous and aggressive naval policy possible, was thus urging the reform without which the war could not have been won. The reform was effected with the most glorious results."

come too inquisitive as to my personal appearance," said Arnstein. "There's the Waldorf. Many a good meal I have had in that hotel, and I hope to have some more with you, Fannie, and we will invite our reporter friend along."

"You bet we will, and we want him to come to the house as well, so he can see what a wonderful baby girl we have," said Arnstein's wife.

"Say, tell me over and over again how she is," said Arnstein, with a tremor in his voice.

"She is just cooing all the time for you, Jules, and is a perfect wonder," replied the actress.

Arnstein's Exclusive Interview.

Arnstein then gave the following exclusive interview to the reporter:

"All I ask is a square deal in this matter. I want to be brought to trial as soon as possible and feel sure I will be acquitted of any connection with the bond thefts. I am innocent of all the charges against me. I can't understand why the newspapers have called me the 'Master Mind' in the plot.

"I had about as much to do with the thefts as an unborn child. It is most humiliating to be held up to public ridicule as a thief and crook when a man knows he is innocent. Nevertheless, I am going to face all the charges against me and then the public will finally know that I am innocent of the crimes of which the authorities have accused me.

"I left New York Feb. 11 and went to Buffalo on a business trip in the interest of a moving picture project. While in Buffalo I read in the newspapers that I was wanted in connection with a $5,000,000 bond plot.

"I was called the 'Master Mind' and many other names, which were all untrue. I went from Buffalo to Cleveland, where I met some old friends. It was in that city I learned that the District Attorney's office in New York demanded that my bail bond would be fixed at $100,000.

Was Waiting to Arrange Bail.

"I want to say right now that I would have surrendered many weeks ago, but up to today it had been impossible to obtain such high bail. I got into communication with some friends in New York who retained Eugene F. McGee and William J. Fallon as my lawyers.

"McGee visited me in Cleveland at the Winton Hotel, I think on Washington's birthday. We talked about my case about half an hour, and the lawyer told me he would return to New York and make every effort to raise the $100,000 or have it reduced.

"A few days later, while in Cleveland, I read in the papers that McGee had left New York with three detectives to bring me back, but nothing was said about any bond. I did not want to go to jail, so I left Cleveland for Pittsburg.

"I have been in Pittsburg ever since—that is, up to within three days ago, when I arrived in the outskirts of New York City. I was glad to be home again, I can assure you, and to meet my brave wife, who has stood by me through all my troubles. A man is most fortunate to have such a wonderful woman—that is the kind Fannie is—the woman who will stand by you through thick and thin. To her I owe everything, my Fannie.

Worried About Wife and Baby.

"I haven't worried about myself at all, but always of how Fannie was taking all this trouble, and how our dear baby girl was getting along. Fannie is just as good a mother as she is a wife. Next to my wife, I love Frances better than anything in the world. She was just 6 months old the day I left for Buffalo and I have not seen the dear little girl since. I hope to clasp her to my breast and shower her with kisses before night. I certainly love that child."

"Where did you stop in Pittsburgh?" Arnstein was asked.

"At a boarding house in the center of the city. I am naturally a great lover of the theater, and almost every night I went either to a moving picture show or a good first-class play.

"I roamed the streets of Pittsburgh at will, except on two occasions when I heard detectives from the District Attorney's office here were close on my trail. Then, of course, I kept under cover for a few days.

"I don't think the police looked after me very hard in Pittsburgh or I might possibly have been caught."

"Have you met Ed Strong, the Cleveland lawyer, recently?"

"No, not since I was in Cleveland. Strong has always been a good friend to both Fannie and me. He has large interests in the moving picture business, and up to the time of this trouble was going to promote my wife in the movies.

"Every story that has been published about me in connection with bond thefts is absolutely untrue. I read that Joe Gluck said he had turned over more than $600,000 to me and Cohen, and that we disposed of them through David W. Sullivan & Co. I never had any dealings with this Gluck youngster and I don't believe I know him.

"I don't know anything about any stolen securities turned over to Sullivan & Co., or any other such transactions. When the time comes I will prove my innocence and have been anxious to do so right along, only that big bail asked stood always in the way.

"I wish to reiterate that I am innocent of any wrongdoing and have never touched any of the stolen securities procured by dishonest messengers down in Wall street."

Underwood's Declaration.

Delivering his first important address since he was elected Democratic leader, Senator Underwood charged the Republicans with responsibility for the present situation and their peace resolution, he declared, would not "accomplish results that would be beneficial to the American people."

"The Republicans took the responsibility of returning the treaty to the President without amendment or suggested amendment," Senator Underwood continued. "In that way the treaty was rejected by the majority party so far as it was possible for them to reject it. It could not be expected that under those circumstances the President would proceed further with the negotiations unless it was indicated by the Senate that some amendment could be agreed to, and no such suggestion has been made."

Declaring the majority had the power to strike out the League of Nations covenant, from the treaty by amendment, Senator Underwood added:

"If that had been done, all that is desired by this resolution would have been done and more.

"Peace cannot be accomplished by the pending resolution," Senator Underwood continued, "although it attempts to tie the United States under the terms of the Versailles treaty and declare peace thereby. I am perfectly willing to admit that, hostilities have ceased, and that the status of peace between belligerent countries can be established and recognized silently, by the passage of time, but that time has not yet come.

"The resolution seeks to repeal war legislation, much of which is not acceptable or necessary to our people in time of peace. That can easily be done by direct methods. Yet the political party which has a majority in both houses of Congress, and which I do not represent, has taken no step looking towards its appeal by direct action."

"Only by Contract—a Treaty."

Only by contract—a treaty—can diplomatic and commercial relations with Germany be legally established, Senator Underwood declared.

Conceding that if the Versailles treaty were not ratified, another treaty would have to be negotiated, Senator Underwod asked why Senator Lodge, the Republican leader, had stricken from the Knox resolution the provision requesting the President to negotiate a separate treaty to restore diplomatic and commercial relations.

Senator Knox, author of the peace resolution, said he had consented to elimination of the clause, because with the state of war ended, it would be the "obvious duty of the President to negotiate a treaty of peace with Germany."

"The only object of that provision," said Knox, "was to accentuate that fact. I didn't care to rub it in on the President."

"There is just one way to make peace," Senator Underwood continued, "that's by a treaty. To say that it can be done by resolution seems to me an idle declaration.

"This is the year when we must go to the country for the election of a President and Congress. The majority party has been in control for a year. It has taken not one step towards the repeal of war legislation. This is nowhere near the close of the session of Congress. I'm not surprised that my friends on the other side are not willing to close the books without some demonstration of their willingness to meet their responsibility. How are they doing it? At the eleventh hour they bring forward a proposal that they know cannot become a law, that cannot be effective. I do not blame them, but do they think the American people are blind?"

Senator Myers, Democrat, Montana, said he opposed the resolution with reluctance and because it imposed no terms of punishment on Germany or the former Kaiser.

SOCIALISTS ASK THAT MRS. O'HARE AND DEBS BE FREED

Petition for Release of Party's Presidential Nominee Presented to Tumulty at the White House.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The Socialist party's petition for the release of its presidential nominee, Eugene V. Debs and other Federal prisoners, was taken to the White House today by the special committee named by the recent Socialist convention in New York.

Accompanied by more than 100 delegates to the convention, the committee formally presented the petition to Secretary Tumulty, who said he would call it to the attention of President Wilson. It was laid before Attorney-General Palmer yesterday and will be presented to Secretary Baker at the War Department Monday.

Seymour Stedman, the party's vice presidential candidate, headed the delegation and made a special plea to Secretary Tumulty for a pardon for Debs, who, he said, had been convicted on faulty evidence and had been unfairly represented to the people by the newspapers throughout the country.

An argument on behalf of Kate Richards O'Hare, serving a sentence at the Jefferson City penitentiary on conviction of having violated the espionage act, was made by George E. Roewer of Boston, another member of the committee.

Secretary Tumulty asked many questions about the two cases and requested that a list of all other prisoners for whom relief was sought be sent to the White House.

"These are serious matters," said Tumulty, "and I am sure the President will give them conscientious consideration."

Delegates to the national convention of the Socialist party, which closed in New York last night, accompanied by many members of the party, came by special train this morning.

An amendment to the party constitution providing that delegates to international, national, state and local conventions as well as members of executive and other governing committees must be citizens of the United States was adopted at the closing session last night.

The convention also adopted the minority report of the Committee on Industrial Relations which recommended that the party refrain from interfering with the trade union movement. The majority report urged active propaganda among the trade unions.

CARRANZA SAID TO HAVE CUT HIS WAY THROUGH TO SOUTH

Obregon Had Sent Messenger Offering President Safe Conduct to Leave Country if He Surrendered

By the Associated Press.

EL PASO, Tex., May 15.—Revolutionary forces attacking President Carranza's convoy near Rinconada, in the State of Puebla, have captured of the money, archives and valuables Carranza took with him on his flight from Mexico City, according to a message received by revolutionary agents here tonight from General Alvaro Obregon at Mexico City.

The valuables were captured from trains which accompanied President Carranza, according to the message, and are valued at many millions of dollars. The treasury cars were being returned to Mexico City.

MEXICO CITY, May 13.—(Via Laredo Junction, Tex.—May 15.) Governor De La Huerta to day issued a call for the Mexican National Congress to assemble May 24 to name a provisional president.

By the Associated Press.

EL PASO, Tex., May 15.—Reports from Laredo, Tex., and Nogales, Ariz, that President Carranza and his escort of 800 men had been captured by the revolutionary forces of Gen. Guaralupe Sanchez, operating in the state of Puebla, lacked confirmation here tonight, according to revolutionary leaders.

General Robelo, former Carranza commander in the State of Morelos, has issued a manifesto in Mexico City, declaring that his reason for joining the revolution was the issuance of an order to him by the Carranza government to kill General Alvaro Obregon, candidate for the presidency of the Republic, Senor de Oca said. In his flight from Mexico City, April 13, General Obregon was compelled to pass through Morelos, and Robelo had been ordered to intercept and slay the fugitive, it was claimed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Venustiano Carranza, Constitutional President of Mexico, was pictured today by Alvaro Obregon, who forced him to flee from the capital a week ago, as a fugitive in the mountains somewhere between Mexico City and Vera Cruz.

Official reports on the fight near San Marcos between the revolutionary forces and a few loyal detachments of Carranza's army were lacking, but press dispatches from Vera Cruz also told of Carranza's escape through the revolutionary lines, apparently setting at rest all reports of the deposed leader's surrender.

There were indications that the revolutionists' attack had not been pressed, due, it is believed, to Obregon's orders. Obregon had sent a messenger to Carranza to offer him safe conduct to leave the country if he desired to surrender, and strict injunction was placed on the revolutionary officers not to injure the President if he were captured.

Obregon's report said Carranza, accompanied by a small escort, was making for the surrounding mountains, but that he was being pursued.

Obregon and Pablo Gonzales have indorsed Antonio Villareal for Provisional President.

Capture of Gen. Dieguez and Staff by Sonorans Confirmed.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, May 15 (via Laredo Junction).—Reports that Gen. Manuel Dieguez had been captured were confirmed Wednesday by a wireless dispatch from Guadalajara, given out by Obregon headquarters and signed by Col. Isais Castro, stating that Dieguez, together with his staff, and Gen. Sebastian Allende, are imprisoned.

Obregon's headquarters announce that permission has been given Gen. Guadalupe Sanchez to allow Gen. Candido Aguilar to pass through revolutionary lines to confer with President Carranza with a view to avoiding more bloodshed. Gen. Aguilar later to surrender.

With forces under Gen. Sanchez opposing assaults by Gen. Francisco Murguia, who is attempting to cut a way through toward Vera Cruz, revolutionary forces under Gen. Cosio Robelo have left Puebla with the object of attacking Carranza forces from the rear. Heavy casualties are reported in Gen. Murguia's last four assaults in the vicinity of Ricorada.

Gen. Jacinto Trevino, with a safe conduct for President Carranza and his official family, is also en route from Puebla toward the scene of fighting.

Gen. Antonio Villareal is apparently the leading candidate for the presidency since Gen. Pablo Gonzales stated in an interview that Villareal was acceptable, while leading Obregonists are quoted as favoring him.

Other names being mentioned include Iglesia Calderon, Juan Sanchez Azcona and Gen. Jacinto Trevino.

Vera Cruz Report Shows Heavy Fighting Is Going On.

By the Associated Press.

VERA CRUZ, May 15.—President Venustiano Carranza, who, with loyal followers, has been fighting a grim battle against revolutionary forces near San Marcos for the past five days, has escaped capture, at least temporarily, according to dispatches from the battle zone.

Accompanied by 1000 of his men, the President has broken through the insurgent lines near Chalchicomula, about 50 miles east of Puebla, and is believed to be in the mountainous country between Puebla and Oaxaca, according to the report. He left behind him a force of Government soldiers which still is fighting in an effort to delay pursuit of the fugitive chief executive.

British Agent Who Was With Carranza Reaches Vera Cruz.

By the Associated Press.

GALVESTON, Tex., May 15.—W. A. Body, British consular agent at Vera Cruz, who was reported with President Carranza, and for whose safety fears were entertained, reached Vera Cruz tonight, according to private dispatches received here.

The dispatches made no mention of the two Americans said to have accompanied Consul Body.

Former Junta Head Here May Be Mexican President

Antonio I. Villareal, Reported Chosen for Executive Post Pending the Holding of Election—Arrested at Instance of Diaz, but Released.

by Paul Thompson

GENERAL ANTONIO VILLAREAL

Antonio I. Villareal (pronounced Vee-yah-ray-al), who, according to late dispatches is to be provisional President of Mexico, pending the holding of an election by the Revolutionary Government, was the head of the St. Louis Mexican revolutionary junta of 1908, when Porfirio Diaz was still supreme in Mexico.

With Ricardo Flores Magon and Juan Sarabia, and with Vallareal's two sisters, Andrea and Teresa Villareal, he conducted a revolutionary paper, "Regeneracion," printed in Spanish, from a house on Channing avenue, near Olive street. The paper was sent to comrades in Texas, and was sent by them across the border into Mexico.

The Diaz Government complained to the United States, and Federal agents arrested the men of the junta on the charge of violating the neutrality laws of the United States. They were released, but were not permitted to resume publication of their paper here.

Villareal and Magon removed to Los Angeles, and were later in trouble with Federal agents there. Sarabia went or was abducted into Mexico, and was confined in the dungeon of San Juan de Ulua, in the harbor of Vera Cruz, his place of imprisonment being below the water level.

Villareal joined in a plan, headed by Magon, for Socialist commonwealth in Lower California. After this plan failed, he worked for a time as a street railway laborer in Los Angeles.

After Madero had overthrown Diaz and established himself as President Sarabia was released, and Vallareal was commissioned as an envoy to Spain.

Villareal took part in Carranza's revolt against Huerta, and became known for his severity against the Mexican authorities of the Catholic Church. As Governor of the State of Nuevo Leon, he for a time prohibited the ringing of church bells, except to celebrate victories of the Constitutionalist forces.

He was on friendly terms with both Carranza and Villa at the time of their break, and made several attempts to reconcile them.

Accounts of Villareal's early life, published in 1914, when he was prominent in the Constitutionalist ranks, stated that he served four years in prison for killing a young man. At that time, Villareal was a school teacher. When he became Governor of Nuevo Leon, it was related, he had the pleasure of sending to prison the Judge who had sentenced him.

Villareal speaks English, and has shown himself friendly to Americans in the parts of Mexico where he has held political office.

STOCK DIVIDEND TAX FOR BONUS VOTE TIED

House Committe Fight to Be Renewed When Democrats Join Republicans This Week.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—On a tie vote, with one member absent, Republican supporters of a stock dividend tax to finance soldier relief legislation in the House Ways and Means Committee, today lost their fight for a 10 per cent levy, retroactive to March 15. The majority members of the committee divided, 7 to 7.

The fight, proponents of the tax said, would be renewed next week, when Democrats of the committee meet with the Republicans to take final action on the relief bill, the drafting of which was completed today by the Republicans.

As finally framed, the bill differs little from the original measure which met a check in the House a fortnight ago. The sales tax has been eliminated, and the four other forms of taxation extended to three years instead of two.

A further fight in committee against the cash bonus, the maximum limit of which is now fixed at $500 for service in this country and $625 for overseas service, is threatened. Besides the bonds, the bill offers four options, the value of each to be 40 per cent greater than that of the cash provision.

The bonus would be fixed at a rate of $1 a day for service in this country and $1.25 a day for overseas. The optional benefits are paid-up insurance, home aid, recamation land for farms and vocational training aid.

Taxes proposed to add $500,000,000 a year to Government revenues for the next three years, would become effective next December as follows:

A new sur-tax levy on incomes exceeding $5000; 1 per cent of the amount between $5000 and $10,000; 2 per cent on that between $10,000 and $26,000, and 3 per cent on that exceeding $26,000.

A levy of 2 cents on each $10 of exchange transactions in stocks and bonds, and deals in futures of grain and produce.

A tax of 25 cents for each $50 on real estate sales.

Increase of 15 per cent in existing taxes on tobacco and cigars.

Payments of the bonus would begin in July 1, 1921, and be made in quarterly installments of $50 each.

Message From President Wilson Read at Arlington Dedication

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, May 15.

"THE dedication of the National Memorial at Arlington closes and commits to history a great episode in the making of the nation." President Wilson said in a message read at the dedication ceremonies today by Secretary of War Baker.

"Gathered in this national cemetery, and elsewhere," the President said, "are most of the men who fought out the constitutional questions insoluble by other processes and now the Government has set this great and beautiful building to stand like a sentinel on the banks of the Potomac and to view for all time the Capital of the reunited nation.

"Time has thrown its softening influence over the controversy. Time has eliminated the bitterness which that controversy aroused, but time has only served to magnify the heroic valor of the Captains and men who fought the great fight. As the nation arose, reunited, it found itself blessed with a great tradition. In these later days, that tradition has nerved the arms of millions of Americans called upon to vindicate upon foreign fields of battle the principles of political liberty. Who shall say whence the strength came of these matchless men? From every corner of our great country they came with one thought: That of devotion to the pure purpose for which their country called them. They lived among our allies and faced the foe as soldiers from the New World should, conscious of their strength, confident of their cause, alike unselfish and unconquerable, and I like to think that in our hour of triumph, unseen, but potent, there stood beside them the spirits of the great dead, the spirit of those who originally rescued America from the political tyrannies of the Old World and dedicated and kept her free and just

"I cannot attend the ceremony of this dedication, but my heart is there, and with my fellow countrymen everywhere I join in great recognition of the virtues which this memorial commemorates and in reverent thanks to the God of nations that he has made it possible for us in this day to show the world that America is still baptized with a spirit of her founders and builders."

TEXTILE MILLS GRANT BIG WAGE INCREASE

Nearly 300,000 Operatives to Share in Advance of About $1,000,000 Weekly.

By the Associated Press.
BOSTON, May 15.—A wave of wage advance announcements to become effective May 31 rolled in today from New England textile centers indicating that the increase would extend to virtually all the 300,000 textile operatives in the district. Wherever the amount of the advance was definitely stated it was 15 per cent. This will bring the level of textile wages more than 100 per cent higher than four years ago. Approximately $1,000,000 will be added to the weekly payrolls of New England mills by the latest advance.

This sharing with the operatives of profits of textile enterprises comes after many of the companies have declared considerable extra dividends of stock or cash to their stockholders. Prices for the products are still the highest ever received.

Fall River Leads Way.

The first announcement in connection with the present movement among cotton manufacturers, who employ 200,000 of the 300,000 textile workers in this section, was made recently by the grant of 15 per cent at Fall River where there are 35,000 operatives. In this New Bedford joined yesterday bringing 35,000 additional workers into the higher wage levels.

The American Woolen Co., with 50 mills employing 35,000 persons in New England, New York and Pennsylvania, was the first to act among the woolen manufacturing interests. Other woolen manufacturers today said increases would be made by them.

Within a short time the United Textile Workers of America have presented demands for an advance of 17½ per cent, and the Amalgamated Textile Workers have asked for a 50 per cent increase. The Fall River unions have voted to accept the increase granted.

Wages in the woolen industry up to this time, but not including the proposed advance, have increased by approximately 150 per cent over those of 1915, according to calculations by manufacturing interests.

Laborers Get 45 Cents.

Common labor in most cases is now getting more than 45 cents, an hour, according to these figures, and will be getting more than 50 cents under the advanced scale. Earnings of loom fixers under the scale now prevailing have not uncommonly run to $50 a week, and of weavers to $40 and $45.

The latest advance will give to the 200,000 cotton mill operatives in this section, skilled and unskilled, an average wage of $25 a week, according to figures compiled by manufacturing interests.

The 15 per cent advance given at this time, according to manufacturers' figures, is equivalent to about 35 per cent of the pre-war rate.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America today declared in favor of a 40-hour working week. Proposals that the reduced period be put into effect as soon as possible, were overcome by a vote to have the General Executive Board take action in accordance with general conditions in the clothing market. The clothing workers voted to organize a special educational department to include not only economic and industrial instruction but also art, science and culture generally.

U. R. AUDIT GOES TO GRAND JURY THIS WEEK

Shortage of James Samuel Assistant Treasurer, Finally Put at $22,199.

A discrepancy of $22,199.34 in the accounts of James W. Samuel, 6132 Westminster place, former assistant treasurer of the United Railways Co., was shown by figures and papers submitted to the Circuit Attorney yesterday by William H. Woodward, special investigator appointed by the Federal Court to examine Samuel's accounts. The results of Woodward's investigation will be placed before the grand jury this week.

Of the discrepancy, $17,319.34 was in the employes' Liberty Bond installment account and $4880 in the car ticket account.

Samuel was discharged by the United Railways Co. last December when the company announced that an audit of his books showed a discrepancy of $21,362.94. Since then Woodward had been engaged in making a more thorough examination of the accounts.

The investigation was made unusually difficult from the fact that money alleged to have been paid by employes on their Liberty Bond installments was not found credited on the books and it became necessary to call in personally hundreds of employes to question them as to how they stood with the company on their Liberty Bond payments.

Charles W. Bates, attorney for Receiver Wells, yesterday said he had not decided whether he would file suit against Samuel on behalf of the receiver to recover the amount of the discrepancy.

VOTE FRAUD CHARGED BY A. M. E. DELEGATE

Convention Goes On With Election After Tabling Motion for New Ballot.

After stormy sessions, beginning Friday morning and lasting until yesterday afternoon the A. M. E. Conference at the Coliseum elected the 11 general officers of the church.

Four of the officers were elected Friday morning, but in the afternoon session, the assembly deadlocked on the four candidates for missionary secretary. Two ballots were taken, and no candidate received a majority.

Yesterday morning one of the four withdrew, and soon after the conference opened, the third withdrew. The assembly immediately divided into two factions. In vain Bishop Chappelle pounded for order while the whole assembly yelled the names of the candidates, standing up in their seats. J. W. Rankin of New York was finally re-elected.

The following others were re-elected over their opponents:

R. C. Ransam of Philadelphia, editor of the A. M. E. Review; I. T. Bryant of Nashville, Tenn., secretary of the Sunday School Union; B. F. Watson of Washington, secretary of church extension; G. W. Allen of Nashville, editor of the Southern Christian Recorder; J. D. Barksdale of Kansas City was elected editor of the Western Christian Recorder, and S. S. Morris of Norfolk, Va., was elected secretary of the Allied Christian Endeavor League.

Occasionally the charge of dishonest voting was made. Late yesterday afternoon when the last election was being held the charge was made by one of the delegates from South Carolina that ballots were being folded and five and six were being dropped in the ballot box together, and he asked that the entire vote be polled again.

Cries of "No, no," was the answer he received, and immediately his motion was tabled, and the balloting went on.

When the election closed yesterday afternoon, Bishop Chappelle could barely speak above a whisper, and the voice of many of the tellers was gone. One teller, however, had saved his voice by singing the count and was going strong.

Today at 11 o'clock at the Coliseum, the five new bishops will be ordained. Bishop Evans Tyree will preach the sermon.

Friday night at a meeting of delegates and friends of Dr. Leroy N. Bundy, presided over by Bishop Joshua Jones of Wilberforce University, $1507 was raised for Bundy's defense against a sentence of life imprisonment for his part in the race riots in East St. Louis in 1917. The meeting was not part of the official session of the conference.

RAILROADS APPEAL FOR RESTORATION OF WAR PRIORITIES

sion may find necessary and may by order authorize, the carriers may be relieved from the operation of Federal and State laws and other laws recognized as ordinarily effective during normal transportation conditions and governing the service of the carriers in the usual and ordinary conduct of their public service, so that in adopting and carrying out the orders issued by the commission during the present emergency, the carriers may be protected against penalties and complaints which would otherwise accrue, and be enabled to lawfully adopt and currently apply the necessary emergency measures as the commission may order to relieve present conditions.

The commission issued the following statement tonight:

"The Interstate Commerce Commission is proceeding actively with steps toward the effective exercise of powers and duties cast upon it in such emergencies to afford such relief as may be possible in the present situation."

The railroads made their appeal through the Association of Railway Executives and the American Railroad Association.

SELPH PREFERS CHARGES AGAINST FORMER CLERK

Postmaster Accuses H. P. Rosecan, Now an Attorney, of Falsifying His Postoffice Time Records.

Harry P. Rosecan of 4124A De Tonty street, a lawyer with an office in the Commercial Building, who resigned as a clerk in the St. Louis Postoffice last February, was summoned by Postoffice inspectors to the Federal Building yesterday and informed that charges had been preferred against him by Postmaster Selph. If substantiated, the charges, it is said, would result in the revocation of his resignation and the entry upon postal records of his name as a discharged employe. It was mentioned that the United States District Attorney might take cognizance of the charges.

Rosecan recently has been directing the campaign of former resigned employes of the St. Louis Postoffice for the removal of Postmaster Selph on the ground that his autocratic methods of administration are disrupting the service here and on other charges.

Representative Zihlman, chairman of the Committee on Postal Expenditures in the House of Representatives, has invited the former employes to present their charges in person before the committee and Rosecan has been mentioned among the former employes as likely to be one of the spokesmen.

Rosecan Denies Charges.

Rosecan was informed by the inspectors yesterday that the charges against him were insubordination and falsification of time records. The former charge, he was told, was based upon incidents of a conversation Rosecan had had with Selph prior to his resignation. The charge of falsification of records was based upon an allegation that Rosecan often did work as a lawyer during his hours of duty with the postoffice. His last assignment in the postoffice was the investigation of complaints concerning postal service made by citizens and in the course of that employment he was much about the city. Rosecan denied this charge and explained to a reporter the incidents upon which the charge of insubordination was based.

"I had gone to the Postmaster to protest against my proposed transfer to other work," he said. "During a heated argument the Postmaster said that he had been informed I was an 'ambulance chaser.' The law had been the ambition of my life. I had neglected my family to spend time out of my hours of duty in attending night school and had successfully passed the state bar examination. The term the Postmaster applied to me would be regarded as an insult by any self-respecting lawyer. I asked the Postmaster the source of his information. He refused to give it. I then said that the only conclusion I could have was that he was lying.

Says Procedure Is Unusual.

"I immediately submitted my resignation and it was accepted by the Postmaster on March 5. When he accepted it, he was aware of any insubordination of which I might be guilty. The filing of charges after a resignation has been accepted is a very unusual procedure. The only explanation I can see is that the Postmaster desires that if I appear against him before the committee on postal expenditures, it shall be as a discharged employe, not as a resigned employe. His frequent defense of the charges against him has been that the charges are the spite work of discharged, disgruntled employes."

During Rosecan's conversation with the inspectors, it was suggested to him that he prepare a statement of the time he had spent in personal business during his hours of duty with the postoffice. He was told that very often an agreement or settlement could be reached without charges going to an extreme conclusion, but that no immunity could be promised.

He replied that he was ready to admit that very often he was assigned to do the personal business of his superiors during his hours of duty, but that he had attended to no personal business of his own.

A section of the postal laws was cited by the inspectors in which the maximum penalty for charges such as falsification of records was a fine of $10,000 or 10 years' imprisonment or both.

CAMERON WANTS TESTIMONY OF MEN WHO INDICTED HIM

Twelve Members of Grand Jury Summoned by Defense to Testify at Springfield Next Week.

The twelve members of the grand jury that indicted Bruce Cameron, then superintendent of transportation of the United Railways Co., July 8, 1918, on the charge of burglary in the second degree and larceny, have been summoned to appear as witnesses in his defense in his trial next week at Springfield, Mo.

Cameron is to be tried with Richard McCulloch, president of the United Railways Co., who was indicted a year later on the same charge. Both cases resulted from the theft of referendum petitions from a safe in a downtown office building, June 15, 1918.

The members of the former grand jury who have been summoned as witnesses, with their addresses at the time of their grand jurp service, are:

Grand Jurymen Summoned.

Warren Skinner, foreman, president Skinner & Kennedy Stationery Co., 1246 Amherst place.

Jacob Stocke Jr., vice president Progress Pressed Brick Co., 406 Clara avenue.

H. Linton Reber, vice-president Kinloch Telephone Co., 3630 Delmar boulevard.

August O. Erker, department manager Erker Bros. Optical Co., 3677 De Tonty street.

James N. Hull, vice-president Lambert-Deacon-Hull Printing Co., 5346 Bartmer avenue.

Walter W. Heibel, president P. Heibel & Sons Manufacturing Co., 2609 Arkansas avenue.

Andrew Niehaus, retired, 3856 Hartford street.

Robert L. Strudell, cashier N. O. Nelson Manufacturing Co., 4052 Juniata street.

Daniel J. Hancock Jr., vice-president Ashton-Hancock Brokerage Co., 5193 Vernon avenue.

Carlos Reese Jr., department manager International Shoe Co., 5073 Cabanne avenue.

George L. Lauth, vice-president Heil Packing Co., 1907 Longfellow boulevard.

Richard Shelton, president Shelton Panama Hat Co., 4352 Westminster place.

Purpose Not Disclosed.

The purpose of the defense in summoning these witnesses has not been made known. Lawyers say the purpose may be to show alleged discrepancy in the testimony on which Cameron was indicted, and possibly to use the grand jurors to impeach certain witnesses, on the ground that they testified differently before them. As to the latter point, however, the minutes of the grand jury would be the best evidence.

One of the State's witnesses, George W. Baumhoff, former general manager of the St. Louis Transit Co., has testified that McCulloch said to him, in speaking of the grand jury investigation, that he (McCulloch) would not be indicted, as he had three friends on the grand jury. The three to whom he referred were not named.

James Walsh, stenographer for the grand jury, has also been summoned as a witness.

The indictment first returned against Cameron has been dismissed and he was reindicted by the grand jury that indicted McCulloch. It is this second indictment on which he will be tried, with McCulloch, in the Green County Criminal Court, in a special session beginning Monday, May 24, at Springfield. The case was sent there on a change of venue.

SLAIN TRAIN ROBBER WHOSE ACT RESULTED IN FATHER'S DEATH

HORACE L. WALTON.

friends of the young bandit here. He had been in the employ of the street railway company here and the railway mail service in this vicinity since he was graduated from Central High School in 1916. There is not a blot on his record here.

The news of the Chicago escapade came as a terrible blow to his parents. Horace was an only son. Mr. Walton wept freely as he told newspaper men of his son's waywardness, which he said had developed within the last month. Shown a newspaper account of the robbery, he was unable to read it.

"It is unaccountable," he said. "It is one of the mysteries for which we cannot account in life. Be as lenient as you can, please. This is the first time the family name has ever been connected with anything which would go into the newspapers. I don't believe I can ever get over this."

Grave fears are held for Mrs. Walton, elderly and with gray hair, a kind, motherly appearing woman, who has thus far withstood the second tragic event in a family that had never before known grief or hardship.

Charge Police Try to Trace Walton's Past.

CHICAGO, May 15.—Police today are endeavoring to identify Horace Walton, train bandit, who was killed yesterday after he had stolen $107,000 from an Illinois Central train and murdered a policeman, as "Jimmy" Walton, involved in the Burroughs Adding Machine Co. payroll holdup at Detroit two years ago.

Three men held up the factory's paymaster in broad daylight and stole $32,000. "Jimmie" Walton was later captured in Texas with $14,000 in his possession and sentenced to the State prison at Jackson, Mich. He is reported to have escaped several months ago.

Douglas Walton, a brother of "Jimmie," was arrested here in connection with the payroll robbery. Both gave their home as St. Joseph, Mo., where Horace Walton also lived.

Evidence is accumulating, according the police, that young Horace Walton, in addition to the spectacular robbery of $102,000 from the Illinois Central, which led to his death, also staged the robbery of a Santa Fe express and mail car opposite Lexington, Mo., the night of April 8, escaping with $60,000. Federal officials today took up search for an automobile in which Walton made a four-day trip covering this date last April. The police are seeking a blonde woman and a small dark man who were frequent visitors at Walton's apartment. There is no trace of $5,000 missing from the grip he was carrying when intercepted by the police, and they believe it might have been handed to an accomplice. Search is also on for a youth of St. Joseph, Mo., who visited Walton.

MAN TRAPPED IN BLACK HAND CASE

Is Caught Near Package Left by Grocery Company Head—$25,000 Had Been Demanded.

After setting a trap for the capture of a Black Hand letter writer, who intimated in his correspondence that he was one of the East St. Louis bank robbers of May 7, city detectives last night caught John Ventucci, 25 years old, of 6214 Clemens avenue.

Ventucci was arrested under the River des Peres bridge at Clemens and Rosedale avenues, near the western city limits, at 8:20 p. m. The detectives say that, at the time of his arrest, he was reaching to take a package which had been left there, at 7:30 p. m., by Simon D. Rossi, 70, of 6215 Delmar boulevard, president of a grocery company.

Letter Written in Italian.

Rossi received a letter Tuesday, written in Italian, demanding that he take $2500 in a package to the place under the bridge, and setting the time as last night at 7:30.

The letter went on to say that $10,000 would have been demanded, but that "on account of the times," he would be let off with $2500. "We need the money," the letter went on, "because of a recent disaster, in the East St. Louis bank holdup. One man was killed and another is in prison."

In the letter was inclosed a diagram of the way from Rossi's home to the bridge, with the names of streets. This was on a torn piece of blue letter paper.

Rossi took the letter to Police Headquarters, and Chief of Detectives Hannegan advised him to carry out the directions, but to leave a package containing no money.

Instructions Carried Out.

Rossi carried out the instructions, and Detectives Smith and Koehn, in laborers' garb, hid themselves within view of the place. Fifty minutes after Rossi had left, Ventucci appeared, and was arrested as he stood in front of the place where the package was concealed.

He denied any knowledge of the letter. In his room, the detectives found a torn piece of blue paper, bearing the letter head of the Curlee Clothing Co. They say this piece of paper matches that inclosed in the letter to Rossi, and bearing the diagram. Ventucci is a presser for the Curlee Co.

National Ship by Truck Good Roads Week, May 17-22

W. F. CARTER, President St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, Says:

Transportation is the connecting link between primary production and consumption. The more we facilitate this connection through the encouragement and building of better highways and the demonstration of the need of such improvement, the more we will tend to lessen the expense involved in the marketing of all products. All that St. Louis is today is due largely to its superior transportation facilities. All that it is going to be tomorrow will likewise be based upon this attribute.

This question of haulage is not alone one of steam railroads and water ways, but one of highways. The community that today lags in its attention to the good roads proposition, is going to find it difficult to catch up with the procession, because the realization of the need of better read ways is universal. The only present question is the extent and means of the work. One of the greatest contributing influences to the universal perception of the necessity of better roads has been the "Ship by Truck" movement. This, in my opinion, has been due to the knowledge that the short haul transportation of the future, as a relief measure for the railroads, if nothing else, must be a truck proposition. The road arteries of communication between the urban life of our country and the rural communities, regulating the flow of necessary supplies so vital to the cities, are becoming more and more dependent upon the truck to facilitate movement; this, too, has been encouraged by the growing system of better highways.

The Chamber of Commerce, as it always has been, is very much interested in your annual tour, and takes this occasion of wishing the truck tourists every success on their trip to Cape Girardeau and return.

Yours very truly,
W. F. Carter
President.

If you regard the railroads as the long arm of commerce, you must reckon the motor truck as the fingers which reach in, here, there and everywhere, to pick up the load or place it at its destination.

THIEVES MISTAKE GIRL'S APRON FOR PAYROLL MONEY

Miss Ella Junghause Robbed on Street of $25 and Bundle Containing Garment.

Miss Ella Junghause of 3641 Ohio avenue, a stenographer for the Standard Furniture Co., 2722 South Third street, was held up and robbed between Third and Fourth streets on Lynch street at 10 a. m. yesterday.

It had been her custom to carry payroll money from a bank to the company's office each Saturday, though she did not do so yesterday. She was on her way to work.

The thieves, who probably expected a big haul, found that a bundle which she carried under her arm contained not money, but the stenographer's office apron and sleeve protectors. All they got was her purse containing $25.

"Bluebeard" Downhearted Because People Do Not Show Him "Consideration"

Slayer of Many Wives Tells Correspondent Voice Commanded Him to "Go Get Them" —Professes Sense of Humor and Wants to Write for Magazines.

By ROBERT EDGREN.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 15.—I walked down the jail corridor to "Bluebeard" Watson's cell in the Los Angeles County Hospital. The iron door swung open just enough to admit me, and I stepped in. The door closed behind me. Through the small square peephole came the muffled sound of the retreating footsteps of the armed guard. I was alone with Watson.

There he lay before me on a small iron cot, facing me squarely; staring straight at me with unblinking eyes that seemed to hold a world of menacing hostility. He

It was Watson who spoke first.

"I am very down hearted," he said.

He blinked and looked to see how his statement affected me. He was looking for sympathy.

"Perhaps," I said, "you are developing a conscience. Perhaps you are thinking of how you shut the sunlight off for all those women."

"Oh, no," he said lightly; "nothing like that."

"I don't see how you can sleep at night," said I.

"I sleep well enough," said Watson.

Conscience Not Troublesome.

"But when you killed them, when you looked down and saw them dead, didn't your conscience trouble you? Didn't you feel sorry at all?"

"No, no," said Watson, sitting up and smiling. "You don't understand. I felt happy; I felt that I'd done right."

"Perhaps"—

"It isn't that," said Watson quickly. "I'm very down-hearted because things aren't going well with me. Things aren't going well at all. Before the trial everybody treated me with, I may say, consideration. The moment I was sentenced it was all different. Now they have no more use for me. They are not treating me right. I want to see them to tell the mthings I think of ond they don't come. And my money—I can't get any accounting of my property. A prisoner is entitled to an accounting, isn't he? They won't give me a list."

Watson smiled softly and sat up. His eyes turned down to his bony hands, and he opened them and closed them again reflectively.

"You don't understand this," he said. "I didn't always kill them. It's something that grew on me. I only began about three years ago. I was getting over it when they arrested me. Why, for seven months I didn't kill any at all."

He looked up, smiling, evidently waiting for me to express some approtation of his virtue in refraining from murder for so long a period.

"You see," he went on, "there are two sides to me. It began about three years ago. I had what you might call an impulse to go get them and make away with them. I didn't always do it, you see. I think I'm about 42 years old, and for years I didn't have those impulses. A voice in me would say, 'go get them,' and then when the time came a voice would say 'go to it,' and then I'd do it. Sometimes I'd reason it out and go away for weeks, and not make away with them.

Watson's Sense of Humor.

"It was awfully funny, sometimes. As I told Woolwine (the prosecutor), when I married Elizabeth Williamson in a little town near Spokane, we came back to Spokane to live, and I would go right among a lot of people who knew me, married to two or three other girls right in Spokane, and take an awful chance. I'd go into a theater or around the streets and never knew when I'd meet someone who would expose me, and I thought nothing of it. Oh, I can give you some awfully humorous incidents for a story. I always had a good sense of humor, and these things often amuse me."

Here Watson laughed.

"You can see it wasn't always my fault when things happened," he went on, suddenly changing expression.

"This Mrs. Deloney! You can see how things happen. The night we camped near Signal Hill she picked up a letter that fell out of my pocket. It was from one of the other women I had married, Mrs. Williamson. It was before dark. She read the letter. There was a scene. She threatened me. She said she was going to have me arrested at once, because I was married to some one else. You see what it meant—exposure, and things to follow. What could I do but make away with her? So I murdered her right away."

"You see?" he added, looking up at me, smiling and nodding.

"When you stood there," I asked, "looking at the body of the woman you were cutting off forever from the sunshine, didn't you feel sorry?"

Voice Commanded "Go Get Them."

"Not at all," said Watson briskly. "You don't understand. It's a sort of an obsession I've had these last three years. I have two sides, as I told you. One tells me 'Go get them,' and then 'Go to it.' It's like an order. Sometimes I'd put it off, but when I obeyed, and murdered them, I always felt happy afterward, as if it was a duty well done. I was quite happy after I buried her. You see, it was a hard task, and I was tired and it was all over. You see, when she threatened me I had the car open and the camping outfit out and the seats off, and I grabbed a hammer and hit her on the head. I hit her several times. It was a hammer or a hatchet. I put it in the car. I wrapped the body up with part of her own clothes, and with a blanket so the blood wouldn't show, and when I got through I put it in the car. You see how I told it to Woolwine."

"I've been interested," said I, "in stories of your strength. How could you carry a body up that hill?"

"I'm not very strong," said Watson quickly. "Only under those excitements I have terrific strength—the strength of two or three men. When the impulse says 'go to it,' I have terrific strength. When it's over, I'm weak."

"Did you develop that strength working on farms?"

"No, no," said Watson. "They were cruel to me when I was a boy. They worked me too hard. I didn't get strong. It's only under excitement. You don't understand. You can see I'm not mercenary. I didn't always kill for money."

Did Not Kill for Money.

"Some of the women I married had fortunes and offered to give me five or six or eight or nine or ten thousand dollars to start a banking business with and I didn't take it. On the other hand, I married some who didn't have a nickel and even bought wedding clothes for them before the marriage. That's how I didn't do it for money. I was always a successful business man. I have thousands of business friends in Canada who would never believe a wrong thing of me."

"How did you get them? Did you always advertise? You did once."

"No, not always," thoughtfully. "That was one of the lies told about me. I just went out and married them. This is funny; I think her name was Marie—Marie Austin. I met her on a trip after I married a woman in Winnipeg that had a nice bank account and had sent her on a trip to Vancouver. I had met Marie before. She didn't have a thing on earth, honestly, and was not attractive. She had no relatives. The last she had was an uncle she kept house for. Then she clerked in stores. I hit her on the head with a rock and sunk her in the lake at Coeur d'Alene. I think I just hit her once and put her down and drowned her."

About this time Watson wearied of killing details.

Wants to Write for Magazines.

"You want to write a story about me," he said. "You ought to begin with when I was a boy. I can give you some humor that will make it interesting. I am full of humor. I'm thinking that at San Quentin I'll do a lot of writing for magazines. They ought to buy my stories, don't you think, after all the advertising I've had?"

"What good would money be to you?"

"Why," said Watson, beamiing, I'd sell stories and give some of the money to charity. And if it is only ten years, when they find out what's the matter with me, and I'm cured and don't have these impulses any more, they may discharge me. You can see I'm getting better because for a long time, seven months, I didn't make away with any of them, and then only one. And I was fighting against the impulse all the time."

YOUNG MAN ON PAROLE IDENTIFIED AS ROBBER

John McCarthy, 21 years old, released on a week's parole from the State Industrial Farm at Boonville last Saturday to visit his mother, reported seriously ill at her home, 2415 Belleglade avenue, was identified at Police Headquarters yesterday as one of three young men who held up Leo Long, 4008 Easton avenue, and four customers in Long's soft drink parlor, last Tuesday night, taking $50 from the cash register and customers.

MRS. JULIA HELMUTH DIES SUDDENLY AT UNION STATION

Mrs. Julia Helmuth, 78 years old, 484 Lake avenue, fell dead yesterday at 5:20 p. m., just after arriving at the Twentieth street entrance to Union Station, where she had gone to meet a daughter whose arrival she expected. She was the widow of J. G. Helmuth, a retired merchant, who died in 1894, and was the mother of George W. and J. I. Helmuth, architects. She had been ill for about five years of heart disease.

Mrs. Helmuth had driven to the station in her automobile, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Eleanor Helmuth, and had alighted to greet her son, George W., who had driven up in another machine. As she spoke to him she collapsed. Her other son arrived a few minutes after she was stricken.

The daughter whom she expected to meet was Mrs. Frances Boland of Washington, D. C., who was being accompanied to St. Louis band, T. P. Boland. SAYS HE HAS $277 TO PAY $25,000 JUDGMENT

Man Sued by St. Louisenne for Breach of Promise Files Bankruptcy Petition.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—With a judgment against him for $25,000 for breach of promise of marriage, E. R. Andrews of this city filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court today. The holder of the breach of promise judgment is Innis R. Hopkins, 5785 Waterman avenue, St. Louis. The verdict against Andrews, who gives his occupation as manager, was rendered in Chicago on Feb. 2 last.

In addition to the breach of promise debt Andrews has other debts which make his total liabilities $26,711.96 to meet, while he has assets of only $277.96. His personal wardrobe, on which he claims exemption from creditors, Andrews includes in his schedule of assets and comprises five suits of clothes, two overcoats, 18 shirts, 19 suits of underwear, 20 pairs of socks, 25 collars and some handkerchiefs, all of which Andrews says have a total value of only $75. Five insurance policies are made payable when due either to Andrews' wife or his mother.

Miss Hopkins, a graduate of Hosmer Hall and a musician, obtained a verdict last February in the Superior Court at Chicago against Andrews, who formerly was connected with the Hydraulic Pressed Brick Co. of St. Louis. He did not contest the suit.

A letter written by Andrews to Miss Hopkins' attorney was read at the trial, in which he said: "I do not intend ever to marry Miss Hopkins. I do not love her and the criminal folly of marriage under such conditions must be apparent to anyone who seriously considers the matter."

The engagement of Miss Hopkins to Andrews was announced by Mrs. Frederick D. Gardner, wife of the Governor, at a luncheon which Miss Hopkins gave at her home in 1914.

An effort was made last night by a reporter to apprise Miss Hopkins of Andrews' action in filing a bankruptcy yesterday, but she could not be reached.

WOMAN GETS FULL AMOUNT IN SUIT AGAINST BANK

Mrs. Bertha Kurtzeborn Obtains Verdict for $419, Entrusted for Transmission to Germany.

Mrs. Bertha Kurtzeborn of 3651 Botanical avenue received a verdict for the full amount in Justice of the Peace Blesse's court Friday in her suit against the Liberty Bank, formerly the German-American Savings Bank, for $419 she entrusted to the bank in 1916 for transmission to Mrs. E. Griesedieck, her sister, in Germany. Arthur E. Kammerer, attorney for the bank, gave notice of appeal.

Mrs. Kurtzeborn stated she recently received from the Liberty Bank a cashier's check on the Deutsche Bank of Germany for 2244 marks and 40 pfennigs, as the equivalent of $419. The exchange rate has changed, and while that number of marks and pfennigs may have been worth $419 at one time, their present value in the United States coin is about $39.40, she claimed.

Mrs. Kurtzeborn displayed a receipt she had received from the Liberty Bank in 1916 stating that the bank had received $419 from her to be delivered in marks to Mrs. Griesedieck in Germany. Kammerer stated that the money had never been delivered to Mrs. Griesedieck and was yet tied up by the German Government in a bank in Germany. Horace Dyer, attorney for Mrs. Kurtzeborn, contended that if the money were tied up it was inconsistent for the Liberty Bank to have tendered his client the check for the 2244 marks and 40 pfennigs.

CHANGE SOUGHT IN RULING ON WIVES OF CIVIL SERVICE MEN

Igoe Tells Commission That Enforcement of It Would Keep Them Out of Politics.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Representative Igoe of St. Louis today asked the Civil Service Commission to amend a ruling which, he said, if enforced to the letter, must keep the wives of civil service employes out of politics. The ruling was called to his attention by the Ladies' Aid Society of the United Hebrew Confederation of St. Louis.

It states that if the wife of a civil service employe engages in political activity for his benefit, "the presumption of collusion is strong, and casts upon the employe the burden of overcoming the assumption by affirmative proof."

Igoe said there was danger that this assumption would be raised against Government employes' wives who had gone into politics, not to aid their husbands, but as a civic duty.

R. D. SMITH, ENGINEER, DIES

Roscoe D. Smith, 54 years old, a railroad construction engineer with offices in the Third National Bank Building, died Friday night at Barnes Hospital where he was taken several days ago from his home, 5527 Waterman avenue. An operation for cancer of the tongue was performed several months ago. This was followed by infection.

Smith was general manager of the Illinois (McKinley System) during the construction period from 1905 to 1910 and he supervised the building of the company's right of way over the McKinley Bridge. His wife, who survives, was Miss Helen Robb. They were married in Indianapolis in 1905.

Grand, "Sweeties," a farce, enlisting a company of five. Loew's Garrick, a military revue, with six dancing girls. Angelo Armento and a company of tumblers lead the week's voudeville entertainment at Forest Park Highlands.

FUR AUCTION SHOWS DECLINE IN MARKET

Drop Ranges From 20 to 35 Per Cent—Sales for Week Are $6,500,000.

There has been a general decline in the price of furs since February, as demonstrated by the first week's sales at the International Fur Exchange. Virtually all varieties of skins have brought 20 to 35 per cent less than at the preceding sale, and this situation is expected to continue when the sale is resumed tomorrow.

The market was fairly tested Friday, buyers said, when 175,000 raccoon skins were placed on sale. Raccoon is one of the staples of the trade and ranks fourth in importance among commercial furs produced in this country. The pelts sold at prices 30 per cent lower than at the February sale. The total sales yesterday were $500,000, bringing the aggregate for the week up to $6,500,000.

Yesterday witnessed a continued decline in the price of the once aristocratic ermine, which, from the traditional garb of emperors and potentates, has fallen to the estate of a trimming for everyday garments for everybody. There were 180,000 white ermine, 80,000 brown and 35,000 gray sold yesterday, the top figure being $4.75 a skin.

Chinchilla, of which a small offering was sold yesterday, brought as high as $115 a pelt. The best chinchilla comes from Bolivia, and at present there is an embargo on it.

It is estimated that $30,000,000 will be paid for furs during this sale.

$325,000 GIVEN FOR JEWISH RELIEF BY 75,000 PERSONS

Proceeds of Rosa Ponselle Recital Tomorrow Night at Odeon to Be Added to Fund.

A recapitulation completed yesterday shows that $325,000 was contributed in St. Louis by about 75,000 persons in the Jewish War Relief Campaign which closed last Monday.

Nathan Frank, chairman of the Executive Committee, said that the campaign was regarded as a great success and that the committee was pleased particularly with the response of non-Jews. He called attention to the fact that never before had Jews called upon non-Jews in this city for assistance in any Jewish charity.

A still further addition to the fund will be made tomorrow night, it having been announced that the net proceeds of the Rosa Ponselle recital in the Odeon would be given for the relief of the Eastern Europe war sufferers.

DETROIT, Mich., May 15.—Hamtramck and Highland Park, which, according to the census figures announced today, show gains in the last 10 years in excess of 1000 per cent are communities within the corporate area of Detroit, that have successfully withstood efforts to annex them.

Hamtramck is incorporated as a village, and in 1910 had a population of 3559. Highland Park, as a village in 1910, had a population of 4120.

The growth of both is directly attributable to the automobile industry.

PERMIT SYSTEM IS EXTENDED TO THREE CLASSES OF MAIL

The privilege of sending second, third and fourth-class matter through the mails under permit instead of with stamps, has been extended to first-class matter, under an order of the Postoffice Department received by the Postmaster in St. Louis yesterday.

This means that persons sending 300 or more pieces in one mailing may do away with the necessity of affixing stamps by depositing money sufficient to cover postage. Indicia declaring postage to have been paid can be printed at the same time other printed matter is put on the envelope or mailing wrapper.

The further advantage of quicker despatch of mail is gained. No cancellation need be performed in the postoffice, and if mail is handed in assorted by States or cities it will reach the pouches quicker than mail that must go through the primary sorting process.

About 1,500,000 letters are handled daily in the St. Louis postoffice, according to Postmaster Selph.

MARTIAL LAW IN NORTH AND CENTRAL RUSSIA

Soviet Government, Hard Pressed by Poles, Busy Making War Materials.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, May 12.—A decree issued by the Central Executive committee, dated May 11, proclaims martial law in the provinces of Central and Northern Russia and Archangel.

The provincial executive committees are given full power to protect railways, military supplies, magazines and depots and to control telegraphic and telephonic communication.

A 24-hour work day in the administrative offices is decreed, and means are to be taken to stimulate the production of war material.

Until the abolition of martial law, the executive committees are given the same powers as military tribunals to secure the carrying out of this program, including punishment for disobedience. The decree is signed by Kalinin and Lenine.

The inevitable interruption of the development of peacetime industries through concentration upon the effort to produce war material, it is pointed out here, will tend indefinitely to postpone the execution of plans for the resumption of importations and exportations on a large scale.

Poles and Ukraine About Ready to Talk Peace.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, May 13.—On the heels of the victory of the Poles and Ukrainians in the Ukraine peace talk has been resumed in diplomatic circles and in the newspapers in Poland.

Meanwhile fighting continues in the Kiev region, the latest communique announcing that attempts by the Bolsheviki to oust the Poles from the bridgehead area were repulsed after fierce fighting. Battle for possession of the territory east of Kiev has been going on for three days. At last accounts the Bolsheviki were using more artillery than they had previously employed.

TITTONI PRESIDES OVER LEAGUE COUNCIL

Session at Rome to Consider Inviting Wilson to Call First League Assembly.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 15.—The fifth session of the council of the League of Nations met at the ministry of the colonies yesterday afternoon and on a motion by Leon Bourgeois, France, Signor Tittoni, president of the Italian Senate, was elected president and delivered the inaugural speech.

Thirty-six States were represented. Regret was expressed that a delegate of the United States was not present.

The council discussed the advisability of sending a commission to investigate the situation in Russia. Permanent commissions to study the question of armaments, to deal with procedure connected with registration of treaties and one to make arrangements for the repatriation of prisoners in Siberia were decided upon.

International finance was discussed in a general way, hope being expressed that the coming meeting at Brussels of financial experts from the various countries would be successful in regulating the rates of exchange.

Among the more important questions which will come up for discussion will be that of inviting President Wilson to convoke the first assembly of the League of Nations, which is expected to take place in the autumn.

Indemnity Germany Must Pay Soon to Be Fixed.

By the Associated Press.

HYTHE, England, May 15.—Germany may not be left much longer in doubt as to the amount of indemnity which she will have to pay under the treaty of Versailles. It was decided at the conference which began this morning between Premier Millerand of France and Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain and their advisers, that a definite sum would be named for Germany to pay.

Premier Millerand accepted the principle of naming a fixed amount on condition that France should be conceded priority, so that in effect she will have a first mortgage on the German indemnity, and that part of the payment to her be made immediately. Belgium, it is stated, will be placed on the same basis as France.

The conferes also decided that the date of the Spa conference of the Supreme Council and the German leaders should be held on June 21, instead of May 25. Germany will be notified of the nature of the proceedings and of what terms will be presented to her, and there will be no debate.

The agreements reached by the Premiers today are subject to ratification by Italy and Belgium.

An official statement issued to the correspondents here regarding the morning conference said, in part:

"It was agreed that there was no question of varying the treaty of Versailles. The treaty is to be maintained in full force and virtue. It was also agreed that the demands under the disarmament clauses shall be enforced in particular and that the enforcement shall not be postponed until the meeting at Spa.

"In other words, the question of disarmament will not be discussed at the Spa conference, and the postponement will not interfere with the measures of the allies and their determination to enforce the clauses for disarmament."

Premier Millerand's reparation proposals are officially described as provisional and they are subject to the scrutiny of the financial experts of the two Governments. Regarding these proposals, the official statement adds:

"This does not mean that the treaty will be altered. It simply means that the allies will proceed on the basis that a judgment has been obtained against Germany and that she is under obligation to pay. It is only a question of how she shall pay."

A supplementary official statement said the proceedings at Spa would not be confined to a discussion of financial questions, but would deal with every infraction of the peace treaty.

MY, WHAT A DIFFERENCE The TRU-ART REPRODUCER MAKES

REALLY, it is remarkable what a difference in the tone of that old phonograph such a little device can make. How wonderfully it brings out the pure, mellow tones of the violin, the clear-cut, bell-like notes of the piano, the rich, melting softness of the singer, and the peppy swing of dance music. I never dreamed there was so much beauty in a phonograph. Why I no longer hear those loud, harsh, scratchy sounds. Every tone comes out as if the artist himself were standing there. My, what a difference the Tru-Art Reproducer makes.

The TRU-ART Reproducer is the "Soul of the Phonograph"

The reproducer of all phonographs is the disc that carries the needle and through which it should respond faithfully to the most delicate sound vibrations, as originally recorded. On this disc depends the full musical effects. To enrich your music, to get out of your records everything the artist put into it, you must use the Tru-Art Reproducer.

THE TRU-ART REPRODUCER
"The Soul of the Phonograph"

The TRU-ART Reproducer Perfects ALL Phonographs

Ordinary reproducers or "sound boxes," are of mica construction, which, because they cannot evenly produce tone-waves, cause scratchy, metallic sounds. The Tru-Art Reproducer, however, being made of a pure, chemically treated silk, with a sterling silver distributing disc, brings out of all records, with all needles, and all phonographs, a most remarkable richness and fullness of tone.

ONLY $8.00 TO MAKE MIRACLE MUSIC IN YOUR HOME

The Tru-Art Reproducer comes to you after many years of patient, scientific investigation, to improve the phonograph. Music lovers everywhere, who have hungered for more tone and more soul in the phonograph, pronounce the Tru-Art the miracle worker that has made phonograph music perfect. From everywhere—no matter what the city, the country, the climate—we receive letters full of enthusiasm, full of gratefulness, expressing new joys, at owning this device, which at last makes their phonographs real musical instruments. Because it increases tone volume, makes unnecessary the use of loud needles, which, you know, shortens the life of your records. Tru-Art obtains perfect results with medium needles, thus making your records last longer, and giving you enduring pleasure.

Money Back if not Satisfactory

You can try the Tru-Art Reproducer without expense to you. See for yourself that it is everything claimed for it. You may become more enthusiastic, and join the host of letter writers who praise the Tru-Art as the real "Soul of the Phonograph." Take advantage of this offer, mail the coupon immediately. Orders are coming fast. Our output is greater than our production. Act at once, and be sure of getting the advantages of this remarkable phonograph improvement.

'Bath House John' Leads in Prayer at Funeral of 'Big Jim' Colosimo

Startled Mourners Give Responses as Politician Starts "Ave Marie"—Two Bands in Chicago "Levee King's" Funeral Procession.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 15.—"Bath-House John," known to "Big Jim Colosimo's intimates as "John Da Bath," political king of the First Ward, led in prayer today as Colosimo, the levee overlord, was laid to rest. The Alderman's service was impromptu. An Italian Presbyterian clergyman had read a short service. The secret orders in which Colosimo had held membership had performed a few simple rites and the pallbearers took their posts beside the $2500 casket, the finest bronze casket ever seen in Chicago.

Service by the Catholic Church and burial in a Catholic cemetery were denied because "Big Jim" had broken with the church in his divorce and remarriage.

The house was hushed, save for the weeping of Dale Winter Colosimo, who was leaning upon the arm of Rocco de Staffano, "Big Jim's" closest friend. Then suddenly the voice of "Bathhouse John," vibrant with emotion, broke in upon the silence with the prayer that the dead "levee king" had learned at his mother's knee, the "Ave Maria."

Mourners Are Startled.

Startled mourners stopped to listen. Then, from a hundred spectators, crowded into the flower-filled room, came the responses. After the prayers the pallbearers picked up their burden and marched out to the hearse.

Politicians, gamblers, underworld characters, policemen, musicians, actors, gunmen, lawyers, opera singers, artists and sundry recipients of the dead "King's" philanthropies, turned out to pay their last respects to "Big Jim."

Throngs from every walk of life filled the house at 3156 Vernon avenue to overflowing and stood about on the sidewalks awaiting the start of the march past the Colosimo cafe, where Colosimo was killed, to Oakwoods Cemetery, where final services were to be held.

The Rev. de Carlo read a few verses of Scripture and recited the Lord's Prayer. A quartet sang a sacred song, after which funeral rites were performed by Bellini Lodge, No. 271, Knights of Pythias, the Trinacro de Unien and the Union of Sicilian Sons. The casket was borne out to the hearse under an arch of American flags at the entrance of the house.

Mrs. Colosimo, dressed in deep mourning, was led past the casket by Attorney Rocco de Steffano. One of the bands played "Nearer, My God, to Thee," after which the music of Chopin's funeral march was taken up and the procession started.

Procession to Cafe.

Then "Big Jim" paid his last visit to the cafe that made his name famous from coast to coast.

"Big Jim's" body was followed to Colosimo's by 2000 mourners, who paused outside the crepe-draped cabaret for 10 minutes while two brass bands played a funeral dirge.

Thousands of persons blocked nearby streets, clung to fire escapes, leaned from windows and peered down from roofs at the funeral procession.

Guards of detectives were sprinkled through the crowd, marching officially as part of the cortege, listening for any scrap of conversation that might give a clew to the murder mystery, which arduous investigations have brought no nearer a solution than when the restaurateur was found dead.

More than 2000 persons visited the Colosimo home during last night to view the body. Among them were large delegations of negroes who had received help from the cafe man. Detectives guarded the doors of the residence and would allow no visitors to carry packages across the threshold.

HEIRS ASK COURT TO CONSTRUE LIGGETT WILL

Daughters Desire to Divide Estate Now Appraised at $4,507,206.

A suit to construe the will of John E. Liggett, who died 23 years ago, leaving an estate which is now appraised at $4,507,206, was filed yesterday by his three daughters—Mrs. Charles Wiggins, 17 Portland place; Mrs. John Fowler, 35 Westmoreland place, and Mrs. Dolly Kilpatrick, 33 Portland place, widow of Claude Kilpatrick. Under the terms of the will the estate is now being handled by the husbands of Mrs. Wiggins and Mrs. Fowler, as trustees. The latter join in the petition.

The point of uncertainty is whether the trust period has ended, as the plaintiffs contend it has, or whether Liggett intended that it should continue until their respective deaths, at which time the principal was to be surrendered to their heirs. The daughters are receiving the income only from their interest.

John E. Liggett Jr., a grandson, received a share of the estate absolutely, four years ago, his share being surrendered to him by the trustees on his reaching the age of 30 years, as provided by the will. It is contended that the clause by which the grandson received his portion could be construed to give the same privilege to testator's daughters, but the trustees are uncertain and will not turn over the property unless authorized to do so by court, it is alleged.

Among the realty in the estate is the site of the Brown Shoe Co., Seventeenth streets and Washington avenue, appraised at $1,003,910; the Frisco Building site on Olive street, appraised at $1,010,000; site of International Life Building, Eighth and Chestnut streets, $460,000; Ely-Walker Dry Goods Co. site, 1520 Washington avenue, valued at $914,328; and the N. O. Nelson Co. site, Tenth and Chestnut streets, worth $274,149.

The estate also owns realty at Skinker road and Waterman avenue, which the heirs have an opportunity to sell for $50,000, and the court is asked to authorize a sale.

STREET CAR MEN TELL CHIEF OF STRIKE VOTE

National President Expected to Endeavor to Settle Dispute in East St. Louis.

William O'Leary of East St. Louis, president of Local, No. 725, of the Street Railway Employes' Union, yesterday forwarded to the national president, W. D. Mahon, official notification of the failure to select a Board of Arbitration to adjust wage demands made by members of the local, and also that the members, at a meeting Friday morning, voted to strike.

The strike vote was taken with a proviso that the local would give the arbitrators, David Walsh, representing the employes, and C. E. Smith, representing the company, until 11:30 p. m. Friday in which to agree upon the third member of the Arbitration Board. They failed to reach an agreement, and the strike vote automatically became effective. O'Leary said he expects to receive a response from Mahon by Monday.

The usual manner of procedure will be for Mahon to instruct a representative of the national organization to view the situation and attempt to effect a settlement.

Members of the local are employed in the East St. Louis (city) line, and on the interurban line operating between East St. Louis and Belleville.

HUDSON SUPER SIX

Hudson Fineness Equals Its Matchless Performance

Aside From the Supremacy of the Exclusive Super-Six Motor, Its Beauty Gives Distinction in Any Field of Fine Cars

Hudson has unremittingly kept the issue of performance to the fore. Not simply because its mastery is indisputable.

Rather because this question is vital above all. It must always be so. It must always be the measure of any car's title to worth.

Hence undue emphasis has never been placed on Hudson's four year's leadership in fine car sales. Largest sales are not infallibly proof of greatest merit. Hudson has no need to offer them as such.

Yet their importance cannot be overlooked. Here is the massed opinion of far the greatest number of owners of any fine car in the world. Some are driving the earliest Super-Sixes built—now more than four years old. Some acquired Hudsons but recently. But how unanimously they hold no car can rival it.

What 90,000 Owners Know First Hand

Those who have had their Hudsons longest are perhaps its most emphatic champions. They know it best. They have seen it pitted with triumph against every situation that can confront an automobile. Today their Super-Sixes are giving service, such as is literally beyond the performance capacity of many new cars that cost more.

Certainly no fine car is so highly regarded by such a large following.

Were its position less deserved could Hudson hold the loyalty of all these? Were its supremacy less decisive, surely five years must have discovered the rightful successor.

But time only brings fresh evidence of Hudson leadership.

Its world records in speed—in power—in acceleration—in hill-climbing, have never been matched. They are official and its 7,000 mile run both ways across the continent in ten days and twenty-one hours is regarded the supreme endurance feat of motordom. No car ever equalled its time in either direction. Few have even endured to finish. None except Hudson ever completed the two-way trip against time.

See What It Has Done

A Hudson stock chassis holds the world's official stock car speed record of 1 mile in 35 seconds. Special cars embodying the Super-Six principle won more points in a single year of speedway contests than any cars that ever raced.

Now is added the confirming judgment of more than 90,000 owners who daily see these qualities expressed in the smooth, uninterrupted service of their cars.

Thousands admittedly chose Hudson because of its acknowledged prestige as leader and authority in coach design. Hudsons are famous for the beauty and luxurious appointment, not only in America but in Europe, the Orient and South America.

But its chief appeal is in performance.

And Its Unmatched Motor Is Exclusive

And do not forget that all Hudson has done was possible only because of the Super-Six motor. It gave Hudson 72% more power and 80% added efficiency.

The most abusive tests to which a car was ever subjected have failed to find its endurance limit. Could other types adopt it, they might share Hudson's unmatched ability. But Hudson controls it. By right of invention Hudson alone can use it.

It will not be possible to supply all who want Hudsons. So even though you may not want your car for several months, now is not too early to place your order.

A 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent

Make This Free Test
For the Sake of Whiter, Safer Teeth

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

It Is Film
that causes men's teeth to discolor, and that holds tobacco stains.

It Is Film
that clouds women's teeth, spoils their glistening beauty and is the basis of tartar.

It Is Film
which is responsible for decay in children's teeth. It is the source of most tooth troubles.

The dealers named below have been supplied with 10-Day Tubes of Pepsodent. This week a tube will be handed free to anyone who asks. Simply present the coupon. The purpose is to urge a test of this film-removing tooth paste, which leading dentists nowadays advise. Prove the results for your own sake and your children's sake. Learn what they mean to your teeth.

See How Your Teeth Look
When the Film is Gone

There is on your teeth a slimy film. You can feel it with your tongue. It clings to the teeth, gets between the teeth and stays.

The tooth brush doesn't end it. The ordinary dentifrice does not dissolve it. So it clings and, night and day, it may do ceaseless damage.

The Tooth Wrecker

That film is the great tooth wrecker. Most tooth troubles are now traced to it.

The film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Also of many other troubles, local and internal.

That is why well-brushed teeth so often discolor and decay, why tartar forms and pyorrhea starts. You leave much of that film.

Tooth troubles are constantly increasing, as statistics show, despite the wide use of the tooth brush. And the reason lies in that film.

Now We Combat It

Dental science, after years of searching, has now found a way to combat film. Able authorities have proved it by convincing clinical and laboratory tests. Thousands of dentists have proved it, and at least a million people.

The results are seen everywhere in cleaner, whiter teeth. Some of your own friends have them.

For home use, this method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And this week you can test it at our cost.

Based on Pepsin

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

Pepsin long seemed impossible. It must be activated, and the usual method is an acid harmful to the teeth. But dental science has discovered a harmless activating method. And that method, used in Pepsodent, enables all to daily use this efficient film combatant.

Watch the Results

We urge you to present the coupon. Get the 10-Day Tube and use like any tooth paste. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how the teeth whiten—how they glisten—as the fixed film disappears.

Compare the results with your old methods. Then let your own teeth decide the method best for you and yours.

This is of lifetime importance. Don't neglect it. Cut out this coupon so you won't forget.

Cardinals Donate Five Tallies and Dodgers Win, 8-2

Victory Puts Brooklyn Club in Second Place in N. L. Race, While Locals Drop to Tie for Eighth.

AL MAMAUX STOPS RICKEY'S SLUGGERS

Yields Only Five Safeties, but Has Trouble Finding Plate at Times — Jacobs and May Twirl Poorly.

Albert Mamaux pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to an 8—2 victory over the Cardinals yesterday afternoon, boosting the men of Robinson to second place and pushing the Rickeymen into a tie with the Phillies for sellar honors. Brooklyn now is only two games behind the leading Cincinnati Reds, who have won 16 and lost nine, while the Dodgers, with nine defeats, have won 12 games.

Rickey's ball club never appeared more impotent than it did yesterday. They got only five safeties off Mamaux, several of them of the lucky variety, but even in the face of that brilliant hurling performance they had chances galore to get into the game. Dumb plays and errors of commission aided the visitors in piling up their heavy winning margin.

Elmer Jacobs and Jakie May did the hurling for the Cardinals, and even the mediocre caliber of their work would have had a better reward if the Cardinals had not been satisfied with merely meeting the rule requirement which says there shall be nine men on a side in ball games.

Dodgers Score on Fumble.

After one was down in the first inning Ward punched a single to right. Johnston sent another to center. Wheat hit to Jacobs, whose throw to Stock forced Ward at third. Myers singled to left. McHenry fumbled the ball and Johnston scored. One run that Brooklyn should not have had.

The second inning was the terrible one and came after the Cards had taken the lead on a walk to Stock, Hornsby's pop double to right and Fournier's single to left. Hood started with a walk. Miller singled to right, Hood going to third. Mamaux was called out on strikes. Olson tapped to Jacobs and Hood was run down between third and home, Jacobs to Clemons. During the run-up Miller went to third and Olson to second. Ward singled to center, scoring Miller. Smith threw to the plate to stop Olson, Jacobs intercepting the peg, but tossing to Clemons in time to get Olson. However, Clemons dropped the ball and the enemy had another run they did not deserve. Johnston walked and Wheat sent a screaming liner to center. Jack Smith misjudged the drive, appeared to be waiting for it, took a wild leap into the air and let it get past him. As he had plenty of time and was set for the jump and got his gloved hand on it, the scorer gave Smith an error. Ward and Johnston scored and Wheat got all the way to third. Two more runs the Dodgers should not have had.

Jakie May went to the hill to start the third inning and prevented further scoring until the seventh when Hood, after forcing Koney, stole second and scored on Miller's double to right.

McHenry's Fumble Hurts.

In the eighth Johnston walked after one was out and took second on Wheat's infield out. Myers singled to left and again McHenry fumbled the drive. After recovering the ball he almost caught Johnston at the plate. Another illegitimate run.

In the ninth Hood walked, advanced to third on a wild pitch and scored when Mamaux bounced a hit off Fournier's shins.

In the second, third, fourth and fifth frames Mamaux turned back the Cardinals in one-two-three order. The only man who got on in that time was Lavan, who walked to start the second and was doubled off first on Clemons' liner to Olson.

In the sixth, with three Cardinals on the base paths McHenry, with the call three and one and Mamaux having difficulty finding the plate, popped to Olson.

In the seventh Lavan opened by doubling to left and was left stranded, Clemons, May and Smith failing. In the eighth, with the bases filled, Lavan filed to Hood.

This afternoon Wilbert Robinson, who owns the biggest double outcurve in the major leagues, will display another pitching marvel. Bill Doak, who has been nursing an injured nose, will work for the Cards if he is feeling fit.

World's Soccer War Threatens St. Louis Team's Swedish Tour; Final Battle to Be Held Here

Resolution Up Before U. S. F. A. Council This Week Involves Important Issues—Independence of United States Association at Stake, Secretary Cahill Believes.

By John E. Wray.

IN the seventh year of his reign as a near-absolute monarch of the American soccer football world, Thomas W. Cahill of St. Louis is looking into the eye of battle—of a world-war in fact, one that may split the governing body of football, the Federation Internationale, and scatter the nations now composing it over the football map as unorganized units.

Not that war and battle are anything new to the Honorary Secretary of the U. S. F. A., the power behind the throne of that organization. Thomas has been looking Trouble in the face ever since he could lisp. Battle was Tom's middle name and in the old days, when he was scrapping in "high" they knew him around Lee and Newstead avenues as "Bullets" Cahill. Tom's pet argument in all debating societies was the "big stick." He won his points "vi et armis." The "arms" were his own good right and left.

Today, however, he battles by diplomacy. And all his arts will be needed to straighten out the tangle which will be presented for unsnarling in this city, next Thursday.

Trouble will develop in the form of a resolution asking in substance that, in view of the split between the members of the Federation Internationale, over the right of the Central Powers to be represented in the legislative discussions of the body, ALL INTERNATIONAL MATCHES BE POSTPONED!

This, of course, means the postponement of the trip of the all-St. Louis soccer team to Scandinavia.

Nothing to Do With the Case.

Cahill can not see what the visit of a St. Louis team to Sweden, by invitation of that country, has to do with England's wrangle with the neutral members of the Federation and he proposes to go to the mat over the subject.

Cahill says the resolution either will be beaten or will provoke a volcanic cataclysm. Cahill told the Post-Dispatch that the trip would be made, if the Missouri State Soccer Association proved to be the only subsidiary body of the U. S. F. A. to remain loyal to the Federation.

Cahill's position is strengthened by the fact that the National Soccer Commission gave its permission for the St. Louis team to make the journey. On this trip only Scandinavian teams will be played and no intercourse whatever will be held with our late enemies.

As Cahill describes the situation, however, there is something more at stake on the fate of the resolution to be submitted than the mere trip of the St. Louis team to Sweden. He declares the real issue is:

Whether the United States Football Association shall be an independent body, reflecting American ideas and ideals, or a mere dependency of the British Soccer Association, governed on this side in the best interest of England, rather than of the United States.

The position to be taken by the U. S. F. A. relates to a resolution proposed by Belgium at the supposed instigation of England, barring the Central Powers from further participation in the affairs of the Federation Internationale de Football. France, Luxembourg and England join hands with Belgium on this point, while Italy and several neutrals oppose the elimination of the Central Powers, at least from legislative affairs.

The ostensible point at issue is whether the U. S. F. A. shall side with the neutrals and Italy, or with England and Belgium, in the federation's stand toward the Central Powers. The neutrals, supported by Italy, hold that, as the allied nations are resuming trade and other intercourse with the Central Powers, there is no reason why the late enemy should not return to other international activities. Great Britain's attitude is that the Central Powers must be eliminated even from the councils of the Federation de Football, or it (Great Britain), "will not play."

Cahill wants the U. S. F. A. to be just as American in spirit as the recent winners of the U. S. F. A. championship, the Ben Millers of this city. And he thinks that the national meeting this week may result in another Declaration of Independence.

Thus another little world war in sport is ready to flame up, right here in little old St. Louis.

Text of Resolution That Would Bar Trip of Local Soccer Men

HERE is the text of the resolution that may prevent the St. Louis soccer players from touring Sweden. It was drafted by Col. G. R. Manning, past president, who is of British birth:

"Whereas, The United States is still officially and technically in a state of war with the Central Empires, and

"Whereas, The Federation Internationale de Football Association of which the national associations of the Central Empires have been and still are an integral and active part, has split on the question of permitting at present the Central Empires to be represented in the federation, as well as to engage in any matches with other members of the federation.

"Therefore, be it resolved:

"That the United States Football Association offer its services to effect a compromise, and

"Furthermore, Be it resolved, That unless and until such compromise is arrived at, the United States Football Association and its affiliated members, refrain—with the exception of the Olympic Games at Antwerp—from participation in any international relations in regard to matches, meetings and decisions."

MERCHANTS ELEVEN IS WINNER OVER ROBINS IN EXHIBITION, 2 TO 1

NEW YORK, May 15.—The Merchant Ship soccer team of Harriman, Pa., beat the crack Robins Drydock eleven by 2 to 1 in an exhibition game played at Todd's Field, Brooklyn today. A National League contest was scheduled, but the shipyard team arrived with several ineligible players and forfeited. This was the first defeat suffered by the Robins on their own field this season.

The game opened at a fast clip, the visitors nearly scoring in the first minute, Renzulli just managing to scoop out a terrific shot from J. McGhee. The same player was again dangerous soon after with a fast drive which skimmed the cross bar. The Robins got down, but Reynolds and Williamson easily broke up their attack. Harry Ratican broke through but fouled Reynolds and spoiled a fine chance. Rooney scored the first goal for Merchants three minutes after the interval. Encouraged with their success the Shipyard team bore down upon Renzulli in great style. In a mixup in the goal mouth Kidd fouled Rooney and from the resultant penalty, J. McGee scored the second goal. Five minutes from the end Hayes scored for the Robins.

Zoeller's Sacrifice Fly Scores Thompson With Deciding Run in Ninth.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 16.—The Pikers evened their series with the Tigers here this afternoon, winning, 4—3, with a ninth-inning rally.

The two teams came into the final frame with the score tied. Wyman was out on a fly to Canterbury. Packwood walked G. Thompson and Lam missed Conzelman's grounder. Zoeller's sacrifice scored Thompson and Schewe flied out. The Tigers attempted a come back in the final half when Huber doubled to right field, but Canterbury flied out and Roberts and Lawrence went down on grounders to Wyman.

The Missouri scoring was confined to the fourth when Huber opened with a hit, Roberts sacrificed and Canterbury, with a two-bagger brought Huber across the plate. Thompson dropped Lawrence's fly and Canterbury scored. Whitbread bunted and Conzelman dropped the ball in attempting to tag Lawrence.

Shanley and Marquard scored in the fourth, when Thompson brought both across the plate. In the eighth the Pikers evened the score when Shanley hit, stole second, took third when Messick failed to hold the ball on Marquard's third strike, and scored on Berger's hot grounder at Packwood.

Central Defeats Yeatman; Soldan Loses to M'Kinley

Mid-City Nine Goes Into High School League Lead by Winning, 14-7.

Central High School took first place in the Baseball League race yesterday afternoon, defeating Yeatman, 14 to 7, and going ahead of the Soldan nine when the West Enders were trounced by McKinley, 5 to 4.

Schaefering, hurling for McKinley, had a patched up team behind him, and Soldan took advantage of errors and by scoring one in the third, two in the fourth and one in the fifth, held the lead until the ninth, when the South Siders, with the score 4—3 against them, rallied and won out. Four hits and an error enabled McKinley to count two runs in the final frame.

Soldan threatened to score in its half of the inning. With two out, Williamson tripled to right. Ravenscroft ended the game by popping to Schaefering.

The other game of the day was a slugging match, Central collecting 16 hits, while Yeatman gathered nine. Walter Roettger began on the hill for Yeatman, but was hampered by an injury to his leg, suffered in practice Friday. He was replaced in the first inning by Kunz. Oetzel, Yeatman's regular second sacker, also was out with an injured leg.

Standing of the teams:

Mound City Clubs Near Top in Team Batting Averages

Browns Tie Cleveland for League Leadership; Cards Second to Cincinnati.

Unofficial major league batting averages which include games of last Thursday show that if the St. Louis clubs are not crowding the leaders for first place, it is not because of weak hitting.

Both teams are flattening the ball powerfully. The Browns are tied with the Cleveland club for the swat leadership of the league with a percentage of .290. The Cardinals are second to the Cincinnati world's chaimpions, with a .273 mark.

In Hornsby the Cardinals own a swatsmith with the highest local record, .414 and his consistent hitting indicates he may keep up his present gait or close to it. Lavan is the only other Cardinal in the .300 division, but several are close to it.

The Browns' figures show some surprising marks, with four batsmen possessing averages of .315 or better, Jacobson being the low man. Gerber, Gedeon and Sisler are the other high men, with Gerber topping the team at .338. Fans find it hard to believe that Gerber and Gedeon are hitting at the phenomenal rate the records show for so extended a period.

Tigers the Batting Boobs.

The Giants and the Tigers are the "boob" hitters of the majors, with Detroit the most disgraceful failure of the year. The Tigers' batting average is now .213. They were expected to outhit all their rivals in the league.

Tyrus Cobb, the peerless mitter of other days, is gravitating at .242, which may in part account for the Detroit's showing. Tyrus has not flashed as yet, with weather of the winter variety working a hardship against the veteran.

Cobb has some brilliant company with him in the depths, in hitters like Strung, Flagstead and Joe Wood. Babe Ruth is steadily coming up toward the light and has passed the .260 mark with five homers to his credit.

Following are the more important figures:

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 15.—After the Joplin team had made six runs in the sixteenth inning, breaking a 3 to 3 tie with St. Joseph, Umpire Wilson declared the game forfeited to Joplin, 9 to 0, on the ground that St. Joseph had employed dilatory tactics. The Well-Known Hit and Run Style Has Won Many a Ball Game and Lost Many a Fight

Nationals Pound Sothoron and Win From Browns, 8-4

Burke's Flinger Suffers Injury in First, but Refuses to Leave Hill.

GEORGE SISLER STARS

First Sacker Raps Out Three Safeties and Pilfers Two Bases.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The Browns made their first appearance of the season here today and had to swallow a bad defeat, the Griffmen winning by the score of 8 to 4. The downfall can be directly charged to Allan Sothoron, who not only allowed hits to be bunched on him in two innings, but helped matters along for the locals with two weird throws to first.

Sothorn's ineffectiveness in the initial inning can be charged probably to an injured finger, which he received in covering the initial bag on Judge, the first man up. Judge hit to Sisler and Sothoron rushed over and tried to grab George's throw, but the ball hit the index finger and dropped to the ground. The play was so close that it had to go as a hit. Sothoron rubbed the injured finger for a few minutes and then renewed pitching with the result that Milan and Rice each hit safely, filling the bases. He recovered, striking out Roth and got Judge at the plate when Harris hit a roller to him, but Ellerbe and Shannon slammed out singles and three runs resulted.

Sothoron Collapses in Fifth.

The following three innings found Sothoron going well, the Griffmen failing to get a hit, but in the fifth he was forced to retire. Milan led off with a single, Rice rolled one to Allan and a bad throw to Sisler resulted, Roth beat out a bunt, filling the bases. Harris popped to Gerber and Ellerbe rolled to Sothoron, who threw wild to Sisler, Milan scoring and leaving the bases crowded. Shannon tripled and three runners scampered home.

One Tally Off Dixie Davis.

Davis ascended the rubber and his initial effort was a pass to Gharrety. Courtney flied to Jacobson and Shannon beat the big fellow's throw to the plate. Gherrity died stealing and the slaughter was over.

The Browns' first tally came in the third, when Austin singled and reached the plate on two outs and Sisler's timely single. Austin scored the second run when Shannon threw wild on his grounder, reached third on two outs and scored on Courtney's wild pitch. In the eighth, Sisler's double and Severeid's single scored the third run and in the ninth Gedeon scored on a single. Tobin's safety and a sacrifice fly by Williams.

Wellman or Vangilder Today.

Zachary or Johnson will pitch for the Griff's tomorrow with Wellman or Vangilder working for the Browns. A capacity crowd can be looked for with clear weather as the Griffs have been winning a few games and the local fans are somewhat wrought up over the showing.

Sothoron should have dropped out just as soon as he hurt his finger, but like all players he doubtless was afraid of being called a quitter.

Jimmy Austin is very popular with the local fans and he was given quite an ovation when he ran over close to the 50-cent pavilion after Judge's high foul and made an almost impossible catch. Altrock also made Jimmy prominent throughout the game by imitating all his movements around the thord corner.

Sisler was the big man once more for the Browns, tearing off a double and two singles. He also stole two bases.

Pikeway Athletes Capture First Honors in Municipal Carnival; McKinley Second

Washington U. and High School Teams, Coached by J. H. Castleman, Make Clean Sweep of Honors, Scoring 152 Points—600 Spectators Witness Championships.

In addition to being the occasion of the fourth annual track and field meet of the Municipal Athletic Association, yesterday was a rather large day for J. H. Castleman, who coaches runners, jumpers, vaulters, weight men, and track athletes of all description. Castleman is the coach of the Washington University and McKinley High School squads, and to these two squads went 152 of the points distributed during the four and one-half hours of competition at Francis Field.

Fifty-two of the points went to the Pikeway performers, who easily romped home with first place honors in the municipal championship division. It had been expected that the collegians would have a close race for the titular diadem with the Japri A. A., but the latter team fell down woefully, tallying only 11 points. In fact it was Castleman's other team, McKinley, that took second place in the municipal competition with 25 points.

Representatives of the South Side high school took first place in Class A, open to youths 15 years of age and under, with a total of 21; and second in the B division with 14. Leading honors in this class were won by Cleveland High with 18. Athletes between 15 and 16½ years of age were the contestants in the latter division.

Record Entry List.

This fourth renewal of the municipal championships was by far the most attractive set of games held by the association in that it attracted a large entry and a better quality of performers than its predecessors. There were only a few under 300 performers and fewer than 600 spectators.

The day was a raw one, the cold and a direct east wind precluding all chances of unusual marks in the runs with the exception of the sprints, in which the athletes did not have to face the breeze. Without an exception the contests were close, every racing event being in doubt until the last yard or so before the tape.

Probably the most dramatic finish of the day occurred in the mile run, when Allen Spencer, a Washington University freshman, overtook his leader during the last five yards of the three-lap grind and breasted the tape by the "bat of an eye" in front of M. Meyers, running for the North St. Louis Athletic Club. The fact that Meyers had never run this event in championship competition before and made such a splendid showing was probably as remarkable a feature as the finish itself.

Williams Sets Fast Pace.

Williams of Washington held a good lead for the first two laps by setting a killing pace, but in so doing he tired himself and had to drop the run. Meyers then went to the lead about 25 yards in front of Spencer and in this position the pair ran until 200 yards from the finish. There was then a desperate sprint, Spencer cutting the lead yard by yard. A last breath effort gave him the victory.

The outstanding performer of the day was 21-year-old Ward Tallman, a senior at Principia Academy. Tallman faced a field of sprinters more highly reputed than himself in the 100 and 220 yard dashes; but both events he won in a convincing manner. His time of 22 3-5 seconds in the furlong was probably the best track time of the day, while his 10 1-5 was the most commendable for a scholastic athlete.

Johnson Scores 14 Points.

Point honors of the afternoon went to Frank Johnson of McKinley High, with a total of 14 credited to him. Johnson took firsts in the low hurdles and broad jump, second in the high hurdles and fourth in the pole vault. Dick Kremer and Tallman were the others in the municipal championships to take two firsts; while Gerald Murchison carried a couple of blue ribbons in Class A. Murchison, a McKinley high junior, is a brother of Loren Murchison, nationally recognized sprinter. He won the 50-yard dash and broad jump and also materially assisted his team to win the relay race.

The biggest surprise came when Wilson Rowley and Hoagland, two Pikeway freshmen, finished ahead of Boeddeker in the quarter-mile run. Boeddeker never was near the lead and finished third, but failed to cross the finish line and was disqualified. Boeddeker until yesterday had been considered the premier quarter-miler of the city.

Loren Murchison to Represent St. Louis Club After Olympiad

Loren Murchison, national 220-yard champion, who left this city to join the New York Athletic Club squad last winter, announced yesterday that he would return to this city following his participation in the Olympic games this summer. Murchison will affiliate with the Epsilon Eta Club.

He will leave this city this evening for New York where he will appear before the Metropolitan District A. A. U. Elegibility Committee to apply for reinstatement. Murchison was suspended several months ago on the charge of making insulting remarks to the officials following a track meet.

Penn Track Team Defeats Cornell

Eby Comes Within 3-5 of a Second of Equaling Meredith's Half-Mile Mark.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—The University of Pennsylvania track team swamped the Cornell University athletes in their annual dual track and field meet here today with a score of 70 points to 40. It was in the field events that Pennsylvania shone conspicuously, scoring 38 points, as against Cornell's 7. Pennsylvania took eight firsts, out of the 13 events and had two of three men tied in the high jump.

Earl Eby defeated Karl Mayer, Cornell, intercollegite champion, by ten yards in one minute 55 2-5 seconds, three seconds slower than Ted Meredith's world record in the half mile.

Walter Smith, Cornell, intercollegiate hurdles champion, won the 120-yard high hurdles from Everett Smalley, Pennsylvania. Smith duplicated his time of 15 1-5 seconds in last year's intercollegiates.

Eddie Shields, Pennsylvania, won the two-mile race in 10:02 1-5, and Larry Brown, Pennsylvania, captured the mile in 4:25 1-5.

WASHINGTON HIGH HAS BIG DAY IN ATHLETICS

Washington High School athletes made a clean sweep in the annual field meet of county schools. In the morning the Washington girls won and in the afternoon the boys' meet was also captured by the Washingtonians. E. Rohe was the star of afternoon events, he scoring 20 of the 52 points made by Washington. In the evening both gold medals for declamation were won by Washington. Never before has a county school carried off all the honors of the day.

Bell Accountants Win.

The Accountants defeated the Executive Engineers, 17 to 6, in the Bell Telephone League yesterday afternoon. Rhodes pitched for the winners and allowed six hits, while his mates collected 22 off Randall and Murray, who did the hurling for the Engineers. Both teams erred frequently, the winners making nine misplays ad the losers seven.

CHICAGO, May 15.—University of Michigan triumphed over University of Chicago in a dual track meet today, 87 to 48. Michigan scored heavily in the dashes and middle-distance runs, while Chicago piled up points in the field events.

Higgins of Chicago won the discus and hammer throw, while Otis of Chicago also scored two firsts, winning the mile and two-mile runs. Cook of Michigan won the 100-yard dash in 10 1-5 and the 220-yard event in 22 1-5. Butler of Michigan took the 440-yard event in 50 2-5.

Hill and Moorehead Star for Ohio State.

COLUMBUS, O., May 15.—Ohio State University defeated Indiana University, 96 1-3 to 29 2-3, in a Western conference field and track meet here today. Indiana took only three first places, the discus throw, the shot put and the broad jump. Ohioans filled all available places in the 100-yard dash both the hurdles and the mile and two mile runs.

Hill and Moorehead of Ohio State were the individual stars of the meet, scoring 14 and 11-13 points respectively. Phillips was high man for the Hoosiers, scoring 8 1-3 points. Hebbe, Indiana's middle distance man, placed third in both the 440 and 880 yard dashes. No exceptional time was made in any event.

Osborne Ties Conference Record in Dual Meet.

MADISON, Wis., May 15.—Showing unexpected strength in events in which Illinois was expected to score heavily, the Wisconsin track team today defeated Illinois, 75 to 65, in one of the fastest meets in years. Superiority in the track events enabled the Badgers to win.

Osborne of Illinois set the best mark of the day in the high jump, clearing 6 feet 2¼ inches, which tied the conference record established by Johnson of Michigan last year. Nash of Wisconsin proved the biggest surprise of the meet by winning the half mile in 2:10 2-5, defeating a quartet of Illinois stars. Enders of Wisconsin won the pole vault at 12 feet 3 inches.

KANSAS AGGIES DEFEAT KANSAS IN DUAL MEET; WATSON SETS NEW MARK

LAWRENCE, Kan., May 15.—By the narrow margin of 1 2-3 points Kansas Agriculture College defeated the University of Kansas track team here today. A triple tie for first in the high jump netted the Aggies 5 1-3 points and the meet. The score was 55 1-3 to 53 2-3.

Bradley of Kansas, winner of the pentathlon event at the Penn relay meet, was high point winner with 17 2-3. He took first in the shot put and the broad jump and was in the tie in the high jump.

Watson for the Aggies broke the Kansas record for the two-mile run, making it in 9:41.

Many of the results were surprises and both sides scored in events in which they had not expected to win.

NAVY ATHLETES SET 2 RECORDS WINNING MEET

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 15.—Navy defeated University of Pittsburg in a well-contested field and track meet here today, 73 to 45 points. Shea of Pittsburg won in the 220 and 440 yard dashes.

Curtis clipped two seconds from the half-mile mark of 1.59 4-5 made by N. H. Geisenhoff in 1913 and Clapp beat his own mark for the discus throw by 7 inches, hurling the weight 129 feet 2 inches.

SPORT SALAD

BY L. C. Davis

What He Lacques.

THERE was a young fellow named Jacques,
Who made the most comical cracques.
To develop his brain.
Every effort was vain,
For his head contained nothing but tacques.

GOOD LUCK.

I HEARD to touch a hunchback
Would bring the best of luck;
It proved o. k., for yesterday
I touched one for a buck.

THE LIMIT.

THOSE cruel, heartless profiteers
Have made us shed a flock of tears.

We've seen the price of spuds arise
And mount until it reached the skies.

The price of sugar has gone up,
With bitterness to fill our cup.

We've seen the price of clothes advance
And fondly cling to our old pants.

Our overhead's increased so that
We can't afford to buy a hat.

We pay a fortune for a box
Of ordinary, cotton sox.

But the most unkindest cut of all
Is to charge a dime for a nickel ball.

LARGE DOINGS IN CHINA.

A marriage has been arranged between Mr. Ho Tai Shang, a wealthy merchant of HongKong and Canton, and Miss Su Shing Kwan, the well-known actress of the Kwan Fong Yim Ying Theatrical Company. Mr. Ho's wedding gift will be property valued at $100,000, and in addition he is erecting a residence at Laichee Wan, Sai Kwan, where the future Mrs. Ho will reside.

WHAT, HO!

I SEE where Mr. Ho Tai Shang
Will marry Su Shing Kwan.
The merry wedding bells will clang.
And they will be made one.
The happy groom will give the bride,
Besides a lot of dough,
A lovely home, where will reside,
The future Mrs. Ho.

RUM IS RIGHT.

See where Jamaica liquor is in demand. That's a rum go as our friend John Bull would say.

FOR WHAT AILED HIM.

For the sake of my tum
In which I now have a slight ache, ah."

JOCKEY CLUB STEWARDS BAR GAMBLERS FROM CLUB HOUSE AT JAMAICA

JAMAICA, N. Y., May 15.—Jockey Club stewards today excluded from the club house 10 well-known professional gamblers with a warning that for the slightest indication of sharp practices they would be barred from all race tracks in the State.

Today's action was declared the outgrowth of the ruling off the turf of several jockeys recently when it was expected that the club would take drastic measures against enemies of honest sport. Close surveillance by the club of riders and speculators has been under way for some time, it was stated.

Cornell Varsity Eight Winner in Triangular Race

Ithacans Finish Third of Length Ahead of Princeton—Yale Finishes Last.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 15.—Cornell's two crews triumphed in the triangular regatta here today. The varsity oarsmen swept across the finish line one-third of a length ahead of Princeton and one and three quarters length ahead of Yale, and the freshmen won by five lengths from Princeton, and eight lengths from Yale. Princeton won the junior varsity race from Yale. Cornell did not compete.

The varsity race was timed in 9 minutes and 16 seconds, the freshman race in 9 minutes and 18 seconds, and the junior varsity event in 9 minutes and 30 seconds.

Cornell Deserved Victory.

Cornell deserved the victory in the varsity race. Had it not been for the fact that the No. 4 oarsmen in the Cornell boat caught his oar on one of the half-mile marking posts, the Ithacans would have won by at least a length. Princeton staged a magnificent spurt in the last quarter of a mile, but could not make up the lead gained by Cornell in the first mile and aneighth. As it was Princeton's drive fell short by a third of a length.

Cornell and Princeton got away to an even start. Yale lost a length in the first 200 yards. At the end of the half, Cornell was half a length ahead of Princeton, while the Tigers were a nose in front of Yale. At this point the Cornell No. 4 oarsman caught his oar in the half-mile post and the stroke was broken for a moment. The Cornell oarsmen then dropped back a quarter of a length. However, they staged a comeback and at the mile led by three quarters of a length. They steadily gained until the last quarter when Princeton made a tremendous spurt and clipped Cornell's lead. The advantage was too much, however, and Cornell flashed across the line ahead.

Princeton led Yale all the way in the Junior varsity event. Cornell's freshmen eight won decisively.

Summaries:

Eight-oared varsity race: Won by Cornell, second Princeton, third Yale. Time—9m. 16s.

Junior's varsity: Won by Princeton, second Yale. Time—9m. 30s.

Freshmen eight-oared race: Won by Cornell, second Princeton, third Yale. Time—9:18s.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 15.—Eight-oared shell crews of the Annapolis midshipmen and Syracuse University were the contestants today in two bitterly fought two mile races on Severn river, a scant margin of seven feet and four fifth of a second separating the winning crews in each instance.

The Syracusans captured the varsity race. The time of the respective crews at the finish was: Varsity—Syracuse 10:20 1-5; Navy 10:21. Second Varsity Navy 10:37 2-5; Syracuse 10:38 1-5.

FORMER SOLDIER IS ACQUITTED

Casper Leon Van den Huerk, on trial in the United States District Court on a charge of impersonating an army officer, was acquitted by a jury yesterday on the Court's instruction for a verdict of acquittal, unless the evidence was that alteration of his discharge certificate was done in St. Louis. Van den Huerk's testimony was that he changed the paper at De Witt, Mo., his home.

Van den Huerk was a Corporal and was discharged at Camp Pike, Ark., in December, 1918. Search of his home disclosed the altered certificate and a Captain's uniform. Van den Huerk testified he went home as a Captain because he had told his mother he was to be commissioned on his discharge. She was dying and he wished to cheer her, he testified.

HOBSON DEFENDS INVASION OF BRITAIN BY DRY FORCES

Spanish War Hero Says Campaign Is Not Only Justified but Necessary to U. S. Interest.

"America not only has a perfect right to introduce a prohibition campaign in England, but it is necessary for her own interest that she should do the same thing in other civilized countries," said Richmond Pearson Hobson, hero of the Merrimac episode at Santiago during the war with Spain, and who, as Congressman from Alabama, introduced the first proposal for a prohibition measure in Congress in 1911.

Capt. Hobson, now representing the National and World Anti-Saloon League, arrived here yesterday morning from Cape Girardeau, and will make three addresses here today under the auspices of the Missouri Anti-Saloon League. He is at the Planters Hotel.

The Captain has changed much in appearance from the slender young Lieutenant who, 22 years ago, sank the collier Merrimac in the entrance to Santiago harbor in the effort to bottle up Cervera's fleet. The small mustache he wore in those days is gone, he has enlarged greatly in frame and he speaks with earnestness on the necessity for world prohibition.

His earnest manner is in strong contrast to the joyous abandon with which he made addresses throughout the country in 1898, at most of which he made a habit of kissing the pretty girls in his audience. The then Miss Emma Arnold of St. Louis, is said to have been the girl who started the kissing craze with the naval hero.

Discusses Johnson's Work.

In speaking of W. E. Johnson's invasion of England, which has aroused so much hostility in that country on the ground that the United States workers were mixing in affairs that were none of their business, Capt. Hobson said:

"We look at this question only from the scientific standpoint, and from the effect alcohol has had upon nations. A cure is needed for any country that has been in the habit of drinking alcohol. That cure is needed for the entire world, interrelated as civilized countries will be. If America cannot extend this cure to other nations, she cannot be permanently cured herself."

The effect on birthrates is appalling, he said, in countries where alcohol is habitually used. "Take France for instance," he said. "In that country the people have long been accustomed to using wine. It is used by every class. And the birthrate of France has been declining for years and is now exceeded by the death rate.

"Unless France can be revitalized by temperance, her population will be at a negative figure in 200 years.

Blames Beer for Ruthlessness.

"It was the beer-soaked brain of the German that created the idea of frightfulness in the late world war. It is easy to show this by scientific facts. Beer has a different effect upon the brain from distilled liquors. Contrary to the general belief, whisky has done less harm in the world than beer. It has not been used so extensively.

"Ethyl alcohol has been the cause of the decadence of many nations. Even in the days when distilled liquors were not used, the destructive effects of fermented drinks have been easy to trace.

"I studied the question from that angle before I took up work for the prohibition cause. While a Congressman in Washington I got the librarians of the Congressional Library to help me. And every fact that we discovered is above dispute. Rome, Greece, Babylon and other nations went down under the degeneracy caused by liquor, as well as from the liquor itself. The great Assyrian empire went from supremacy to extinction in 200 years.

"Alcohol in each case produces a diseased condition of the individual and of the nation. The degeneracy caused by the drug is marked and this lowering of the morale of nations caused their downfall."

"How about nations always regarded as heavy consumers of alcohol—Russia and England, for instance?" he was asked.

"Russia consumed less than is believed," he said. "The poverty of the peasants was such that they could not keep themselves steeped in liquor. England has been largely upheld by the fact that her leaders, many of them unquestionably heavy drinkers, have always had a strong and comparatively temperate element in the middle classes, from which to revitalize their stock.

"The diseased condition of the human race which now exists from the use of alcohol can only be cured by thoroughly spreading the facts about the drug. The organized business that profits by the exploitation of that drug, ethyl alcohol, will need the full power of America to control it.

Would Remove Cause of Ills.

"The only way of curbing the manifold social ills that are now scourging the world is a removal of the cause.

"To say that alcohol is this cause is stating the matter dispassionately. The National and World Anti-Saloon League, which I am representing, has taken this matter up from the scientific standpoint, has studied the actual harm that has been done to the race.

"As a result, I believe civilization will have a general principle that a destructive commodity like alcohol cannot be exploited at the cost of the people. When a league is finally formed among nations, I believe this principle will be incorporated along with other safeguards for international peace. That is why a campaign is being conducted in England today."

Hobson, who retired from the navy when he was elected to Congress, was retired with the rank of Captain.

His address of this morning will be given at the Union M. E. Church, 3610 Delmar boulevard. He will visit Ferguson this afternoon, making an address at 3 o'clock and will speak at the Church of the Ascension, Cates and Goodfellow avenues, this evening. He will speak tomorrow night in Hannibal, Mo. The campaign, in which he is cooperating with the Missouri Anti-Saloon League, will last until June 6.

ELIGIBLE BUSINESS CORNER TO BE PUT ON SALE MAY 27

Mercantile Trust Co. to Dispose of Eighteenth Street and Washington Avenue Property at Auction.

TWO APARTMENT BUILDINGS SOLD

Transactions Said to Involve More Than $1,000,000, Details Being Withheld—Equitable Building Negotiations.

By Berry Moore.

The real estate department of the Mercantile Trust Co. is having many inquiries concerning the property at the southwest corner of Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, to be sold at auction under its auspices May 27. The inquiries include several from real estate agencies and capitalists in other cities to whom the trust company has sent "literature" in this connection, while in several instances overtures have been made looking to the purchase of the property at private sale, foreseeing lively competition for it at the auction.

The site has 106 feet on Washington avenue and 150 feet on Eighteenth street, and is occupied by a three-story building, which before conversion was used as the Manual Training School of Washington University. It is owned by a corporation which desires to convert the holding into cash to be employed for other purposes, and which has instructed the trust company to dispose of it without limit or reserve to the highest bidder. Thus the sale, it is believed, will offer opportunity for a most advantageous purchase, especially in view of the fact that the corner occupies a commanding situation in the Washington avenue wholesale district, thereby involving exceptional speculative advantages.

Eligible Site for Large Hotel.

The site is regarded as eligible for a hotel on a large scale, or for a building for a big commercial concern with which the prominence of location is a prime requisite.

It is opposite the Marquette Hotel, which has been a strikingly notable success, and Charles S. Levy, president of the Hub Furniture Co., is building a 12-story hotel at the southwest corner of Eighteenth and Locust streets, to be known as the Claridge, one block south.

The fact that the property is at the head of the Washington avenue wholesale district, many concerns in which have sales ranging from $10,000,000 to $50,000,000 annually, assures in this instance the greatest interest from both capitalists and commercial interests with ambitious building plans.

There is much capital available for investment in St. Louis real estate, with many large investors in the market for holdings of the foregoing caliber and character, to be had on attractive terms and at advantageous prices. Thus the wide interest this announcement will excite.

$1,000,000 Deals in Apartments.

Negotiations have been concluded for the sale of two large apartment buildings, the aggregate consideration for which will exceed $1,000,000. The agents in the transactions, however, were not in a position to disclose the details. Sales of buildings of this character are a feature of the investment market, but operators are averse to publicity incident thereto as embarrassing to future operations.

According to real estate circles, the Equitable Building, at the northwest corner of Sixth and Locust streets, has been involved in negotiations several times recently, banks and trust companies in each instance being the prospective purchaser. The cost of alterations for banking purposes has in each case precluded

PERSHING AVENUE APARTMENT BUILDING SOLD FOR $40,000

The Dyas-Shelp Realty Co. announces the sale of 6061 Pershing avenue, an apartment building, for John R. Harkins to a client for $40,000. SALE OF DURANT PARK LOTS TO OPEN TODAY

Davis Realty Company Manager Expects Finish to Be Reached Within Few Weeks.

The Davis Realty and Development Co.'s new industrial subdivision, Durant Park, fronting King's highway, Bircher, Queens, Thekla, Ruskins and Durant avenues, will today be formally opened for sale.

This tract is well located for a residential place for workers in the industrial plants in that vicinity. It is surrounded on the west and south by a well built-up residential section. The Mark Twain School, one of the finest education building in St. Louis, is at the corner of the property. The sale has been made by the Davis company of a lot 325x250 feet, fronting Thekla avenue, on which will be erected the church, school building, parochial residence and Sister's Home of St. Philip Neri Parish, of which the Rev. Father Thomas B. Kennedy is the pastor.

Earl Watkins, general manager of the Davis Realty Co., says he expects to see Durant Park sold out within a few weeks.

The lease was made by Orville Grove, assistant real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. The building is approximately 400 feet square, located just north of the Free Bridge. Philip H. Brockman is president of the warehouse company, George Weber vice president, and J. James McGregor, secretary and treasurer. Directors are Joseph A. Schlecht, James P. Newell, R. C. Frampton and S. W. Ramsay.

6002 Clemons Avenue Sold.

Harry M. Willhite has purchased 6002 Clemons avenue from Mrs. N. B. Jacobs, and will occupy it as a residence. The Hewson Realty Co. represented both parties.

FREE BAND CONCERT AT BEVERLY HILLS TODAY

Lunch and Other Attractions Offered Visitors to Industrial District Subdivision.

A free brass band concert, with lunch and other things gratis, will be the attraction today for visitors to Beverly Hills, a subdivision of 800 lots on Natural Bridge and Lucas and Hunt roads.

The addition is being disposed of in lots at a special sale under the auspices of Knobeloch & Prettyman, more than 200 lots of the plot having been disposed of during the last week.

The tract is only a short way west of the mammoth industrial subdivision on the north side of Natural Bridge road, extending from King's Highway to Goodfellow avenue, wherein the General Motors Co., the United Drug Co. and more than a score of other mighty concerns are building plants. Thousands of skilled workmen, clerks and officials will be required in the operation of these plants. Accordingly Beverly Hill has been laid out as available for homes for this contingent of wage earners, the vanguard of whom are vieing with speculators and investors for the first choice at the lots, according to the sales agents.

Financial arrangements have been made for the erection in Beverly Hills of 20 bungalows of the true California type, to be offered for sale on easy terms and at attractive prices.

RESIDENCE CORNERS

A residence built on a corner lot has distinct advantages over one on an inside lot.

It is better looking.
It has more individuality.
It is lighter and more cheerful.
It is cooler and healthier.

We have three or four corner lots in Ames Place on Melville, Adelaide and Pennsylvania Avenues that no home-builder should overlook.

See our representative at Pershing and Pennsylvania Avenues (University car) this afternoon.

DO YOU KNOW that I have the best and most practical plan for home ownership for those who are really in earnest about getting away from paying rent? It will pay you to investigate immediately, because those who have accepted my proposition are now recommending it to their friends, and, of course, it is limited. Remember, my proposition insures you a home. See Jones, Davis Realty and Development Co., Odd Fellows' Bldg., 816 Olive st.

ATTENTION, Young Men and Women! Would you rather as a renter buy a house for somebody else, or buy a home for yourself? Rents are increasing every day, so would the value of your home increase. The first and foremost desire of every family is to own a home of their own. If you have that desire, let me show you how to start buying a home with $200. Phone or call on Jones, Davis Realty Development Co., second floor, Odd Fellows Bldg.

I wish to thank Mrs. F. W. Sachse and family for their kind remembrances of my dear mother, Caroline Ahrenholt, on Mothers' day, May 9.
MRS. GEORGE SCHNELL, daughter. (c)

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Emil Senf, who departed this life four years ago, May 13, 1916. Sadly missed, but never forgotten, by WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Julius J. Spindler, who departed this life May 13 1918. Gone but not forgotten. Sadly missed by wife and children.
MRS. ANNA SPINDLER, 1723 Dolman.

In loving remembrance of my beloved husband and son, J. W. Hiestand, who passed away three years ago, May 14, 1917.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, MOTHER, BROTHER AND SISTERS

In loving memory of our devoted mother, Magdalena Knopf, who departed this life one year ago today, May 18, 1919.

A loving mother, true and kind,
No friend like her on earth we'll find,
God called her home—it was His will—
But in our hearts she lingers still,
For all of us she did her best.
May God grant her eternal rest.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, DAUGHTER AND SON.

In memory of my beloved husband, father and brother, John Werescheide, who died May 16, 1919.

The depths of my sorrow I cannot tell
At the loss of my husband I loved so well;
And while he lies in peaceful sleep,
His memory I shall always keep.

Sadly missed by
WIFE, CHILDREN AND BROTHER.
Requiem mass at St. Francis de Sales, May 21, 8 o'clock.

In loving memory of our darling son, grandson, nephew and cousin, Georgie Machortoff, who left us one year ago, May 15, 1919.

Today recalls sad memories
Of our loved one gone to rest,
And those who think of him today
Are the ones who loved him best.
Our dear Georgie, how we miss you,
Since from earth you passed away,
Sad our hearts, but sweet the memory,
As we think of you each day.

Sadly missed by his PARENTS, GRANDPARENTS AND AUNT.

In loving memory of our darling sister, Rose Hunsinger (nee Raessner), who departed her life one year ago, May 16, 1919.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly
In her silent, lonely grave.
Peaceful be your sleep, dear sister,
It is sweet to breathe your nace.
In life we loved you dearly—
In death we do the same.
Just one year ago you left us,
How we miss you, sister, dear,
And remember all your kindness
As we drop a silent tear.
Never from our memory forgotten,
Loving hearts will always linger
Round the grave where you are laid.

Sadly missed by
SISTERS, MOTHER, BROTHER, SON.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

S. S.—Your question was answered in this column May 1.

JACK GREEN.—There is no premium on a $10 gold piece dated 1853.

R.—You can get books from the Public Library on the breeding of rabbits.

X. Y. Z.—We do not give business addresses in this column. Watch the advertising.

G. M. B.—The Army Recruiting Station, Third and Olive, can give you the information you want.

NES.—Gov. Lowden of Illinois took office in 1917. He was in office during the East St. Louis riots.

BRAINLESS WALTER.—The "is it not" and "will you not" are used correctly in the sentences you sent in.

C. M. T.—The temperature at which an electric iron is the most efficient has never been determined.

MUTT AND JEFF.—If you wish to use any Mutt and Jeff cartoons you will have to buy the right from the owner of the copyright.

BOB.—If you wish to become a notary public send for an application to the Secretary of State, Jefferson City, Mo.

READER ON MAFFITT AV.—There is a preparation that can be bought in hardware stores that will clean your walls.

A. B.—A man can join the yeoman branch of the U. S. Navy without a commercial education. You can get full particulars at the Navy Recruiting Station.

A. A. X.—Perhaps a suction pump would serve the purpose. Why do you not consult some other people on the river about their method of obtaining water? Then you could find out which one suited your situation.

MARIE.—Perhaps the following will help you to remove the oil stain from your white kid slippers: Dab the spot carefully with spirits of sal ammoniac, and after allowing it to act for awhile, wash with clean water. This treatment may have to be repeated a few times.

STENO.—The rust on iron and steel objects, especially large pieces, is readily removed by rubbing the pieces with oil of tartar, or with a very fine emery and a little oil, or by putting powdered alum in strong vinegar and rubbing with this alumed vinegar.

COMMA.—The title, "Women Men Forget," is correct as it stands. If a comma were placed after "women" it would change the meaning. In the event of the comma it would mean that someone was addressing "women" and telling them that "men forget," but the title means that there are women whom men forget.

W. A. C.—If there is no ring bearer the best man carries the ring and when the time arrives gives it to the minister. The best man also pays the minister with the money given him by the groom. If it is to be a church wedding the best man precedes the groom to the altar and is the attendant of the maid of honor. You need not worry about your duties, you will be instructed in them.

I'M A NUT.—The word "adjusted" used that way is nothing more than a manufacturer's term. You can be prosecuted for stealing oat straw. Berta is a Spanish and Italian form of Bertha, so both are correct. Wm. MacLoed Raines' middle name is pronounced Mac Lod, long "o." If the young man intends the lady to take only one piece of gum when he hands her the package he should say, "Would you like a piece of gum?" Otherwise the lady might naturally think he had given her the whole package.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(Prepared by a member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

M. H.—When speaking of a picture we would say this sentence is correct: "I think that one has such a beautiful scene."

6628 CREST AV.—Successful Generals are nearly always honored by having schools, streets, towns, etc., named after them.

SIDNEY.—You will have to support your child. If your wife deserted you without cause you need not continue to support her; otherwise you do.

A. R.—There may have been unavoidable delays in the matter. If you think the lawyer is at fault, report the facts to the Secretary of the Bar Association.

A BROTHER.—If there was any agreement to pay the sister for her care, she can claim compensation from the estate. But she has no claim against insurance in the wife's name.

MRS. C. HILL.—Since the sale of the automobile was induced by the fraudulent misrepresentation of his salesman, you can rescind the agreement and can demand the return of your old car or of the full $600. If he refuses to settle with you on that basis you can sue him.

R. P. N.—Success does not necessarily mean money. There have been many successful men who were poor. Great artists, great musicians and great poets have very often been poor men, so poor, in fact, that there was not even money to bury them, and yet they were successful. Success is nothing but a point of view. From your friends' point of view it means money.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses on treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

READER.—Acid fruits are those which have a sharp taste as opposed to those where the taste is sweet and sugar predominates.

G. W. T.—A great many persons go through life with gall stones without any discomfort, or at least with so little as not to suspect their presence. This condition of the gall bladder becomes of significance and a source of danger when infection or inflammation exists, or when small stones begin to pass into the ducts. Cures by means of medication are claimed. It is perhaps the alleviation of the symptoms and not the removal of the stones that is accomplished in this way. Organic heart disease is always a source of danger. But so long as compensation of the heart is maintained a person with an organic disease may be comfortable and in ignorance of his condition.

SEVENTEEN.—Acne is a disease most often met with between the thirteenth and thirtieth year. The causes are some disturbances in the general health, such as faulty digestion, etc. The treatment calls for a careful search for the cause and the correction of it. In addition local treatment is nearly always of value. Local applications are in the form of lotions, powders, pastes and ointments. Obstinate cases, which have resisted all other treatment, very often yield to the X-ray. You might try locally Vleminickx's solution. Use one part of solution to four parts of water, gradually increasing the strength by decreasing the amount of water each time. Apply at night, let dry on and then wash off in the morning.

Hoffman's, 2341 Olive; open evenings.

YOU "might" "say it with flowers," but it don't get you anywhere. It takes the "hard cash" and "a good front" to get "by with it." If you want to travel with her," as the "new song goes," "Daddy, You Certainly Have Been a Mother to Me." We claim for 10 years we have been daddy and mother to thousands of guys whose bank rolls have been "down and out," by dressing them up at little or no cost. Buy our uncalled-for clothes; "start anew;" we "are calling you" with our 4 large stores, 120 feet, filled with "bargains galore." What you "save when you spend your dough is your profit." Install the "Abrams System" of clothes buying, and save. Be "awake" to the "fact" your personal appearance "must count." We have in "store" for you high-class suits; you can afford to wear two or three suits a season for the price of the customary one by purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments are tailor made and from the best manufacturers; $10 to $20. Can you wear 34, 36, 38, 43, 40, 46 to 50 sizes? Also English and plain models. Vests, 50c. Pants, $2 to $3.95. Coats, $5 to $10. Uncalled-for Stetson hats, 95c. Open Sundays until 6 p. m. Abrams Cleaners and Dyers, 926 S. Vandeventer, near Chouteau. Mail orders filled. Both phones. (c)

WE do business on a "large scale," at a "small profit." Why? We are still playing around that $25, $30 and $35 work. We claim a $5 bill profit is all we need on "a suit." "Out-of-the-high-rent district." "No heavy expenses." Once we get your "Business," and we will if "Dollar and Cents" mean anything to you. "We can't lose you." We'll save you $5.00 to $15 on a Suit. "For 10 years we have saved thousands of dollars for the clothes-buying public." "What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you." These fine garments are made by the manufacturer for display or modeling purposes for traveling salesmen; they are made much better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity; this policy enables us to save you money. "All we ask you to "go shopping around" first and come here last, and we will certainly get your "dough." "Buy more, pay less." Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau and all other lines transfer to our door. We again announce our "Trade-in-Sale" Department. We will make you a liberal allowance on your old clothes for new ones. "The place to buy clothes." 926 S. Vandeventer av., near Chouteau. (c)

Bear One Thing in Mind

That when you purchase a Used Vehicle you have to rely to a very large extent on the reliability of the firm who sells you the Used Vehicle as to its true value and condition.

This Company is not in the second-hand Car or Truck business and every car or truck offered for sale has been taken in trade from some party who has purchased a New Packard Car or Truck and in the sale of the Used Car or Truck taken in trade we aid to lay the foundation for the sale of a New Car or Truck to YOU some day.

Consequently we cannot afford to misrepresent the true condition of the Vehicle offered for sale.

This policy makes us the Safest Used Vehicle Market in the WORLD.

We offer no bargains, but we have some wonderful values on both Used Cars and Used Trucks.

Time payments on both Cars and Trucks if desired.

USED CARS — HUDSON FRAMPTON MOTOR CAR CO.

GUARANTEES made by automobile dealers are somewhat similar to those applying to other industries. They usually are made to sound well, but contain enough loopholes to permit of any interpretation.

The management of the HUDSON-FRAMPTON MOTOR CAR CO. is shrewd enough not to jeopardize its future. We could no more permit a misunderstanding to arise where justice is on the owner's side than would a business man, jealous of his credit, repudiate an obligation.

EUROPE'S MOST BEAUTIFUL PRINCESS TO BE A BRIDE.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH, eldest daughter of the King of Rumania, is soon to be married to Prince George, elder brother of the King of Greece. She has frequently been acclaimed as the most beautiful Princess in Europe, and as she reached the age of twenty-six before choosing a husband, there had been much speculation as to whom she would marry.

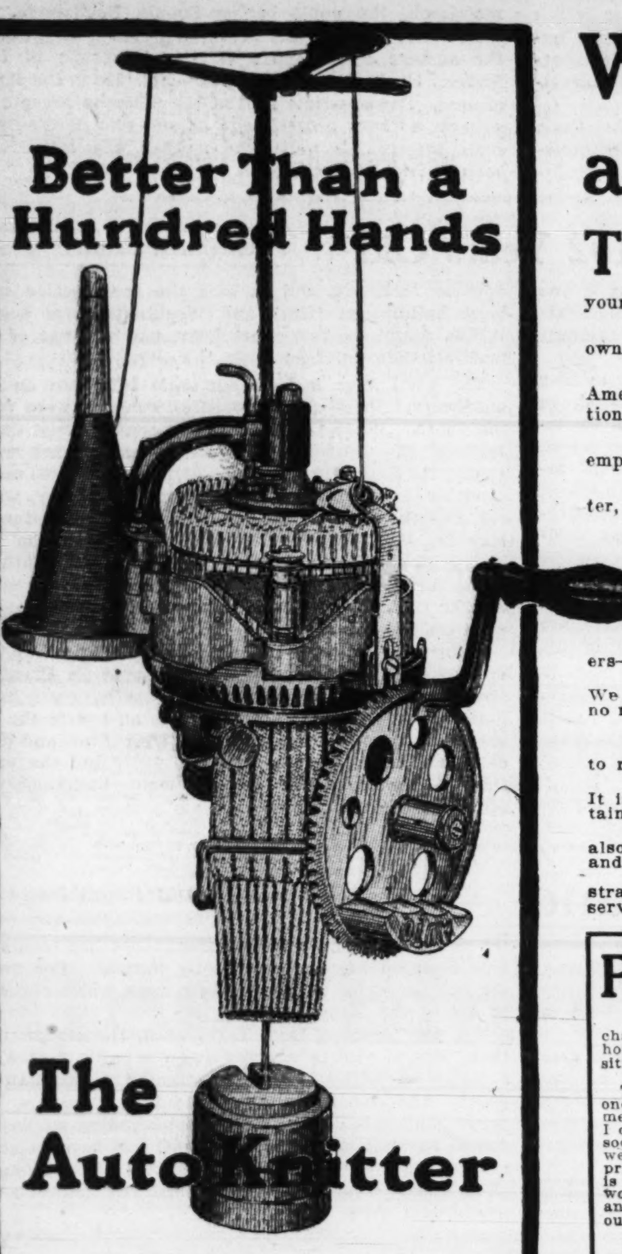
Better Than a Hundred Hands



The AutoKnitter

A turn of the handle and from 60 to 200 smooth, even, perfect stitches are knitted. Thousands of such stitches can be made in a few minutes by the operator of average experience. Many of our workers report that, with the Auto Knitter, a completed sock can be made in less than 10 minutes. When the Auto Knitter goes into action it is just like having many families of skilled knitters working for you; that is why our trademark is "Better than a Hundred Hands." It makes the sock—top—body—heel—and—toe—without removal from the machine. It weighs about 20 pounds, can be clamped to any ordinary table or stand and can be used anywhere. It is easily learned. Experience in knitting and familiarity with machines are totally unnecessary. Complete instructions about how to use the Auto Knitter are sent to every worker. The Auto Knitter is to hand knitting what the sewing machine is to hand sewing.

Profit and Pleasure

This is to certify that I have used the Auto Knitter in my home with entire satisfaction, and that the Auto Knitter Company have not said too much in stating that the work wears as well as hand knitted. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." I have the socks and I know.

I consider the company to be honorable in their business dealings and, like their machine, is to be relied upon.

The Auto Knitter does the finest work of any machine I have seen, and I am perfectly satisfied with it as a means of profit in every way.

Mifflinburg, Pa.

More Than Two Dozen Pairs a Day

The Auto Knitter has proven very satisfactory. The work done on the machine cannot be surpassed. I consider this machine stands in a class by itself. Absolutely perfect work can be made. The only requirement is to learn the work, and then work. The Auto Knitter is very speedy, and any person of good judgment can knit from one to two dozen pairs of socks a day, and if they want to push the work they can turn out more. The treatment by the Auto Knitter Company is the best, and I have found them to be absolutely reliable. Berlin, N. Y.

We supply the yarn free and pay you for the socks

THE whole world needs socks. In every country, in every city, in every town and in every village—in every corner of the world, in fact—there is an acute shortage of hosiery.

This great demand is your personal opportunity. It is your chance to add substantially to your income. It is the weapon with which you can meet the constantly increasing high cost of living.

You can make this extra money pleasantly and easily in the privacy, freedom and comfort of your own home.

This is an unusual advertisement due to an unusual world-condition. We are a firmly established American Corporation engaged in the manufacture of high-grade seamless socks. Our business connections are world-wide. We have been in business many years.

We have always preferred home manufacture to factory production. We believe in the independent employe. We know that the best work is that which is done by well-paid, contented people in happy homes.

These socks can be made by men and women. Knitting experience is unnecessary. The Auto Knitter, a marvelous machine made by us, does the work. Anyone can quickly learn to operate this machine.

Workers wanted everywhere

For the reasons stated above—the unprecedented world demand for hosiery—we need more workers—thousands of them. We need you.

We need all the socks you and your family can make on the Auto Knitter. We need this labor badly. We will make a contract to pay you a Fixed Wage, on a piece-work basis. In this contract you take no risk. You can work for as much as you want or as little as you want—spare time or full time.

And for every dozen pairs of socks you send us we will pay you a liberal wage.

With every Auto Knitter we send a supply of yarn FREE. We also suppply FREE the yarn needed to replace that which is used in making the socks you send us.

The yarn we supply is the well-known Qu-No Quality Brand, made especially for the Auto Knitter. It is the Softest, the Warmest, the Strongest. Uniformity in quality, weight and shade is always obtainable. We issue a Free Shade Card that contains samples of Qu-No Quality Yarns.

You are, of course, at liberty to dispose of the output of the Auto Knitter as you see fit; you can also use the Auto Knitter to make, at a remarkably low cost, all the hosiery your family needs—wool and cotton.

But please remember this: There are absolutely no strings tied to our Wage Agreement; it is a straight out-and-out Employment Offer of a Fixed Wage on a piece-work basis—a good pay for your services alone.

Positively Not a "Canvassing Scheme"

The Auto Knitter gives you the opportunity to make money during your spare time. It also gives you the chance to devote your entire time to the business, and thus to be independent of bosses, rules, time-clocks, working hours, etc. Our Wage Contract is in no sense a disguised "canvassing scheme," "agency" or "open-a-store" proposition. Here is the proof—read the evidence from some of our workers:

The Auto Knitter is one of the best investments anyone could make. I can make three pairs of socks in an hour. In one week I made $35.00 from private trade alone. It is the finest and cleanest work I have ever done, and I would not be without it. Wheatley, Ont.

Since purchasing your machine I have made over one thousand three hundred pairs of men's half hose, and the machine is in perfect running order.

My work has all been accepted and promptly paid for, and I have received the most courteous treatment at all times.

The Auto Knitter Hosiery Company does not exaggerate, and lives up to all of its statements.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Am sending you today a shipment of half-hose. I wish to compliment you on the promptness with which you returned replacement yarn and check. Gays, Ill.

In this same mail I am sending you 74 pairs of half-hose. Hope they will reach you all right. Please send replacement yarn and wages and I will send another shipment soon.

State College, Pa.

I have just sent you a lot of half-hose made by my Auto Knitter with yarn supplied by you. I am glad to avail myself of this opportunity to tell you how much pleased I am with the machine and what pleasure it gives me to work it. I also wish to thank you for the courtesy and prompt attention you have always shown me.

Buffalo, N. Y.

I am sending you another lot of socks today. I am getting along fine with my machine, and thank you for the promptness with which you have accepted and paid for my hosiery.

What People Read These Days—And Why

Gone to the ten-cent counter are the once eagerly sought stories of the war and war adventures, and in their place comes a big demand for serious publications, books on finance, salesmanship and self-improvement, with "spook" literature running a close second—Mystery tales lead fiction sales :: ::

MESSAGES from the other world, and how best to earn a competence in this one, are the two subjects most interesting right now to St. Louisans who buy books. Managers of local book stores are agreed that the "war book," which for some three or four years dominated the publishing field, has quite lost its vogue.

Books along psychic lines, and those dealing with business topics have shown such an enormously increased sale within the last six months as to astonish persons connected with the trade. New titles are being constantly added to the list of business books, and many of the older ones are being frequently reprinted, yet dealers say that they are hardly able to keep up with the demand for this class of literature.

Accounting, salesmanship, investments, foreign trade, insurance, transportation problems, factory methods and the science of advertising are some of the subjects which thoughtful men are studying.

"A new order of things is coming to pass in the business world, and alert minds are studying the various angles which may affect them or their particular lines of business," said a book dealer in explanation. "That perhaps accounts for the middle-aged men who are wrestling with economic texts for the first time since they left college, even if they studied the subject there. But in the case of the younger men, who predominate among these buyers, I believe that their army experience had a lot to do with their very evident determination now to make a success in the world.

"For one thing, army life had the effect of waking up many young men, and bouncing their minds out of a narrow circle of ideas wherein they might otherwise have remained for years and years to come. Then, too, many of them feel that the one or two years which they spent in the service were an economic loss and must be made up for now by redoubled efforts."

The following business books were mentioned, not as being necessarily the best sellers, but as indicating the scope of reading now done by a considerable portion of the public: "Money and Banking," by John Thom Holdsworth; "Bookkeeping and Accounting," by Joseph J. Klein; "Accounting Theory and Practice," by Roy B. Kester; "The Principles of Bond Investment," by Lawrence Chamberlain; "Stabilizing the Dollar," by Irving Fisher; "Advertising and Selling," by H. L. Hollingsworth," and "Business Barometers for Anticipating Business Conditions," by Roger W. Babson. One of the old timers which is being called for by this clientele is Henry George's "Progress and Poverty."

The rage for books of psychic interest reached large proportions several years ago in England, and usually has been explained as a consequence of soldier deaths, and the desire of bereaved families for consolation. While the world beyond, and alleged communications with it, have been studied by a slowly widening group in this country for many years, the movement here had its largest growth after such persons as Sir Oliver Lodge, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and other eminent men had become publicly identified with it. Psychic books by English and American authors now form a considerable list by themselves, and are having a tremendous sale. One does not need to be an avowed spiritualist to enjoy many of these books, and, in fact, the book sellers believe that quite a good many of the purchasers are simply yielding to a somewhat ghoulish curiosity in at least their first purchases of such books. But the sale of psychic books has been upon such a scale that no theory other than a widespread interest in the subject will explain it.

"Raymond," by Lodge; "The Vital Message," by Doyle; "Thy Son Liveth," which is published anonymously; "The Unknown," by Camille Flammarion; "The Physical Phenomena of Spiritualism," by Hereward Carrington, and "The Abolishing of Death," by Basil King are some of the more popular psychic books.

When dealers say that the "war book" has outstayed its welcome, they except certain volumes which already are taking their place among the classics, and for which there undoubtedly will be a steady although limited demand for years to come. Such books include "Memories and Records," by Lord Fisher; "Cardinal Mercier's Own Story;" "Now It Can Be Told," by Philip Gibbs, the famous war correspondent; "The Inside Story of the Peace Conference," by Dr. Edward J. Dillon; "The Grand Fleet," by Sir John Jellicoe; "The Economic Consequences of the Peace," by John Maynard Keynes; "Ludendorff's Own Story;" "A Journal From Our Legation in Belgium," by Hugh Gibson; "Over There With the Australians," by Capt. R. Hugh Knyvett, and Marshal Haig's "Despatches."

Somewhat surprising, say the dealers, has been the small sale in St. Louis and in the country generally of the books by Gen. Ludendorff and Admiral Von Tirpitz. Widely heralded and coming from men who had played important parts in the war, it was expected that they would have a large sale. Quite the contrary has been true, due partly to the high price at which these books are published, and partly to newspaper stories of the splendid royalties which these German authors probably would receive from the sale of their books in America.

It is estimated that more than a million copies were sold of Guy Empey's "Over the Top" and other books combined, while the writings of "Private Pete" have had a circulation of about one-half million. Other big sellers included "My Four Years in Germany," by former Ambassador James W. Gerard, 250,000 copies; "A Minstrel in France," by Harry Lauder, 200,000 copies, and "Pan-Germanism," by Roland G. Usher of St. Louis, 400,000 copies.

Compare these figures with the recent experience of the book department in a local department store, where several hundred books that were slightly shopworn or where there were too many duplicates were put on special sale at alluring figures. The last ones to go were the "war books," and they went very slowly. Finally the Missouri Historical Society took 100 of them at one swoop, which may be a suggestion for other bodies of that nature.

"There is a good miscellaneous demand," said one book seller. "We are doing more of a general book business than for a long time before. One afternoon recently we had inquiries for books on the subjects of astronomy, embroidery, laces, house furnishings and several art topics. Except for the backward spring I suppose we would have had the usual demand for books on gardening. One interesting feature is the strong demand for books of cooking recipes. Either people want to live better than usual, or they are starting in to use foodstuffs with the greatest possible economy. We have one cookbook here with a sale of which most novels might be proud. And it is not just a flurry now and then, but a steady sale from one month to the next, so that we order copies of the book 100 at a time."

Fiction always sells, say the book experts, no matter what class of books may be having a temporary vogue. But not in the last 50 years has there been such a demand for the mystery story as reigns just now among fiction lovers. The popularity of "Sherlock Holmes" 15 or 20 years ago is rivalled by some of the younger detectives of fiction, and modern writers are prodigal with their thrills.

Among the older favorites are Anna Katherine Green, Mary Roberts Rinehart and Arthur B. Reeve, and enterprising publishers have been putting forth new editions of such old tellers of the marvelous as Emile Gaboriau and Eugene Sue. French detective stories of the last decade have taken on a new lease of life. Outside of the mystery tales there is a goodly array of clever fiction showing a steady sale. To cite all of the popular ones, now that readers of fiction have gotten into their stride again, would require the mention of too many names. Such authors as Hugh Walpole, Frank Swinnerton, Blasco Ibanez, Irving Bacheller, Archibald Marshall and Leonard Merrick do not lose their popularity as the months roll by.

Novels which have shown an exceptional sale include "Luca Sarto," by Charles S. Brooks; "The Romantic Woman," by Mary Borden; "The Moon and Sixpence," by W. Somerset Maugham; "Marqueray's Duel," by Anthony Pryde, and "White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.

Biography also has claimed a good deal of attention in these days of plentiful book buying. The volumes by Henry Watterson, Henry Adams and Champ Clark are in demand, while "Theodore Roosevelt's Letters to His Children" and the biography of Roosevelt by William Roscoe Thayer are having a large sale.

Walk Six Miles a Day to Be Well.

DR. LEONARD HILL, the famous British authority, says that sedentary workers should walk at least six miles a day or should do an equivalent amount of manual labor in the open air. "Exercise is almost as important in the conservation of health as is diet," comments the New York Medical Journal. "Sedentary workers or those who lead an indoor life from compulsion or choice should take a certain amount of outdoor exercise daily with the same regularity and care that they take their food. A great many of the gastro-intestinal diseases, and especially constipation, which afflict sedentary workers and which frequently lead to serious disease, are due to lack of or insufficient exercise in the open air.

"The habit of plunging, as it were, straight from the breakfast table into the subway and straight out of the subway into the office, is a pernicious one, and it would be of benefit physically and mentally to many who live near a station if they eliminated that station from the day's program. In order to obtain the six-mile ration of outdoor exercise a beginning might be made by starting earlier in the morning and walking to the next station; then, perhaps, starting yet earlier and walking to another station further on, and soon, if the office is not too far away, walking the entire distance.

"There is no doubt that sedentary workers do not have enough exercise. The remark is possibly more applicable to the sedentary workers of America than to those of any other nation, assuredly than to those of Great Britain. Americans are not great walkers, and the distaste for walking has been more noticeable since the advent of the automobile. The business American is likely to think that walking is a waste of valuable time, and he does not pause to consider that by such means he keeps the human machine in good working order, a far more important matter than that of making money in a hurry.

"A daily walk is infinitely superior in its health-giving effects to the daily aperient and is also more beneficial than working for some time at high tension or than even taking a long rest. Working in spurts and playing or resting in spurts, as the American usually does, is not good practice. Business men and women should ration their outdoor exercise, and the exercise could take the form of walking."

Secret of the Russian Suicide Yacht and green. Then it flashed on and off like the signs on Broadway.

On guest days the peasants of the village were invited to enjoy these marvels. The simple folk exclaimed with wonder, shouted with delight and roared great cheers for Sophia Bogdanova. These manifestations moved the barina to smiles of ingenuous gratification.

I noted a resplendent figure who constantly stood in attendance on Sophia Bogdanova. He was a young South Russian of strangely handsome mien; the barina had taxed her ingenuity to decorate him with handsome appointings; he was her private butler. I was told that she was accustomed to pick out the handsomest young men of the surrounding country and engage them for her service. That was her foible, her weakness for having good-looking young men standing in every corner.

When the war broke out she spent a large fortune in keeping the young Falz-Fein peasants away from the fighting front. During the Russo-Japanese War she had seen many of the village youth return maimed and disfigured, and she had vowed never again to permit war to claim any young man of her acquaintance.

Such was the remarkable woman who was the mother of the Falz-Feins. Despite her eccentricities, she had known how to command the almost religious devotion of her sons. She dominated them all—all save Fjedor, her first born—and he dominated her.

Fjedor, the tall, pale, black-bearded Fjedor, stood clad in peasant dress, high boots, smock and cap. He stood on the porch of his peasant-like cottage. The simple habitation seemed to mock the magnificence of the barina's castle some miles distant. He surveyed the green prospect of Askania Nowa, his Garden of Eden.

"Plants and animals," he said to me in his dreamy way, "should be studied in their native wildness, and not in the enervating confinement of herbariums and zoological gardens."

He had devoted 20,000 acres of land and untold money to the creation of his Acclimatization Gardens, which were the wonder of Russia. His desire was to live a peasant's life, and he lived it with the lavish abandon that characterizes a Russian noble in pursuit of his pleasure, and with the outlook of a student and a thinker. He engaged in the practice of horticulture, grandly, profoundly. He planned; he directed, and he labored along with his peasants, scolding them, humoring them and even using the whip on them.

"It is necessary, sometimes," he explained.

We walked past endless rows of growing plants, and came upon a grassy plain where animals roamed. A herd of antelopes trotted toward us. Fjedor told me of his greatest accomplishment. He had succeeded in crossing the zebra with the antelope, and saw great things for the hybrid as a new and valuable domestic animal.

He had never married. He was too busy working for the happiness of mankind through the cultivation of the soil. All that he permitted himself was attendance at peasant fiestas, where he delighted in dancing with the village beauties. And he provided young brides with trousseaus and dowries and gave their husbands positions in his service.

He reigned a veritable king of the steppes, a strong man, an austere man, a man of the Tolstoyan tradition. The peasants regarded him as a saint and a hero of the soil. In his own family he enjoyed the unquestioned domination of the clan leader who is at the same time the stronger soul.

In May of 1914 the late Czar visited Askania Nowa. Fjedor domiciled the Emperor in the simple, almost rude, guest room of the peasant-like cottage in which dwelled this princely tiller of the soil. The Czar ennobled the Falz-Feins. Fjedor responded by presenting the Czarevitch, the little Alexis, with the marvelous Acclimatization Gardens.

"May the Czarevitch, when he becomes the Czar, find rest among the wonders of nature that are growing for him here," Fjedor said simply.

Today the murdered Czarevitch reposes in an unknown grave. And Fjedor——

Such was the lord of the Kherson as I knew him. Such was the man who died last on the yacht adrift in the Black Sea.

The impression left on one by the characters of Sophia Bogdanova and her son, Fjedor, was so sharp and abiding that a peculiar logic seems to bring forth the details of the terrible scenes that attended the passing of the Falz-Feins.

One can see the hapless refugees assembled in their drenched cabin. They are congregated around the fine old table that stands at the center. Most of them are decided that the offices of the automatic should be invoked. They look at Fjedor. He nods.

Women first! The old sea cry goes up. The women of the Falz-Feins must be spared as much horror as may be. They first! And first of all the revered matriarch, the noble barina Sophia Bogdanova. By tacit consent one of the brothers presents the pistol to the austere Fjedor. He is the oldest son of their father. He is the head of their clan. He is the strong of soul. The one-time lord of the Kherson accepts the weapon without protest, and calmly and devotedly he steps toward his well-loved mother, the magnificent barina Sophia Bogdanova.

St. Louis University Is 102 Years Old

country during that period, it was decided that it was expedient for the medical school to become a separate institution, and it accordingly became the St. Louis Medical College.

St. Louis University had become one of the leading institutions in this section, prior to this, its buildings being among the show places of the city, and distinguished visitors usually were received there. Thus, in 1836, Daniel Webster was tendered a formal reception, and made a speech of characteristic eloquence, which those who heard it recalled for long years afterward. Vice President Richard M. Johnson was similarly received, and Charles Dickens, on the occasion of his tour of the country, made a speech there in 1842. Dickens was said to have been embarrassed and unhappy, and it is likely that his auditors were not more favorably impressed by the publication of his "American Notes" later.

The university law department held its first session in 1843. At the head of it was Judge Richard Aylett Buckner, who had served several terms in Congress from Kentucky, and was then a jurist and statesman of national reputation.

Again the growth of the university outstripped its housing facilities, and in 1853 the construction of a large building at Ninth and Washington was begun. It was completed two years later, and was one of the most imposing structures in the city.

The Civil War had an emphatic influence on the university. Many of the boarding students were from the South. When the Federal authorities seized Camp Jackson, the Confederate recruiting camp, excitement among the Southern students was intense, and so many departed for the South, there to join the army, when old enough, that the session was closed prematurely, May 24, 1861. When classes were resumed the following September, only nine students from Southern states registered, and many of them remained throughout the term only because of inability to communicate with their parents.

Following the war, St. Louis grew rapidly, and the university, which had gone as far west as Eleventh street to escape the turmoil of traffic, once more found itself surrounded by it. With an eye to the future, property at Grand avenue, West Pine and Lindell bouelvards was purchased in 1867, and the erection of new collegiate and academic buildings was commenced there in 1886.

Extraordinary Adventure in Spirit Land

zine articles, one on "Music as a Factor of Education," and the other on "Modern Mechanical Music."

Sitting down at a piano for the first time in her life, at the age of 58, Mrs. Sewall says that Rubinstein offered her two methods of instruction. By means of the trance, she was informed, she could absorb all of his virtuosity unconsciously, without effort. But if she took regular lessons, it would require years of daily, arduous practice. She chose the latter because she always liked the hardest way of doing things, and wished to be aware every moment what she was about. A pan of water placed on the piano, Rubinstein declared, would aid him in concentrating his magnetism.

Rubinstein proved a most exacting teacher. Mrs. Sewall's records show that for many months she frequently practiced her exercises all night long—luckily they were mental and noiseless as well as physical—save for short intervals of rest while she lay prone on the floor.

Finding that his pupil was reading his biography, Rubinstein apologized for divers discreditable incidents she would find therein, and assured her he had improved greatly since residing on a higher plane. "If I were not worthy to be your friend," he declared, "your husband would not sanction our acquaintance, for he is very punctilious about the moralities."

This acquaintance with Rubinstein during 17 years Mrs. Sewall declares to have been the most delightful and helpful friendship of her life. "Whether it shall be my happy destiny," she concludes, "to demonstrate on earth the continuance of his supremacy in his own art, I do not know. That rests with the same power that initiated this acquaintance. * * * To this distinguished friend I owe the joy of a relatively intelligent appreciation of an art entirely unknown to me prior to Aug. 11, 1902."

Mrs. Sewall continues that the time she could give to music and to the piano was limited; that she was prevented from practicing from August of 1903 until August of 1905; that between Aug. 12 and Christmas night of 1905 she took enough oral instructions in theory, directions as to practice, etc., to fill 600 quarto pages with fine longhand script; that from Christmas, 1905, until January of 1908, the piano remained untouched save at long intervals, and has since been in storage.

"It is quite evident," she sums up, "that my dear master has never had the opportunity to give me the practice on the instrument anticipated by him always from our first meeting; but his instructions in divers lines have continued, and his visits have not been entirely suspended to date (December, 1919)."

Her ceasing from music was due in part to her health. The worthy Pere Conde and Dr. Mesmer, who engagingly confessed that during his life he had been notorious as a dangerous magician, put her through a terrific regime of fasting and physical exercise, which, in addition to the severe exercises supervised by Rubinstein, Mrs. Sewall believes would have killed her had she not been nourished with streams of magnetism from the beyond.

Her eyes, she says, had become so affected that she was unable to read fine print at all, with the strongest glasses; since 1907 she has never used glasses at all, though subjecting her eyes to the hardest usage they had ever known, on all kinds of script and print in various languages. The symptoms of Bright's disease so completely disappeared, she asserts, that the very physicians who had pronounced her incurable now declared her to be perfectly normal. For years she has supported without fatigue work which occupies 21 out of the 24 hours of the day.

We may dismiss, says Tarkington, the explanation that "Mrs. Sewall is laboring under a hallucination, or a series of hallucinations, continuing more than 20 years. And either Mrs. Sewall's subconsciousness, her dream maker, has been up to a dumfounding prodigy of dream building or else Mrs. Sewall has been in communication with living people whom we have thought of as dead. I think the truth must rest between the second and third."

Women say La-may stays on better than any other face powder.

Up to the present time it has been almost impossible to get a face powder to stay on longer than it takes to put it on. You powder your nose nicely, and the first gust of wind or the first puff of your handkerchief and away goes the powder, leaving your nose shiny and conspicuous, probably just when you would give anything to appear at your best. A specialist has perfected a pure powder that really stays on; that stays on until you wash it off. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder to make it stay on. This improved formula contains a medicinal powder doctors prescribe to improve the complexion. In fact, this powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and irritations. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crow's feet and wrinkles. This unusual powder is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). Because La-may is so pure and because it stays on so well it is already used by over a million American women. All dealers carry the large sixty-cent box and many dealers also carry the generous thirty-cent size. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York. There is also a wonderful La-may Talcum that sells for only twenty-five cents. Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th St., New York.

SECRET OF THE RUSSIAN SUICIDE YACHT AND ITS CARGO OF $14,000,000 IN GOLD

Romance of the Falz-Feins, "Rockefellers of Russia," who fled with their treasure from the Bolshevists, were forbidden to land at any Black Sea port, were tossed by storms and harried by hunger, until head of clan, Fjedor, shot first his mother, the magnificent Barina Sophia Bogdanova, then nine others, and finally himself —Their estate one of wonders of the world

-o- -o- -o- -o-

ON APRIL 17 the newspapers carried an account of the discovery on the Black Sea coast of a stranded yacht manned by dead men. It had drifted for weeks with a crew of suicide Russian nobles aboard. This weird episode, it was stated, marked the end of "the Rockefeller family of Russia."

The news accounts were too brief. There was little information available of the people who had died such terrible deaths. In the following account Baroness Leonie Souini, author of "Russia Yesterday and Tomorrow," reveals strange details bearing upon the extraordinary tragedy.

By BARONESS LEONIE SOUINI,

Author of "Russia Yesterday and Tomorrow."

ON APRIL 9 a loitering party of Rumanian soldiers spied a large, seaworn yacht stranded on one of the sandbars that abound near the threefold mouth of the Danube. The soldiers took a small boat and boarded the derelict. It had been a craft of sumptuous appointings. Now it was desolate, wasted by weather and engulfing waves. When they pushed open the door of the cabin, the soldiers encountered one of the weirdest and ghastliest spectacles that has ever come to men's eyes.

The cabin was deep with water. Eleven human bodies lay floating and swaying with the slight roll of the boat. Six men and five women, each shot through the head. The man who seemed the oldest lay rocking, face upward, his right arm crossed over his breast. His hand still clutched an automatic.

There was Russian gold aboard to the amount of $14,000,000, and a mass of papers that readily disclosed the identity of the dead as the vastly moneyed and landed Falz-Feins, lords of half a province.

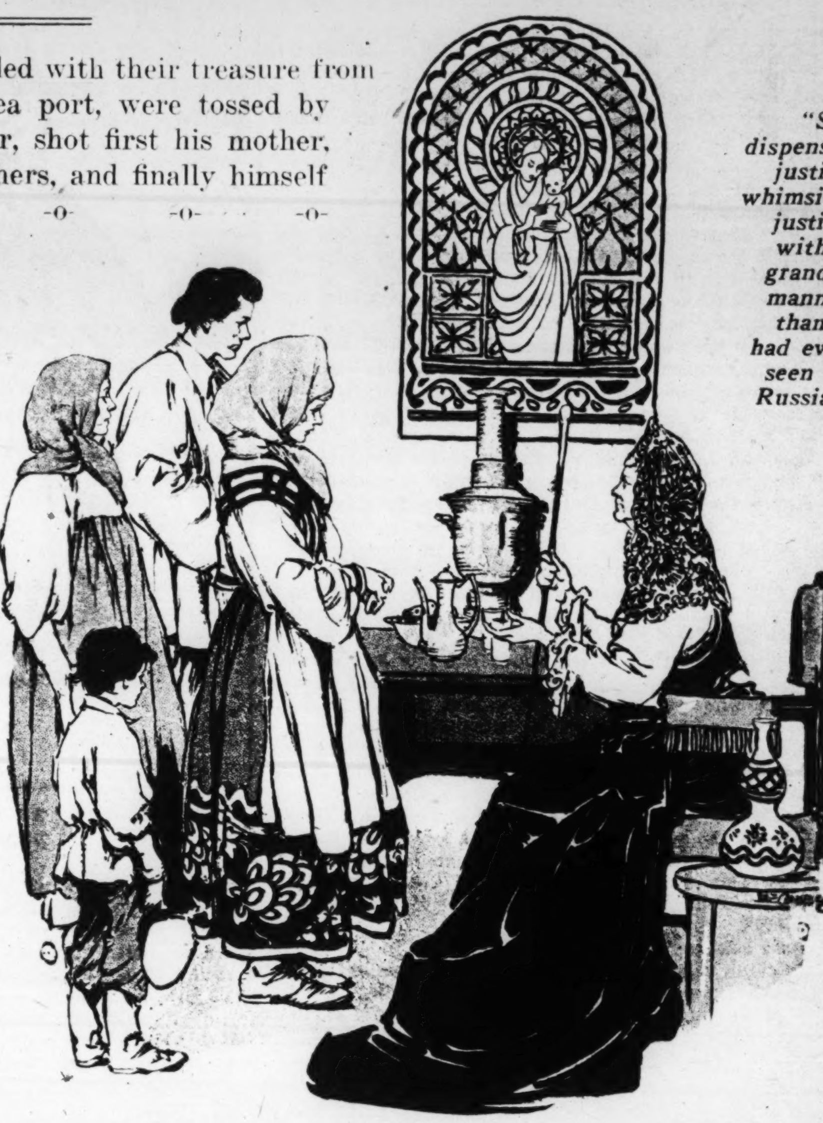
It was known that in February last the Bolsheviks invaded the estates of the Falz-Feins, and that these aristocrats of the steppe had fled by sea, They had taken refuge on their yacht, the Ostara, and had steamed for the port of Constanza. At Constanza they had been rebuffed and ordered out to sea again; Russians were not permitted to land. At several other points, too, they had been driven off.

It was now only too plain what a fearful tragedy the inhumanity of Black Sea harbor laws had caused. The picture is not difficult to evoke. The hapless Falz-Feins, with their gold and treasure of paper, were exiled on the sea. The shore would not receive them. But the sea, too, was inhospitable. The Black Sea has been renowned from the days of antiquity as a wild haunt of storms. The yacht was swept by waves, drenched, tossed. The exiles endured hunger, cold, exposure. Their fuel was exhausted. They were drifting. They bore their destiny week after week, and then determined that the game had gone far enough. They had a way out—the automatic.

One of them, it would seem, was selected to be the executioner, and he shot his kinsmen and kinswomen one by one, and then shot himself. And when they found him he still had the pistol clutched in his hand, the token of his eminence, a token that even the circumstances of dreadful death had left undisturbed. He must have been the bravest heart among the exiles thus to be selected for such fearful labor. Who was he? What manner of man was this sombre hero? The man who died last!

I can answer this. I can answer it on the authority of one of the vivid, joyous experiences of my life.

It was in the spring of 1914 that I first saw Askania Nowa. A party of mirthful guests, of whom I was one, took a broad-beamed, paddle-wheeled river boat up the Dneiper. The banks of the broad, drab stream wore the bright green of the first spring days; the countryside was abloom with the brilliance of a fat land in bourgeoning time. At Kherson we took the railroad across the wheat country. The train stopped at Nowa Alexivsky to detrain the guests of the masters of the region. A fleet of automobiles conveyed us to Askania Nowa, the patrimonial estate of the Falz-Feins.



"She dispensed justice, whimsical justice, with a grander manner than I had ever seen in Russia."

They were magnificent types of the Russian nobility, the Falz-Feins. There were many sons and daughters of the old lord, who had died no great time before. The men, strong, upstanding, high-demeanored. The women of rare South Russian types. Their lands were among the greatest wonders of Russia.

There was, first of all, sheer immensity. The Falz-Feins held 90,000 acres of the best wheat lands of the provinces of Kherson and Taurida. They grazed half a million sheep of valuable breeds. Their huge storehouses were bursting with wheat and wool. They owned their own steamship line, which plied from Port Skadowsk to Odessa and Sebastopol, and they held railroad concessions for a line to transport the products of their estates to Moscow direct. The history of this vast fortune was a romance in itself.

During the reign of Alexander I a party of persecuted Menonites left their native Bohemia and Saxony and crossed into Russia. The Czar, who was undertaking measures to populate the many barren stretches of Southern Russia, invited the harrassed sectaries to settle along the lower Dneiper. They accepted the imperial favor, and to this day remain an honest, sternly religious and industrially valuable colony isolated in an ocean of South Russians.

One family of the Menonites, a wool weaver and his spouse and progeny, elected not to share the destinies of their co-religionists. They continued southward, and found their home on the shore of the Black Sea. There they practiced wool weaving, and taught their craft to the surrounding peasants. And then, in a few years, wealth was thrust upon them. Alexander I adopted a policy of distributing large tracts of land among the peasants of Kherson and Taurida, and soon the Menonite family engaged themselves wholesale in purchasing the distributed lands from their new and heedless owners at prices of a few rubles or a cask of vodka for square miles of the wheat country. This was the beginning of the fortune of the Falz-Feins, as the thoroughly Russianized descendants of the Menonite religionists were known.

During the century following their rise to wealth and power the Falz-Feins numbered a succession of extraordinary characters. I knew this, and when I visited Askania Nowa I anticipated contacting with people of interesting personality. I had no idea, though, of the full strangeness and wonder that I found in Sophia Bogdanova, dowager of the Falz-Feins, and in her eldest son, Fjedor.

Sophia Bogdanova lived in a great white castle near the Black Sea. She lived in the spirit of another century, in the pomp and splendor of the Boyars of old. She was a tall, gray, majestic woman, gracious and of queenly bearing. Her habitual garb was of imperial magnificence—robes of gorgeous stuffs and strings and clusters of diamonds and pearls. She was accustomed to say that she looked like Catherine the Great, felt like Catherine the Great, was a second Catherine the Great.

I was received at the daily "lever," which this queen of the steppes held in the style of the eighteenth century monarchs. The day was filled with grandiose ceremonies. Luncheon was a rite, with glittering lackeys serving the guests with pomp and formalism. Dinner was a function that might have been a birthday of a Khan of Tartary. We went among the peasants, who bowed in sincere admiration before their magnificent barina. They came to her with their disputes, and she dispensed justice, whimsical justice, kindly justice, with a grander manner than I had ever seen in Russia, a land where grand manners still survived.

Sophia Bogdanova had arranged evening drives for us through the green solitudes of her great Italian park. We passed from white roadways winding over smooth lawns, and entered a series of dark tunnels and grottos. Blinding streaks of lightning glared. Deafening thunder boomed. An ingenious electrical device had been installed to astound the passer through.

As we returned toward the castle, when night had deepened, there suddenly flashed, to my great amazement and amusement, a great electric sign. It shone at the top of the castle, and spelled the name of Sophia Bogdanova in gigantic letters of red, blue with Mr. Dively, our carriage going first. D. was in the wagon driving the wheel span and I mounted the foremost span and led the way. We had no difficulty; afterwards I took back the animals and brought over Mr. Dively. The water came within six inches and a foot of the wagon beds, and towards the last crossing became much better because more even. This ford is known as Aubrey's Crossing, after the well-known pioneer in the overland trade.

By Wagon Train From St. Louis to El Paso

While writing this the train we left—Parker's, Musick's, etc.—is coming up on the other side, and Franz has just been over. They will not cross here, but go the Raton road. Last night they saw about 35 Indians on this side of the river, opposite Chouteau's Island. I hope we may get to see nothing of them or any others. We will remain here until tomorrow.

Wednesday, Aug. 16.—We have now a stretch before us of 35 miles without water, part of which is heavy sand. To reach water in the soonest possible time, as well as to distress the animals as little as possible, it was last night decided we would start this morning and drive through the sand only, then camp until 3 o'clock, bring back the stock to the river for water, then start out and drive all evening and part of the night, and again make a long drive early in the morning until we got to water.

This morning, however, some of the owners were dissatisfied with the above arrangement and a drive of only two miles was made, and here we will now remain and make a long drive tonight. We went to the nearest point in the river to water our animals about 1 o'clock. For the sake of convenience I took off both ropes and picket pins and swung them over one of the horse's back. We got to an open arm of the river, about 10 yards wide, and the horses stepped in to drink, but it was five or six feet deep, and, of course, they went down headforemost, one consequence of which was the ropes and iron picket pins rolled over the horses' heads into the water.

The current was so strong that I knew it would carry them down the stream rapidly, so I ran down the banks about a hundred yards and plunged in and hunted up the stream. In some places I could wade it, while at others it was overhead, but it was all in vain. I searched up and down until I was completely worn out, but found nothing. Some of the others, too, went in and helped to hunt, but with the same luck. I gave it up and came out, but reluctantly, because they were our last ropes and pins, and without them no one can guard his stock or animals nor feed them.

When all had come out but one, he discovered them. I never was more rejoiced, I believe, in my life. Hardly had the excitement died away before we had another one. One of Whaley's horses refused to go into the water, so a rope was thrown over his nose and he was forced in, when he commenced kicking and plunging and finally threw himself or else was thrown by the current and carried downstream. Sometimes his heels were visible and sometimes his body, but his head never. It was plain he was drowned, or drowning, so I and four more again plunged in and by our efforts got hold of his head and held it up and guided the body to the shallowest part of the stream. The horse was, to all appearances, dead, as he did not breathe and his eyes were closed. By our efforts he revived a little, and after a time we put ropes around him and hauled him out; he is still very sick, but I think he will get over it.

This evening about sundown we hitched up for the purpose of pulling through the sandhills in the early part of the night and then camping, but we found the sand so much heavier than we expected that the wagons were sticking in all directions and we were doubling teams continually. They kept going all night before all the wagons arrived in camp, and toward the last all teams were obliged to double. Whaley's horse, which came so near drowning, died this evening.

ENTERTAINMENT VS. AMUSEMENT

By Ring W. Lardner.

TO THE EDITOR:

The other day I was in Philly to spend the week end and it seemed like it never would, but in the interim I would like to make the remarks that the bird that nicknamed it the sleepy city was sarcastical as I have been there a 100 times and never got a chance to sleep yet.

But any way I would like to exclaim to my frail readers that they's 2 ball nines in Philly and one of them is known as the Pathetics and the other is hardily known at all you might say. Well on this day when the week finely ended in Philly I was asked out to a ball game between the Pathetics and the Red Sox and mine host was a bird name Tiny Maxwell who is a sporting expert and the reason they call him Tiny is on acct. of him being so teeny. Well they was no reason for us going to the so called ball game only that we was boring 1 another to death with our converse and I might add in regards to Mr. Maxwell if it isn't 2 indelicate, that they's a certain ailment name shingles that starts around the waste and the old adage says that if it ever meets, the victim is a total loss. In other words he don't half to call up the Dr. and even if he did, it wouldn't make no differents. So Tiny is praying that he will contract a case of the shingles because by the time they meet around his waste he will be 950 years old.

But I was trying to tell you about this ball game. Well, when you go to a ball game between the Pathetics and who ever is trying not to beat them, why, according to Tiny you half to bring along your own entertainments. So no sooner had the game started when I noticed that they was a bug in the upper deck that had broughten a phonograph with him. Well the minute the game started he put on a record and Tiny said that the advantage of that system was that if the record didn't go very good why the guy could put on a new needle and it would probably work, whereas if Connie Mack put in a new pitcher he probably wouldn't.

So I said to Tiny:

"I think this guy has got a good idear, namely that when he goes to a place that he has got to pay to get in but he don't think he is going to get a whole lot of entertainment out of it, why he brings along his own entertainment in case the entertainment he paid for don't live up to expectations."

OH! I GOT THE OLD PATHETIC BLUE E-S
DICK DORGAN.

"They was a bug in the upper deck that had broughten a phonograph with him."

So I and Tiny agreed to recommend this system to diferent people that goes out trying to enjoy himself and some times they come home saying that they had a rotten time, but if they use this system why they can't have a rotton time, as follows:

1. Well when you go to a football game vs. Yale and Princeton expecting to enjoy yourself and you been reading in the paper for wks. and weeks about the different stars on both nines and you finely get out there and you can't tell 1 man from the other, why bring along a ouija board and try to make it find out who is running with the ball or fumbling it as the case may be.

2. Well, suppose you was going to a vaudeville show. Well, they's an old book called "wit and humor of the age," and when the comedians is out there you read that, and they's also an old music book called "klavier werke" or elementary exercises for the hands witch goes pretty good as reading matter when you don't like music acts.

3. Well, suppose you was going to a dance and you finely got one with a lady that you didn't know very well or else you had knew her so long that you had talked each other out, well, they's a book called "speech and manners" with a whole lot of good dialogue in it that is also easy to hold in one hand and read it out loud and dance with the other.

4. Or suppose you was going to a funeral and the flowers didn't prove very amusing, why it's a whole lot safer to take along a couple daffodils or whatever is your favorite floral piece and try to enjoy them and not pay no tension to the regular gifts that was sent in.

Well as I say I was over to Philly and didn't have no sleep and by the time I wrote this story why the pictures was already drawed for it and one of the captions was "A good cabinet member shouldn't venture out anywhere without a good cushion," and I don't know what it means, but I have got to put it in to fit the illustration, but in the mean wile I want to state that a ~~good~~ young man shouldn't ought to venture to Philadelphia and think he going to get any sleep.

"NO TRAINING REQUIRED"

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

BOOKKEEPERS have nice, easy jobs, with pretty good pay. But you can't be a bookkeeper without an education. And since they have been raising the pay of college professors to twenty-five or thirty dollars a week, educations are terribly expensive.

The life of a bricklayer is pleasant and agreeable. His work keeps him out in the open air. The hod carrier does most of the manual labor. And the wages are excellent.

However, union rules forbid a man to lay bricks until he has carried the hod for a couple of years. And a man who has carried the hod for a couple of years is too tired to lay any bricks.

All these learned professions require study and training. Try to practice medicine without going through a medical school, and your brother doctors will have you fined or locked up. It is too bad that this is the case. For nowadays a doctor, just by writing a few prescriptions for pints of spirits fermenti, can make a splendid living.

Also, at present there is a lot of money in the legal profession. The lawyer who can tell you how to transfer a case of whisky from Barney's place to your home without getting in jail need not trouble about the cost of living.

But there seems to be a rule that requires a man to spend at least a year in a law school before he can be a lawyer. And that keeps most of us out of the law game.

About the only lucrative pursuits that can be followed without any training whatever are playwriting and amateur gardening. Any number of persons attempt both when they find other means of livelihood difficult.

We began with gardening.

The incentive was very great. With lettuce at 30 cents a head, asparagus at 75 cents a bunch and cabbages commanding any price the marketman sees fit to ask for them, it was easy to see that the vegetable producer would reap a fortune in a season.

All one needed was a few garden tools and a collection of seeds. These, combined with healthful, invigorating, open-air exercise, were sufficient to raise a crop worth almost its weight in gold.

We cleared and spaded a space in the back yard and went blithely to work.

But somehow or other the garden didn't prosper. There appeared to be things about gardening which we didn't know.

We had trouble, among other things, with insecticides.

At the suggestion of a seed catalogue we mixed arsenate of lead and sundry other chemicals, and applied them to our potato plants.

The next day a lamb, belonging to one of the children, having occasion to eat one of the potato plants, was stricken with such an acute case of colic that the vet charged us $8.

That cheered us up. If the stuff could have such an effect on a large lamb it certainly ought to do the work for an almost microscopic potato bug.

But it didn't. The beetles ate the potato plants, poison and all, with eager relish, and got fat on it.

We mixed other poisons and fed them to rats, which died in the walls of the house, necessitating the removal of walls and plaster in order to get them out and give them a decent burial in the yard.

But none of the mixtures daunted the bugs in the least.

It is possible, of course, to remove bettles from potato vines, beetle by beetle. But it requires the labor of six or seven persons to a vine, continued through the summer, and this is not always practicable, particularly in the busy season.

We also had difficulty with fertilizers. We compounded ours on correct principles, but the plants didn't seem to care for them.

Either they went all to stalk and leaves, getting so excited about growth that they neglected to blossom and fruit altogether, or they came down with indigestion and died.

Then, too, our plants developed a surprising obstinacy about doing what they were expected to do. Everybody knows that lettuce should "head up," which means form compact and succulent spheres, like cabbages.

But our lettuce plants spread their leaves abroad like pond lilies, and from the center of them there issued long, straight stalks that shot up two feet overnight. And such leaves as clustered about the bases of them were bitter and unpalatable.

The season was a disappointment. Our backs creaked when we sat down. Our hands were blistered and painful. And we had nothing to show for our summer's work but a bed of radishes which were of the consistency of pine knots, and which were useful only as fuel.

And no matter how many radishes one raises, they make a very poor substitute for coal in a hard winter.

We have given up gardening. Like a lot of other things, it apparently requires an education. Now we are going to try playwriting

X-RAYING A HUSBAND

By Helen Rowland.

"ISN'T science WONDERFUL!" exclaimed the Widow, giving the turf a little shove with the toe of her slipper, that set the hammock swaying gently.

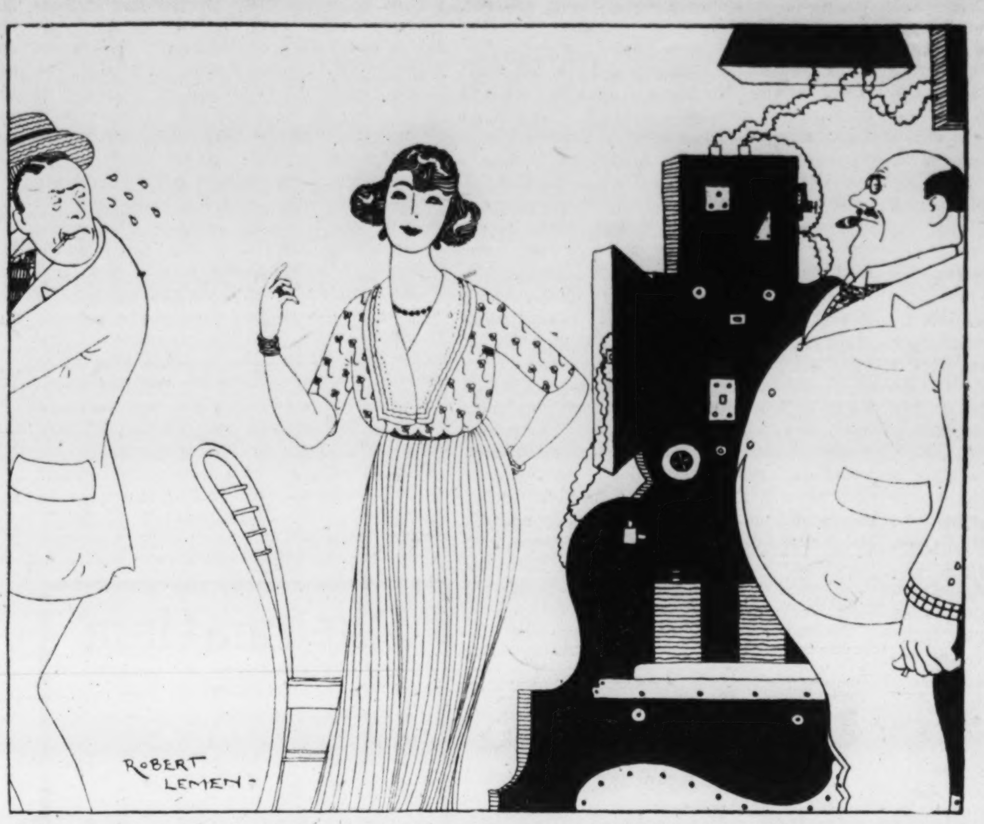
"Is it?" The Bachelor raised his eyebrows and glanced up lazily from where he lolled on the greensward at the feet of the pink and white vision in the hammock.

The Widow nodded her rose-wreathed sun hat.

"They've just invented a new X-ray machine," she explained, "by which you can read the character, thoughts, emotions, traits and disposition of your—of anybody who interests you, thereby eliminating a lot of uncertainty in love and marriage."

"Somebody is always taking the joy out of life!" grumbled the Bachelor, shrugging a well-knit shoulder. "Rob love and marriage of their delightful uncertainty—and what is left?"

"Nothing—to attract a MAN, perhaps," admitted the Widow, "but it will be a great boon to a girl. She will be able to pick and choose"——



"No mere, normal, human man is going to sit in front of an X-ray machine and let himself be photographed, anyhow."

"Oh, WILL she?" broke in the Bachelor, satirically. "Since when has a girl been able to pick and choose—a husband?"

"Oh, ever since the war, Mr. Weatherby," responded the Widow blithely. "Ever since work became fashionable and a wedding ring ceased to be the only premium in life. Ever since marriage became a sweet luxury to a woman, instead of a bitter necessity. Ever since"——

"I see! I see!" interrupted the Bachelor hastily. "But what does this wonderful new machine tell you about the other person? Does it tell you anything you really want to know—how long he takes to dress for dinner, for instance? And whether he insists on reading the paper aloud to you, at breakfast; and whether he prefers Charlie Chaplin or Caruso or the Follies or a ouija-board seance?"

"No, it doesn't," admitted the Widow ruefully. "It merely tells you whether or not he is jealous or temperamental or sensitive or phlegmatic. And, after all, that's rather vague, isn't it? Especially as it's not half so often his big sins as his little peculiarities that get on your nerves. You could never discover, by means of it, whether a man was given to dyspepsia or not; or whether he was the kind who would dry the dishes on the maid's day off; or whether he went to sleep with his mouth open, after dinner; or if he liked garlic in his salad and was fond of playing jazz records on the phonograph on Sunday"——

"Or whether or not a girl would get up in time for breakfast," put in the Bachelor, "or how she looked with her hair in magic wavers; or at what temperature she would keep the house; or whether she would go in for lap logs, or psycho-analysis, or vegetarianism, or politics, or pet lizards—ugh!"

"And even if it WOULD register all those things," added the Widow, with a shake of her head, "and if you could find out everything about a person, before marriage, that is no sign that you would know anything about him—or her either—after marriage. Because marriage is a miracle that transforms everybody from what he is into something totally different. Look how quickly it changes a man from a slave to a Sultan, and from a worshiper to a Kaiser!"

"Nonsense!" protested the Bachelor. "It isn't marriage that does THAT! It's the WIFE who does it! Nine men out of 10 go into marriage prepared to play the role of adorer for life!"

"Yes," agreed the Widow sadly. "That 'anything-you-say, anything-you-like, anything-YOU-want-if-you'll-only-marry-me!' attitude has lured a lot of women into matrimony, ever since Adam so meekly and cheerfully bit the apple."

"But it isn't an 'attitude'!" denied the Bachelor emphatically. "A man sincerely MEANS it!"

"I know it," sighed the Widow. "And the woman, in her desperate gratitude for such devotion, insists on pedestaling him and handing him a sceptre and imploring him to cut-and-dry her life, according to his favorite patterns—and ends by spoiling a perfectly good husband and turning a lover into a tyrant!"

"By—what?" The Bachelor sat up and faced the Widow.

"By CONSULTING him in every detail of life, as though she hadn't a rational working brain cell to think with," replied the Widow, laconically.

"But great Scott!" exclaimed the Bachelor, "shouldn't a husband and wife consult each other's wishes, tastes, ideas and opinions and—and all that?"

"Certainly, Mr. Weatherby," averred the Widow, giving the hammock a gentle shove that sent her pink draperies fluttering in the breeze. "A wife should consult her husband in all things that pertain to his comfort and happiness. She should try to find out when he wants his dinner, how he prefers his eggs, whether he likes his roast beef rare or medium, how he enjoys spending his evenings"——

"And how he likes his cuffs ironed!" pleaded the Bachelor.

"Of course," soothed the Widow. "Although she probably knows better than he does what he wants! But the woman who consults her husband concerning her OWN personal affairs—who invites him to choose her hats, criticise her gowns, her complexion or her servants and lets him snoop around her kitchen, go through her icebox and keep tabs on her letters—should have a guardian!"

"What—what?" exclaimed the Bachelor. "What's 'home' for, if not to 'snoop around' in? If a man can't find fault in his own house where CAN he enjoy himself and be natural?"

"You see!" laughed the Widow, with a gleam of triumphant mockery in her eyes. "Just THINKING about being married has transformed you from a nice, pleasant companion into a potential grouch and amateur detective! So, what good would a pre-matrimonial X-ray photograph of any man do a woman?"

The Bachelor grinned and mentally surrendered his sword.

"Oh, well," he protested, with a last feeble attempt, "a woman makes anything she pleases of a man, anyway—a mollycoddle, a tyrant, a saint or a fool! And no X-ray machine is going to tell him in advance just which it will be!"

"No mere, normal, human man," declared the Widow, "with a secret knowledge of all his little faults and failings is going to sit in front of an X-ray machine and let himself be photographed, anyhow!"

"And then hand the evidence to the woman, to hold over his head for the rest of his normal life?" cried the Bachelor. "Well, I guess NOT!"

"But a woman wouldn't mind having a soul-photograph taken," reflected the Widow pensively.

"What? A WOMAN"——

"Not if she could be sure of finding a skillful 'retoucher,'" the Widow added, "to take out all the blemishes and paint in a pair of wings and a becoming halo!"

WIDOW-CISMS.

A man is always attracted by a blonde—probably for the same elemental reason that prompts a small boy to pick out a red sled and a college youth to yearn for an orange necktie.

When a woman is abstracted and silent, a man always feels guilty; his only doubt is as to what particular thing she has found out.

What passes for woman's "unfathomable mystery" is often nothing but a man's passion for deceiving himself about perfectly simple things—to make them seem complex and fascinating.

Love is an emotion of the heart, the mind and the senses; a man may lose the first a number of times—but he never marries until he loses the other two.

A man's success is measured by his rating in business—a woman's by the rating of the man who married her and took her out of business.

St. Louis University Is 102 Years Old

everything of the kind in our country." In 1853 another addition was made to the building.

One of the most exciting incidents in the history of St. Louis occurred in connection with the old medical school at Tenth and Washington, and resulted in the destruction of the furnishings of the building by a mob.

Some small boys were playing ball in a lot adjacent to the school and the ball was knocked over the fence into the college grounds. In their search for it the boys stumbled upon the opening into an old vault, where were interred the remains of bodies that had been used for dissection. The sensation produced on the boys may be imagined. They ran about, shouting the news, which was verified by older persons. Soon the wildest rumors were in circulation. In those days the medical profession was often suspected by the ignorant of resorting to murder to get subjects for dissection, and hysterical and incendiary persons made the most of this prejudice. A mob of 1000 gathered around the school. Ringleaders addressed them and urged them to tear down the building.

The Mayor and other prominent citizens addressed the crowd and induced it to disperse. The militia had been called out to quell the disturbance. As a result of a conference, the militia was withdrawn, and the mob disbanded. Later, however, it reassembled, stronger than ever, and broke into the building. Bones and fragments of bodies were dragged out of the vault to inflame the rioters, who finally burst into the building, destroyed the furnishings, and, in the words of a historian, "left nothing but the bare walls and the roof."

A shout was then raised to go to the Missouri Medical School. Warned by the outbreak, however, professors and students there had made preparations to receive the mob. The dissecting room was cleared out, and every trace of its purpose eradicated. The opening into the vault, arranged in the side of the room like an open fireplace, was covered with sheetiron and a cookstove set up in front of it. When the crowd arrived the leaders were invited to enter and make an examination, which they did, satisfying themselves that nothing was wrong, and being completely deceived by the subterfuge employed.

The connection between the university and the medical school was severed in 1855. As a result of the "Know Nothing" movement and other forms of anti-religious and anti-racial agitation which swept the

Extraordinary Adventures in Spirit Land of One of America's Most Noted Women

Mrs. May Wright Sewall, leader in various women's causes, educator and writer, reveals now for the first time her twenty years of communication with unseen world—Taught piano by ghost of Rubinstein and cured of disease by Mesmer's spook — Portrait of husband "painted" by pupil of Raphael

Mrs. May Wright Sewall.

"AS I read, it seemed to me that I had never known so strange a story," says Booth Tarkington, the novelist, in a preface to an eerie volume just published by his friend and neighbor of many years, Mrs. May Wright Sewall of Indianapolis. She thus reveals for the first time, to the amazement of her multitude of acquaintances and familiars on two continents, that for more than 20 years she has lived two lives. One was the open, busy career of a practical woman of affairs, absorbed in the causes of education, and social betterment. The other was a secret, equally active and engrossing life of constant intercourse with what she believes to be the realm of spirits.

That Mrs. Sewall should have written such a book is as dumfounding to Tarkington as its contents. There could be no more astounding contrast than that between her volume, "Neither Dead Nor Sleeping" (Bobbs Merrill), and her manifold activities in public life. During the heydey of her energy, says Tarkington, any citizen asked to name the three leading personalities of Indianapolis would have listed Benjamin Harrison, James Whitcomb Riley and Mrs. Sewall.

In 1882 she and her husband, the late Theodore Lovett Sewall, founded the Classical School for Girls, at Indianapolis, which became a flourishing institution, known throughout the country; Mrs. Sewall was its principal for 25 years. From 1881 to 1888 she was chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Woman's Suffrage Association; she organized the National Council of Women of the United States, and the International Council of Women, of both of which organizations she is now honorary president.

She was president of the World's Congress of Representative Women at the Chicago Exposition; and was appointed by President McKinley to represent the women of the United States at a series of congresses at the Paris Exposition of 1900. She is director of the National League for the Conservation of Childhood, and American Commissioner in the International Women's League for Peace; there is scarcely an organization for human betterment in America or Europe of which she is not a valued member.

And simultaneously, confesses this eminent leader of great causes, she was in daily converse with the spirits of the dead; she was being cured of what physicians told her was an incurable case of Bright's disease by means of the spectral ministrations of one Pere Conde, a French priest and physician of several centuries ago, and of no less a personage than Dr. Franz Mesmer, who died in 1815, and whose name and exploits are perpetuated in the term "mesmerism;" and was also being trained as an expert pianist and musician under the direct tutelage of the spook of Anton Rubinstein, famous Russian virtuoso and composer, who died in 1894—she who had had not the slightest aptitude for music and had never touched the key of a piano!

During all these years Mrs. Sewall kept copious notes of her adventures in spirit land, comprising more than 70 folios of manuscript. The present publication, issued by permission of her dead husband, purports to be a detailed record of only the first few years; other volumes are promised, particularly one to be called "Rubinstein as a Master of Music," which is to reveal the maestro's views of his art as matured in the after life.

On Dec. 23, 1895, the narrative begins, occurred the death of Mrs. Sewall's husband. Both had been what are known as "Radical Unitarians" and belonged to the skeptical, free-thinking type of that period. They felt no certainty of individual survival after death; their doctrine of immortality resembled that known in physics as the theory of the indestructibility of matter. So that Mrs. Sewall was not a little surprised when her husband, a fortnight before his death, addressed her as follows:

"If I discover that I survive death, the first thing I shall do will be to ascertain whether or not Jesus returned to earth after his crucifixion. You know we have not believed it; but if I find that he did return to his disciples, I shall do nothing else until I have succeeded in returning to you, unless before that time you have come to me."

This promise, strange to say, dropped entirely from Mrs. Sewall's mind. But in the months following she was startled by receiving proposals from friends that she visit a medium, as her husband was seeking to communicate with her; one lady assured her that she had frequently seen the ghost of Sewall walking at his wife's side, evidently wishing her to perceive his presence. These suggestions shocked and distressed the widow.

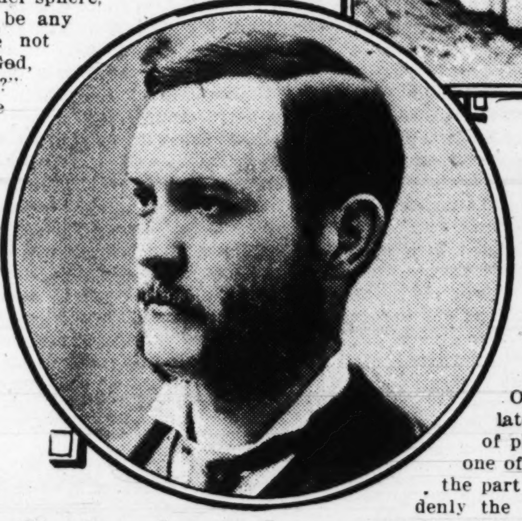
Then she received an invitation to be a speaker on woman's day at a summer Chautauqua held at Lily Dale, N. Y., on Aug. 10, 1897. On arriving, she was not a little disgusted to find herself in the midst of a "Spiritualists' Camp." But some impulse stronger than her incredulity led her to visit a professional slate writer, and through this person she obtained her first message from spirit land, a communication from her husband. Within three days, she records, "my husband, my father, my mother, my half-sister, two sisters-in-law, a great-grandfather and a little niece had identified themselves unmistakably and indisputably."

These phenomena converted Mrs. Sewall from skepticism to faith, and there ensued the 20 years' record of her communication with the souls of the so-called dead, both through mediums and later through her own developing powers as a psychic. On Feb. 19, 1898, she received the folowing "message" from Frances E. Willard, who had just "passed on:" "Convey my greeting to the council and Miss Anthony. I shall continue to work for women."

Most of the communications during the first years must be passed over, except to record that in London, during 1898, William T. Stead is described as writing on a tablet answers to questions which Mrs. Seward mentally put to her husband, containing "references to incidents of the past which could be known only to Mr. Sewall and myself." This occurred while they were sitting on a balcony at Stead's home, in the open air and in broad daylight.

During a conversation with her mother, Mrs. Sewall asked whether, in her sphere, there is supposed to be any like Jesus. "Is He not thought there to be a God, or to be one with God?" Mrs. Sewall pressed the question. Very solemnly and emphatically came the answer: "No, my child, there is no God but One. Jesus is the greatest ever humanly incarnated, but not God."

Later Mrs. Sewall was introduced to her husband's spiritual guide, "a wise Italian sage of centuries ago," known as Prof. Lamonti; and to an ancient Greek philosopher named Hermes. Through them and others she learned that a "band of instructors" was being formed for her education, and that the spirits were highly interested in her work for peace. She began to experience novel sensations like currents of electricity coursing through her veins; her husband explained that these were currents of magnetism from the etheric plane, which he was sending to keep up her strength and vitality. He asked her to place a glass of water at night by her bed, as its presence would aid the magnetic demonstration. This water, Mrs. Sewall avers, she poured on her flowers in the morning, with the result that plants which ordinarily live but 10 days continued to bloom for three or four weeks.



Theodore Lovett Sewall, with whom his widow says she has been in constant communication since his death in 1895.

Shortly afterwards, in Chicago, Mrs. Sewall obtained, she relates, a spirit portrait of her husband. She tells how she bound two photographs of Sewall between two slates, laid upon the slates a blank canvas selected at random from a dozen or so in the medium's room and watched the face and form gradually developing upon the canvas. "It was a beautiful portrait," she records, "a perfect replica of my husband's features and coloring." She inquired through the medium if the artist were not Raphael. The answer was: "Not by the great master, but by a pupil of Raphael." This picture, Mrs. Sewall declares, hung for many years in her home at Indianapolis, and occasioned many inquiries from her visitors. She always replied that it was the gift of a friend.

On another occasion, Mrs. Sewall relates, she was passing about a number of photographs taken at Oberammergau, one of them a likeness of the actor taking the part of Judas in the Passion Play. Suddenly the picture disappeared—"my first experience," says the author, "of instantaneous disintegration." Her husband explained that a spook had taken the photograph to show it to the real Judas; and that the latter was deeply offended, regarding the picture as a libel and caricature of himself.

In November, 1901, Mrs. Sewall suffered a severe attack of what she thought was lumbago. Physicians who made tests without knowing the identity of their patient pronounced that she was suffering from an incurable onset of Bright's disease, already in an advanced stage. In the following May the spirit of her husband one night introduced her to the two men chosen by the "Council" to be her teachers and physicians—Pere Conde and Anton Rubinstein. The former urged her to engage a masseuse, the latter to purchase a piano. She obeyed the instruction regarding the masseuse, but put off that relating to the piano—to the excessive annoyment of Rubinstein.

Mrs. Sewall tried to compromise by moving in a piano from her school; but the ghostly musician detected the ruse, upbraided her severely and engaged to pick out a piano for her at a music store—which he did, she maintains. She complained of the expense, but Rubinstein assured her that her husband would enable her to pay for the instrument from unexpected sources of income. It turned out, she relates, that two installments were defrayed with checks for maga-pan, without lookin', so's it'll sound like he's fixin' things up.

"What seems to be the trouble?" I asks him.

"I think Dimpled Dan is like money from home in the first race today," he says, "provided they—what—what are you doin' here?" he winds up, droppin' the book.

"Git outa there!" I hollers. "If you're a mechanic, I'm Christopher Columbus!"

"What dy'e expect for 70 cents an hour—Edison?" he growls.

Runyon Q. Sampson has took it all in and now he lets out a beller and leaps from the car.

"You infernal idiot!" he bawls at poor Alex. "You've made me miss my appointment. What do you mean by taking up my time with this travesty on an automobile? Why, the thing can't even move! If this is the way it performs when it's fresh from your factory, what can a man expect when it's a few weeks old?"

"Maybe it ain't ripe enough yet," I butts in, hopin' to save the situation. "It does look kinda young, don't it?"

"Silence!" roars Runyon Q. "I wouldn't buy one of your cars if they were selling at 3 cents a carload! That's final! Don't you dare come up and bother me again. Get this pile of junk off my place here just as fast as you can, or, by the eternal, I'll have you all arrested for trespassing!"

With them few remarks he stamps off across the lawn, bellerin' like a bull.

"Well, Alex," I says, "at last you have hit somethin' in little old New York that you can't do, eh?"

"That old boob gimme a pain anyways!" remarks the mechanic. "What does he know about machinery? Gimme a cigarette!"

"Cheer up, Alex," I says. "I know that was a tough one to lose, but a guy can't finish in front all the time! You know you ain't up in dear old Vermont now and this town's much harder to beat than the average. I told you that when you first come here. I knowed it was only a question of time before you'd hit the bumps—everybody does sooner or later in New York—and then you"——

Alex gets up and throws away the cigar.

"All I hope," he says. "All I hope is that the one they deliver to him works all right!"

"Deliver to who?" I says.

"Runyon Q. Sampson!" he comes back. "I come up here to sell that feller a Gaflooey chummy roadster, and that's what I'm a-goin' to dew! I'll have his check before the end of the week. I don't know how I'm gonna do it now, but in some way this here sale is gonna occur, you can gamble on that! D'ye think a little thing like this can discourage me? Why, if the car had exploded and blowed us all up in the air while we was sittin' in it, I would of sold Sampson the speedometer for a watch before we had hit the ground again!" He turns around on the mechanic and rolls up his sleeves. "The faster you git away from here, the longer you'll live!" he snarls. "What art was you follerin' before you took up automobiles?"

"Well, to be on the level with you," says the mechanic, "I was second man in a cigar store on Twenty-third street. I got fired because me and the cash register could never agree on the day's receipts. I seen an ad for a mechanic at the Gaflooey service station and I got took on there as a helper. A feller has got to do somethin', don't he? Gimme a cigarette."

Alex makes a dash for him, but I hold him back.

"Fade!" I warns him. "You're gettin' away with murder as it is, and if I let this bird go they's no tellin' what'll happen to you!".

"What do I get for my mornin's work, heh?" he hollers.

"You're gettin' immunity!" I says. "Beat it!"

"All right!" he snarls. "I oughta knowed I'd only get the worst of it goin' out on a job with a coupla boobs like you guys. This feller claims he's a salesman, hey? Well, I'll lay the world 8 to 5 he couldn't sell ice cream sodas in hades! Gimme a ciga"——

Alex throws the toolbox at him and he blows.

While we're standin' there tryin' to figure out some way to get this chummy roadster to make good, a guy steps out from behind a hedge and joins our little party. He had just about passed the votin' age and he wore a raincoat with one of them cute little belts around it, a daredevil cap and carried a suitcase. His feet dragged like they wasn't used to such heavy exercise as walkin' and he steps in front of us with a cigarette droopin' outa the corner of his mouth.

"Pardon me," he yawns. "Are you having some difficulty with the car?"

"Oh, fluently!" I says. "You must be a fortune teller. Some difficulty is right. We been attemptin' to get away from here all mornin' and it's the same as makin' the Russians think the Czar was a good feller—there's nothin' doing'. I don't think the motor is tryin', and"——

"I know something about autos," he says. "Have a couple of my own and occasionally I have to fuss around 'em a bit. Do you mind if I look at the motor?"

"We'd just love it!" I says. "Go to it."

He opens the hood, yawns a coupla times and monkeys around for a minute.

"Try her now," he says.

Alex gets in and pushes a button with his foot.

I don't know what this handsome stranger did, but whatever else it was, it was a success, because the motor immediately begins to tear holes in the peace and quiet of the surroundin' country.

"She'll be all right as soon as she warms up now," says our savior. "The gas was disconnected—coupling jolted off evidently—and one of the cylinders was missing. Must have given you trouble on hills, what?" he yawns some more. "Nice little bus," he says, "and, now, I wonder if you'd do a favor for me?"

"I only got four bucks on me," I says, "but you're welcome to that if you can use it."

He grins.

"It isn't money," he says. "It's something more important than that."

"Fudge!" says Alex. "There ain't no sich thing in this town!"

"Yes there is!' says the newcomer, steppin' back to a hedge, "and here it is!"

With that, out steps the Venus de Milo, wearin' both arms and a set of scenery that must of enabled some Fifth avenue store to move over to Easy street. She looked like what the press agents claim is in the chorus of every musical comedy that hits Broadway, and she's wearin' enough diamonds to have kept the alleys in tooth powder. After I had got over bein' dazzled by the first look, I give her the East and West again and recognized her. She's nothin' less than Margot Meringue, the big movie star.

"I'm Arnold Sampson," says the young feller, "and this is Mrs. Arnold Sampson. My wife was formerly"——

"I know," I butts in. "I seen her the week before last with the missus in 'Marvelous Margot's Mistake.' She was vampirin' around and"——

"How did you like me?" smiles Margot.

"Well," I says, "we seen the pitcher three times runnin'—is that good enough?"

"We have just been married," goes on Arnold, throwin' out what chest he had with him.

"Congratulations!" pipes Alex, shakin' his hand.

"Pretty soft!" I says, doin't the same.

"I saw you and father in the car here," explains Arnold, "and as you appear to be friends of his, I wonder if you'd come up to the house with us? Father is less liable to make a scene if there is someone else present. You see, he doesn't know that we're married as yet."

Alex suddenly looks interested and nudges me to keep quiet.

"I can see the whole thing in a nutshell," he says. "Your father objects to you—oh—now—marryin' an actress, heh?"

"No," yawns Arnold. "In this case the traditional is reversed. My father objects to the actress marrying me!" he bows to Margot. "He is personally quite fond of my wife and his objection is based solely upon his own unflattering opinion of me. He declares I'll never be able to support Mrs. Sampson in the manner she is accustomed to living, as her income is something like fifty thousand a year. Father allows me a bare five thousand and he refuses to increase it until I go to work in his office, or something equally as silly. Can you imagine anything more idiotic than that? Dad is worth millions and he expects me to work!"

"What an inhuman parent!" says Alex. "What have you got against work?"

"My dear fellow," says Arnold, "I don't really know. I don't seem able to get enthusiastic about it—that's all. I wouldn't mind going down to dad's office and toying with an adding machine or driving nails in packing cases, but I'm sure I'd fall asleep on the job, or something idiotic like that! You might say I lack the urge," he yawns and grins. "I guess I wasn't built to hustle. I haven't got the pep, as we used to say at"——

"Listen!" butts in Alex, his eyes beginnin' to glitter. "You was built the same as anybody else—only thinner. I know what's the matter with you—c'mere, I'll show you!" He takes Arnold by the arm and leads him over to the Gaflooey chummy roadster. "D'ye see that automobile there?" he says. "Look at it. What is it—nothing but a pile of metal and wood! It can't talk, it can't think—but it's got a little button down there in the dash and when you push it, that car will keep on runnin' till the gasoline gives out or it hits a tree! That button's called a self-commencer and that's what you need! Ain't there no buttons up in your head that you can push and get yourself goin'? Is that pile of metal better than you? You can go down now and take a job where you won't get your hands dirty, but if your dad hadn't been a self-starter 50 years ago, you'd be callin' a wop foreman 'boss' today and likin' it!"

Arnold stops yawnin' and looks interested, where he don't look mad. Margot nods her head and puts her hand on his arm.

"Arnold, dear," she says, "he's right! It's time you did try to do something, especially now. I don't want to lecture you, dear, but"——

"I don't know whether he's right or not," says Arnold, "but I do know that extraordinary speech of his has me thinking. Also, it sounded great to me and there's no reason why it shouldn't sound just as great to dad! He loves that sort of thing, and I'm going up and repeat it, word for word! I'm going to tell him we're married and that I'll start to work for him whenever he likes. I can try it, anyhow!"

Margot looks at Alex like she would kiss him if it wasn't for the looks of the thing, and Alex whispers in my ear that the Gaflooey roadster is as good as sold. We all got in it—it was runnin' like a watch now—and roll up to the house. The newlyweds goes inside, while me and Alex stays out on the porch, and in about half an hour they come out again, bringin' old Runyon Q. Sampson with 'em. The old gent walks over to Alex and holds out his hand.

"My boy," he says, "I want to thank you for what you've done to this cub of mine. I don't know what you told him, but he's a different person from the time I saw him last. He sounds like a real man, now! I'm going to do something for you in return. I won't buy one of the infernal cars of yours, wouldn't have it for a gift! But, if you'll tell me what your commission on the sale would have amounted to, I'll write you a check for that figure."

Margot looks at Alex, and then she looks at the car.

"Why, I think it's a perfect dear!" she says, "and those colors real harmony itself!"

Alex bounces forward, his eyes glitterin' again.

"We were thinkin' of callin' this model the Margot Meringue," he says, "and"——

"Come, come!" interrupts old Runyon Q., "let's straighten this matter up." He takes out his checkbook and fountain pen. "I want to take you children down to Tiffany's and have Margot pick out a suitable wedding gift. We have"——

"May I have anything I want?" asks Margot, kinda innocent.

"Of course you can!" beams the old boy, pinchin' her cheek.

"Then buy me a Gaflooey chummy roadster!" she says. "I think this one is a perfect love of a car!"

Oh, boy!

Alex tries to look unconcerned, but he couldn't help droppin' his hat. The old man coughs and gets red in the face, but he was game.

"All right!" he snorts at Alex. "You win. You can say you're the only man that ever got the best of Runyon Q. Sampson! What's the amount?"

I went into the office of the Gaflooey company with Alex when he went back and the president is waitin' for him with blood in his eye.

"You needn't begin your excuses!" he says to Alex. "The mechanic has told me how you made a mess of everything and Sampson refused to buy the car. I didn't think they made any ten-thousand-a-year men up in Vermont when I hired you, but I took a chance. New York's too big for you fellows; I guess you were only a flash in the pan! Just think what it would have meant had you sold the car to old Sampson! Why, the advertising alone would"——

"I guess you're right about me bein' a flash in the pan," butts in Alex, "but I found another pan! I don't know whether this is any good for advertisin' or not, but I sold that chummy roadster to Sampson and he has give it to his daughter-in-law for a weddin' gift."

The president jumps from his chair, very light for a man of his heft.

"Great!" he hollers. "Great!" He looks at Sampson's check which Alex hands over. "I knew you'd do it! I saw you had the stuff in you the minute you first walked in this office. That's the place to get first-string men—right from the country, and Vermont has furnished more than her share. They told me you'd fall down because New York was too big for you, but I knew different. They can't fool me when it comes to judging men! I'll get our advertising men right to work on this copy, and we'll hit the morning papers with it. This is great! Now if Sampson's daughter-in-law was only in the public eye, know what I mean, this would be wonderful! We've had a man after Margot Meringue for a month, but she's away somewhere. You probably won't know her; she's a big movie star and we'd give her a car if she'd only indorse it. Why, if we landed her"——

"That's who Sampson give the car to," says Alex. "His son and her just got wed and he give her the Gaflooey roadster for a weddin' gift. How about that New York manager job—do I get it?"

"Do you get it!" shrieks the president. "Why, say—you're it, right now!"

"That's fine!" says Alex. "I'll take the job day after tomorrow!'

Terrible thunderstorm on Western plains stampedes herd of 1500 cattle—Fighting mosquitoes by brushing off the swarms constantly with a bunch of grass — Horse drowns in fording Arkansas river — Sixth installment of graphic narrative of pioneer days

FRIDAY, Aug. 11.—Another of those quick, sharp storms came up last night about 11 o'clock, and, while I had prepared everything but the curtain in front of the carriage, still, so sudden was the rain that before I could let it down the rain beat in on us very unpleasantly. In consequence, we did not get away at our usual time and would not have left camp until afternoon had not the big train on behind made its appearance and forced us to go on, which we accordingly did until nearly 12 o'clock, when we made our camp near the river. The road, although mostly sand, was rather heavy in consequence of the rains yesterday and last night. Our camp is close by Pawnee Forks. The sun came out about 10 o'clock this morning and the day has become very warm, affording us all a fine chance of drying our blankets and clothing and of airing everything generally. For some reason or other, the Santa Fe mail coach, going west, has not come along, though two days overdue. D. has, after all, concluded to go by the mail coach.

This evening at 5 o'clock we hitched up and made only a short drive, but the chief object was to cross a very bad ravine on the near side of Pawnee Forks. We took the road over the hills, although several miles further than the road along the river. We got into camp late in the evening and as usual, about midnight a tremendous rain, wind and thunderstorm came up. I witnessed a grand sight when the storm came up. The herd of beef cattle that is traveling with us tried to run away before the terrible wind and rain, and all the herders were on their horses with their whips trying to keep them. When the wind abated a little they would stop, but when it came on again they always set off again. Sometimes they came within 150 yards of our wagons. I got up in it all and took our horses away, lest they should either be run over or run off, and tied them on the opposite side of the wagons. It was very dark, but the lightning was incessant and brilliant, and I could see all that occurred. Often it seemed that the weather-driven cattle would overcome the large force of men who, with shouts and their long, heavy whips, were trying to beat them back.

Fifteen hundred head of cattle, rushing wildly before a fierce gale, were enough to sweep everything before them, and I feared the ambulance would be overturned in the mad career of the frightened animals. The lightning surpassed anything I ever saw before or have seen since. One feature was so peculiar that I could not help being attracted by it. The heavens were filled with storms on every side, and for several hours there was not an instant of time—not so much as a single second—that lightning was not visible in some quarter.

Saturday, Aug. 12.—Gonzales got permission to go ahead last night, and as Musick has not yet made up his mind which way to go, all of us who have determined to go the Cimmaron route left this morning to join him (Gonzales). Everyone was angry. We drove our carriage out of the corral without bidding anyone good-by or saying a word to anyone. I hope we will not see him until we get to El Paso. As I said before, we messed with him and got only about half enough to eat, and that grudgingly, with a lecture at each meal for eating so much. One had to run and grab when the word was given to eat, or he got nothing. Now, however, we are out of it, and every man in the train is rejoiced and feels better. We drove from 6 o'clock until 7, when we came up with Gonzales in camp, when we camped also and made breakfast.

While taking breakfast Col. Wallace, Inspector-General of this department, came by and told me he had lost a rifle on the road somewhere between this place and his last night's camp. He told me to look out for it and keep it if I found it, in consequence of which I walked ahead of the train the entire drive, from 10 till 1 o'clock, but did not find it. We drove about five miles and camped. It was very warm this morning and my walk made me tired. The mosquitoes were so very bad that I had to keep a bunch of grass in my hand all the time and keep brushing with it continually.

We made another drive this afternoon of about five miles, every foot of which I walked. I was not in the carriage during the two drives, and I suppose I walked further today than any other day of my life. I was excessively tired, and after all did not find the gun. I kept on the trail of the horses and wagon all the time until we camped, and, as we were yet several miles from where Col. Wallace camped, as soon as our corral was formed I got a mule and started for their camping place. When I got there it was growing dark and I hunted around until I gave up all hope of finding it, and I grew fearful of Indians, also, so I returned. I acted very imprudently by sometimes going as much and more than a mile from the train, that is, in advance.

Sunday, Aug. 13.—We started this morning before sunrise and drove until nearly 10 o'clock, making about 10 miles, I think. Part of the road along the river bottom was very heavy, and when in the worst of it we met a train going eastward to load a second time this fall. I forgot to mention that when crossing Nine-Mile Ridge we also met a train of two or three hundred wagons going on to load up a second time before winter. Our camp is quite close to the river, in which are several large islands covered with fine grass, and most of our animals are over on them feeding. On a sandbar in the river is the trunk of an immense cottonwood, which, being dry, has furnished all our train with wood to cook with, which for some time past has been rather a scarce article. I chopped an armful for ourselves and everyone else did the same. I took a bath in the river, but the water was very shallow.

"I had prepared everything but the curtain in front of the carriage."

At 4 o'clock we began driving and drove until nearly dark, making about 10 miles; the entire day's travel was nearly 20 miles—first-rate traveling. Some think we will reach the crossing tomorrow in time for breakfast, but, according to a schedule I have, we will have to travel until evening to do it. Our camp is not far from the river and the grass is the best we have had for a month. We had a good supper and I enjoyed it very much. I took my turn at standing guard tonight—stood from 9 until 11 o'clock.

Monday, Aug. 14.—It was not more than half after four when we started this morning, intending, if possible, to reach the crossing to take breakfast. At first the road ran through the river bottom, and, as a large train had gone over it immediately after the last rain, it was very much cut up and uneven and rough, but some five miles on it ran up over some high bluffs and became very hard and good, although rather hilly. Our camp last night was about two miles on the near side of Chouteau's Island. I have used this same expression on several occasions, and mean by the "near side" or "far side," the side nearest to our starting point, or the reverse by the latter. The Arkansas is in plain view all day long, with only a bluff at rare intervals to interpose. It is still as nearly treeless as can well be, and somewhat high, as well as very muddy. Today thus far has been very warm; there is hardly a breath of air stirring, while the sun's rays come pouring down through a cloudless sky. There was an extraordinarily heavy dew last night. It could hardly be told from a rain, and when I went to bed I was as wet up to my knees from walking in the grass as if I had been wading through a pond of water. We have been fortunate in having had no rain today.

We left camp this evening at 4, expecting to reach the crossing early, in time to find a ford, but it was further off than we supposed, and we did not reach it until sundown. And what is more, it is very deep, the river having been rising ever since morning. Up till late they have found no ford that will do. I put some fishing lines in the river this evening, but caught nothing. They say very few fish are ever caught in the Arkansas, but why this should be I am at a loss to know.

Tuesday, Aug. 15.—The hunt for a ford was continued this morning, and things looked blue, for the river had, if anything, risen instead of fallen, and there seemed a poor chance of finding a road clear across that had not some deep place in it. A more practical and effective way we instituted, however. Every owner of oxen brought up his herd and sent it into the river, which is here about half a mile wide, so there were as many as three or four hundred oxen in the river at a time, each one of which may be considered as hunting a ford. There were other objects and purposes in view by this procedure. It accustomed the animals to the swift current and took away their fear, and it also made more even and level the rough places and holes in the river bottom. After considerable experimenting of this sort a ford was discovered which was shallow enough to keep the wagon beds out of the water, and then hitching up began, preparatory to driving over.

Breakfast and these just-described preliminary operations had consumed the day until about 9 o'clock in the morning. A man named Chaves sent in the first wagon, loaded with machinery and drawn by 20 oxen. It got about three feet from the bank when it stuck. Then began a time. A man was put to each yoke and a yelling and hollowing began, of which no idea can be conveyed to anyone who has never seen a similar sight. The wagon would not budge, because the oxen would not pull; only about one-half could be got to go at a time. At last 10 yoke more of cattle were hitched to it and then it started and never stopped until it reached the opposite shore. One after another of the teams were then driven in. having each from 20 to 30 and 40 oxen attached. Several more stuck in the river, but were easily pulled out.

One wagon upset just when entering the river, and many of the goods were damaged. We doubled teams up, but just then it seemed like it had been snatched from the cradle before its features was fully formed. Two of the roadsters would of made a nice pair of roller skates and the expense for tires must of been practically nothin', because the ones that was on it looked like a set of washers. The body was painted yellah and the trimmin's was in Alice blue and catsup red.

In the front seat is this guy which Alex claimed was the world's greatest mechanic. You could see that at a glance anyhow, because he was dressed in a pair of overalls that had lasted him ever since he first broke into the automobile game, and he carried about three quarts of medium oil on his face and hands.

"Well," says Alex, throwin' out his chest, "what dy'e think old Runyon Q. Sampson will say when he casts his eyes over that, eh?"

"You'd only get sore if I told you," I says, "but I'll say this much, Alex: If you can sell him that mechanical toy there on the pretense that it's an automobile, I'm goin' up there tomorrow and sell him Grant's Tomb for a paperweight!"

"Git in," pipes Alex, "and stop knockin'!"

"I won't have to knock, after we get started—that's if we do," I tells him, forcin' myself into the rear, "the motor will look after that!"

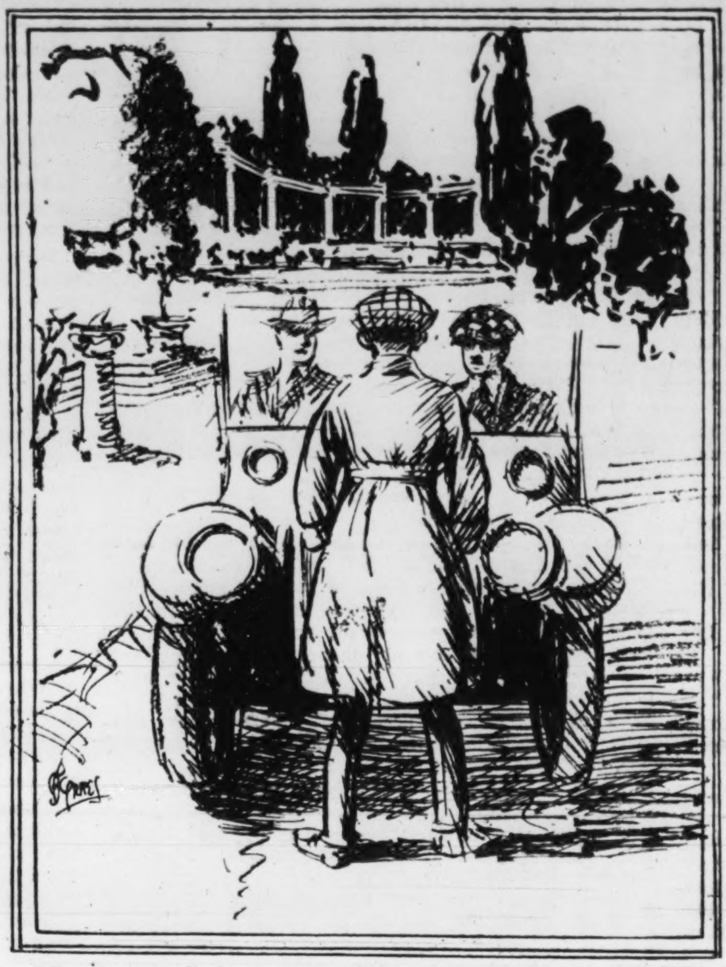
Alex nudges the mechanic.

"This here's my cousin," he tells him. "He ain't a bad feller in spite of that."

He turns around to me. "Joe," he says, "I want you to meet Mr. Eddie Worth, the best man on gas engines that ever burnt his hands on an exhaust pipe!"

"Greetin's, Eddie!" I says, shakin' hands with him and gettin' half a pound of grease for nothin'.

"Gimme a cigarette!" answers Eddie. "I been waitin' here an hour for youse guys. The motor is prob'ly all cold now and the starter may gimme an argument."



"Pardon me," he yawns. "Are you having some difficulty with the car?"

He gets out and monkeys around the front of the car.

"Ain't it nice and roomy back here?" Alex asks me.

I moved my knees away from my chin, so's I could talk.

"Great!" I says. "Only the Gaflooey people is liable to get in trouble on account of them coppin' the design from somebody else."

"What dy'e mean?" he asks me, lookin' puzzled.

"Well," I tells him, "you gotta admit that the seatin' arrangements back here is a dead steal from a can of sardines!"

"Did you ever see anything you couldn't find fault with?" he sneers.

"Yeh," I says. "I once got three nickels in change for a dime."

At this critical moment the mechanic gets down on his hands and knees in the street and begin to worry the car like a dog with a bone. Then all of a sudden he crawls undeneath it and disappears from the public eye. A lot of shippin' clerks, bookkeepers, salesgirls, brokers, lawyers and the like, on their way downtown to their jobs, figures that you can go to work any day, but an auto bein' fixed calls for immediate attention and gets around us in a circle. This seemed to get Alex's goat, but it was huckleberry pie to the mechanic. He crawls out from under, rolls up his sleeves, ruffles his hair, looks over the crowd and rubs his hands together.

"Gimme a cigarette!" he says. "And reach down in that tool box there and hand me up them pliers, a couple of S wrenches, the hammer and a screwdriver!"

The crowd sighs with delight, but Alex leaps off the seat like they was bees in the upholstery.

"What d'ye want all them there tools for?" he yells. "Stop this monkey business. I'm an hour late now! What's the matter with the car?"

The mechanic looks around at the crowd and shakes his head pityin'ly. They give Alex the laugh, and a manicure tells her friend that if she was the mechanic she wouldn't bother with it, but would make Alex fix it himself for gettin' so bold.

"What's the matter with the car?" repeats the mechanic, waggin' his head from side to side with a sarcastic movement. "It's been abused, that's all! I ain't had time to go over it carefully; it'll have to be towed down to the shop where we can git it up on jacks and take it apart. I found a leak in the radiator, the bolts is missin' from the muffler, there's a crack in the rear housin' and the clutch seems to grind a bit."

Alex grits his teeth and grabs hold of the windshield.

"Is that all?" he hisses.

"Well, not all, no!" says the mechanic, scratchin' his chin. "They must be a couple of pins sheared off of the differential and the"——

"They ain't no sich a thing!" roars Alex. "This here's a brand new car, right from our factory—you wooden-headed fule! It ain't been run a mile and they ain't a thing the matter with it, not even a scratch on the paint! You was sent up here to drive this car, not to wreck it. You"——

"Hey, don't you git to callin' me no wooden-headed fool!" hollers the mechanic, jumpin' around and wavin' the pliers. "That's against the union rules, and you'll get the worst of it if I bring it before the board. They must be some mistake here. I thought you wanted me to look over this boat for your friend here and see what it needed. How'd I know you only wanted me to drive? I ain't no mindreader; I'm a mechanic and"——

"Shut up!" says Alex, "and drive us out to Tarrytown. As a matter of fact the car's all right, ain't it?"

"Certainly!" says the mechanic. "Ain't it a new one. Gimme a cigarette and I'll see if I can get this tin can here to roll."

It's just about 18 miles as the pigeon soars from where we started to Runyon Q. Sampson's country home, and we fled up there in two hours. This car was a wonder on hills, that is it's a wonder we got up 'em at all. We climbed most of 'em with the emergency brake on so's we wouldn't slip back to the garage, and I figured that the car must of been painted yellah in honor of the motor, which quit like a dog every time the goin' got rough. The mechanic drives us in through the entrance of Sampson's domicile, as we remark at the garage, and then stops for encouragement before goin' further. Alex elects me to go up and notify Sampson that we're all set to show him the Gaflooey chummy roadster, while he and the mechanic stays behind to look over the car and see that everything is workin' fairly perfect. I got as far as the porch and a guy in a drum major's uneyform without the hat nails me. He was as big as the Woolworth Buildin' and just as emotional. He looked like what them stage butlers tries to.

"What would you wish?" he asks, friendly as a traffic cop to a taxicab driver.

"Well, if I thought they was any use," I says, "I'd wish I had a million bucks, but as it is, I'd like to see Runyon Q. Sampson, your master."

"Step this way!" he says, startin' to walk ahead.

"I can't step that way!" I says, watchin' him close. "It must be a gift. "I'll have to folley you in my own way on account of havin' a blowout in my rubber heels an' "——

Just then a little, bald-headed guy with one of them short gray mustaches which the wealthy banker wears in the movies, crosses our path and the big feller stops and salutes him.

"Gentleman to see you, sir," he says.

"Hmph!" grunts Runyon Q. Sampson, which is who the little guy was, as the gentle readers has prob'ly guessed. "I can't see anyone now. I have an appointment this afternoon to"——

"I guess I'm that appointment," I butts in, "or part of it, anyways. Was you expectin' to look over a Gaflooey chummy roadster?"

"Well, what of it?" he snaps.

"My lord, the carriage awaits!" I says, makin' a bow. "Folley me and you'll go motorin'!"

"Are you the agent?" he asks, as we walk back over the lawn.

"No," I says. "I'm his cousin. He's carryin' me along for luck or somethin'. We also have a mechanic with us in case of fire. Are you fond of automobilin'."

"Much more so than of conversation," he barks.

"That stops me," I says. "I'm dumb from now on. What is it who's this says? Silence is golden, speech is human—ain't it?"

We have reached the car by this time, and Alex steps forward.

"Good-morning, Mr. Sampson!" he says. "I want to thank you for the company and myself for volunteering your judgment as to whether our new model chummy roadster is a good car or not."

Sampson walks around it a couple of times, opens the hood, looks at the motor and sniffs.

"It's entirely too small!" he announces. "The body is grotesque, the paint is a horrible color and the chassis seems out of alignment."

"Exactly what I thought you would say!" agrees Alex, noddin' his head like Sampson had raved over the car. "We will make any changes you suggest. After all, you'll be the one to use it and that makes you the one to be pleased. We have custom-made suits, shoes and shirts—why not custom-made automobiles?"

"Hmph!" grunts Sampson.

"I'll fall," I says, hopin' to break the embarrassin' silence. "Why not?"

"Shut up!" hisses Alex. "Would you allow us to give you a little spin?" he asks.

"Ha, ha!" pipes the mechanic all of a sudden. "That's a hot one, ain't it?" he grins at Sampson. "Sure, old top, we'll give you a spin!" he says, jabbin' the floor board with his feet. "That's if this boiler will roll. Some of you guys will have to give the motor a little spin, if you want to go away from here. She's gone cold on me again. Gimme a cigarette, will you?"

Alex presented him with a glance that would of froze boilin' oil.

"Step right in, Mister Sampson," he says. "We'll run around the roads here and"——

"We'll do nothing of the sort!" snaps Sampson. "I've got to be at my office by 3 o'clock and you can drive me down there. In that way I'll be wasting no time and I can see what your can can do through traffic as well as on the road."

"Elegant!" says Alex. "Step right in."

Runyon Q. Sampson steps right in and after gettin' a cigarette from me, the mechanic steps on the gas. We run every bit of a hundred yards across the lawn and then all of a sudden the Gaflooey roadster stops deader than Columbus. The mechanic tried everything, from blowin' the horn to crawlin' underneath it again, but they was nothin' stirrin'.

"Well," he says to Alex, finally, "there's only one way we can get away from here now!"

"What's that?" asks Alex, bendin' down so's Runyon Q. Sampson won't hear it.

"By freight!" says the mechanic. "It seems to me that one of them rear axles has gone to work and busted on us."

"Listen to me," says Alex. "Get us away from here right away and there's $10 extry in it for you!"

"Now you're talkin' sense!" says the mechanic. "Gimme a cigarette."

He grabs up the tool box and hides himself under the car again, while Runyon Q. Sampson begins to fidget around and look at his watch like it was the first one he ever seen.

Twenty minutes, folleyed by 30 more, and still this mechanic is under the car, makin' sounds like he was fillin' a rush order for tin pans. Alex is as nervous as a cop makin' his first pinch and our friend Sampson begins sayin' things about the Gaflooey roadster that would never of been used by the builders as testimonials. Finally, Alex whispers to me will I get underneath and see what the world's champion auto mechanic is doin' to while away his time.

I got out and looked under and—Oh, boy!

This bird is layin' on the ground under the car, readin' a dope book on the races! He's got the book in one hand and a hammer in the other and every now and then he reaches back and wallops the dirt

Looking Back 102 Years, When St. Louis University Was Just a Modest Dwelling at Third and Market

Celebration of its centenary, delayed two years because of war, will soon be held—Institution was founded by Bishop William Du Bourg—Later removed to lot at Second and Walnut streets set aside by Pierre Laclede for religious purposes—Famous graduates -o- -o- -o-

THE 100th anniversary of the founding of St. Louis University will be the occasion of a celebration—delayed two years because of the war—which will take the form of a historical pageant at the Odeon, May 20, 21 and 22. This, the city's oldest institution for higher education, was begun in 1818, three years before Missouri became a State, by Bishop Wiliam du Bourg, and was colloquially known to many as "Bishop du Bourg's College."

What a change has been wrought since then! St. Louis was a struggling frontier town of 3000 persons, of which the western city limits were about what now is Broadway. Most of the buildings were rude log structures, within a stone's throw of the Mississippi River. Where some of the city's busiest corners now hum with traffic, trappers and hunters then roamed in search of big game. The United States was still struggling with the problems of a new republic. People had not stopped extolling the prowess of John Paul Jones and Andrew Jackson.

In this crude pioneer settlement there were few schools of any sort when the Bishop arrived from France to take charge of his diocese. True, Jean Baptiste Trudeau had been conducting a Catholic elementary school since revolutionary days, and was still doing so, but the Bishop, desirous of promoting higher education, established the Latin Academy, which was the mother institution of the present university.

The management of this infant college was committed to the Rev. Francois Neil, a French priest, who was curate of the Cathedral, and quarters for it were obtained in the residence of Mme. Alvarez. This was a stone building which stood at the northwest corner of Third and Market streets, in what was, at that period, the western part of town. In this day, the vast majority of St. Louisans seldom get that far east from one year to another.

The date on which classes were first held was Nov. 16, and the event was announced by the Missouri Gazette, which stated that "the Rev. M. Neil, with three other Catholic priests, under the auspices of the Rt. Rev. Bishop du Bourg, will open, in the house of Mrs. Alvarez, an academy for young gentlemen."

There also was opened, in connection with the academy, a school for ecclesiastics, under the direction of Rev. Felix de Andreis. The dwelling of the ecclesiastical students was close to the Cathedral on Second, between Walnut and Market street, and the Bishop, whose zeal in behalf of his educational projects took no account of his own convenience, gave up a part of his own house for a seminary. Among the clerical students, it is recorded, was Francis Xavier Dahmen, the first priest ever ordained in St. Louis.

So decided was the success of the academy—for the frontiersmen took avidly to this opportunity for higher education—that Bishop du Bourg decided to enlarge its scope. The block bounded by Walnut, Market, Second and Third streets had long before been set aside by Pierre Laclede, founder of the city, for church purposes, and a part of it, after a lapse of 155 years, still is occupied by the old Cathedral.

Here, accordingly, in 1820, was erected a brick college building, facing Walnut street, in close proximity to the Cathedral, which then faced Second street. A number of prominent citizens contributed to the building fund. The St. Louis Latin Academy thus became St. Louis College. Historians relate that one important study in the curriculum was that of art, and the first city directory, printed in 1821, mentions that the town "has one portrait painter who would be a credit to any country."

The college in August of 1823 had 50 pupils, including a number who distinguished themselves in after life. Among them may be mentioned Judge Wilson Primm, Theodore Labeaume, Capt. Edmund Paul, Judge William Ferguson, Edward Tesson, Amedee Berthold, Gen. Rene Paul, Nicholas Boilvin, French Strother, Jesse Benton, Lewis M. Clark, Frederick, Alexander and Raigh McNair, Ninian Edwards and several members of the Papin family.

The growth of the college and of the religious duties of the secular priests composing the faculty, made it increasingly obvious that a change in arrangements was imperative, and consequently, at the close of the session of 1826, the school was turned over to the direction of the Jesuits, and a new epoch began. Among the students who attended this session were Joseph Robidoux, son of the founder of St. Joseph, Mo., and Auguste Delassus, son of the last Spanish Governor of Upper Louisiana.

Bishop du Bourg, who had originally contemplated the change, did not personally consummate it, as he had removed to New Orleans in 1824, and two years later returned to France, where he eventually became Archbishop of Besancon. The transfer was carried out by his successor, Bishop Joseph Rosati.

St. Louis had now doubled its population, being "a bustling town of 6000," and it was desired to have the school in a spot more remote from the business district, so Bishop Rosati gave the Jesuits a lot at Ninth and Lucas avenue, then well removed from the commercial section. While preparations and the actual building went forward there, the school was temporarily removed to the Indian Seminary at Florissant, the college not being established in the new building until 1829. It is interesting to note that the first scholar enrolled after the assumption of the college by the Jesuits was Charles Pierre Chouteau, a great-grandson of Pierre Laclede.

The work of raising money for the pretentious new structure was undertaken by the Rev. Charles Van Quickenbourne, who, perhaps, ranks second to Bishop du Bourg in the influence which he had upon the destiny of the college. A description of the time said that "the new building fronts south toward the road leading to St. Charles, and is surrounded by weedy ponds, groves of sorry oak and suburban farms." This site was diagonally opposite that on which the Hotel Statler now stands.

Subsequently the Jesuits acquired the remainder of the block bounded by Washington and Lucas avenue and Ninth and Tenth streets, as well as two-thirds of the square directly west, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, thus obtaining a frontage on Washington avenue of 475 feet, and there the school remained, new buildings being erected from time to time, until removal to its present home at Grand avenue and Lindell boulevard.

The names of many of the students enrolled at the establishment of the college at Ninth and Lucas are familiar to every person who has any knowledge of the city's history, and many of the family names are among the most illustrious in the city today. They include Francis Cabanne, Du Thil Cabanne, Bryan Mullanphy, Howard Christy, Alexander La Force Papin, Edward Chouteau and Paul de Bouffay. The president of the college was the Rev. Peter Verhaegen and one instructor was Rev. Peter de Smet, later celebrated as the "Father de Smet" of missionary fame.

By a special act of the Legislature, a university charter was granted, signed by the Governor on Dec. 28, 1832, and the college became "St. Louis University."

The energetic president set about organizing post-graduate faculties. The first student to complete the undergraduate course was Bryan Mullanphy, but he finished before the charter was granted, and therefore did not receive his degree then. The first student to receive a degree was Paul du Bouffay, son of Lord du Bouffay and de Croix, who came to St. Louis in 1796 to escape the consequences of the French Revolution.

The first post-graduate course was that of divinity, believed to have been established in 1834. The second was that of medicine, which was opened in 1836. One of the first professors of medicine was William Beaumont, who had been an army surgeon during the War of 1812. While in army service, in 1822, he made his famous observations of a patient who had recovered from a gunshot wound, but retained an aperture in his side, through which the digestive process could be observed. Dr. Beaumont's conclusions, published after study of this patient, had a profound effect on medical science, both in this country and in Europe. He came to St. Louis in 1834. In later years, the Marion-Sims Medical College was united with the Beaumont College and became the Medical School of St. Louis University.

The medical school was reorganized in 1842, and occupied a new building on Washington avenue, west of Tenth street. On the first Board of Trustees appear the names of the Rev. William G. Eliot, who later founded Washington University; James E. Yeatman, for whom one of our high schools is named; Col. John O'Fallon, James Lucas, Trusten Polk and others.

Dating from this period, the school was markedly successful, a fact due in considerable part to the efforts of Dr. Alexander Pope, who became a member of the faculty in 1843, and later, the dean. His influence caused his father-in-law, Col. John O'Fallon, to erect and donate a new building for the medical school, at Seventh street and Clark avenue, in 1850. So popular did the dean become that the school was commonly alluded to as "Dr. Pope's school." While the new building might not create much of an impression in these days, it obviously impressed those who saw it then, the university announcement describing it in this luxuriant language:

"The lecture rooms are on a grand scale, whilst the amphitheater, with its circular seats and gallery, its sky-lighted and frescoed dome, altogether surpass

THE SELF-COMMENCER

By H. C. WITWER

THERE'S nothin' the world loves so much as a good tryer. I don't mean the birds that, havin' everything in their favor, includin' a 10-mile start, finishes first in the big race—I'm talkin' about the guys that never get better than second or third, but generally land in the money. The old Consistent Charlies that, no matter how many times they're beaten, figures the time to quit is when you're dead and buried!

A fighter knows that these birds which come up smilin', no matter how many times he drops 'em for the count is as dangerous as dynamite, until he knocks 'em cold. No matter how bad this loser may be battered up, he's always got a chance while he's tryin'. I've seen guys that was winnin' by two miles curl up and quit before a dub they had beaten till the crowd was yellin' for mercy, simply because this poor, bunged-up simp kept comin' in all the time—battered, bloody, drunk with wallops—but tryin' up to the last bell!

Alex was one of them guys.

The Big Town fell for his stuff because it was new, the same as it will fall for yours tomorrow if you got somethin' it never seen and the nerve to try it out!

About a month after Alex was workin' as head salesman for the Gaflooey Auto Co., at a pittance of ten thousand a year, he come up to the flat for dinner one night. I seen right away that somethin' was wrong, because he only eat about half of the roast duck and brung along his own cigars. After nature could stand no more, and we had dragged ourselves away from the table to let the servant girl make good, we adjourn to the parlor and the wife gets ready to punish the neighbors with the victrola.

"Well," says Alex, sittin' down in a rocker, of course, "it looks like they have finally gimme somethin' that even I can't do!"

"Can that be possible?" I says, pickin' up the sportin' final.

"Wait till you hear this one!" remarks the wife, crankin' up the victrola. "John McCormack singin' 'If Beauty Was Water, You'd Be Niagara Falls!' It's a knockout!"

"Say!" snorts Alex, gettin' peeved. "Can't a man find no attention here?"

"Look in the telephone book under the A's," I says.

"Never mind, dearie!" the wife tells him. "I'll listen. What's on your mind?" She goes over and sits on the arm of his chair, knowin' full well it gets my goat.

"I see you're the only one in this family that's got any sense!" pipes Alex, pattin' her hand.

"Yes," I says, "I ain't got enough sense to turn on a radiator. All I'm good for it to get the dollars, which, of course, is nothin' at all in keepin' up the home!"

"Well, you'll never have Rockefeller and that crowd gnashin' their teeth with all the dollars you'll get!" says Alex, "and that ain't no lie!"

"Now, boys," butts in the wife, "let's all be friends, even if we do belong to the same family. What is it, Alex? Speak up like a man."

"Well," he says, "the Gaflooey people has started to make tourin' cars and roadsters! What d'ye think of that?"

"I'm simply dumfounded!" I says. "Has Congress heard about this?"

"There you go again!" snorts Alex. "Always tryin' to ridicule everything I do. It's simply a case of sour grapes with you—jealousy, that's all!"

"Sour grapes ain't jealousy," I says. "Sour grapes is brandy. Go on with your story, Alex."

"Don't mind him," whispers the wife in his ear. "He'd laugh in church!"

"Why not?" I says. "I ain't done no gigglin since you and me first went there together."

"Will you let go?" she says. "Go on, Alex."

"Well," he says, "they called me into the president's office today, and the former begins by tellin' me I'm the best salesman they ever had."

"He don't care what he says, does he?" I butts in. "I suppose you admitted the charge, eh?"

"After that," goes on Alex, snubbin' me, "he tells me they have decided to get into the pleasure-car game, instead of just makin' trucks and the like. Their first offerin' is gonna be one of them chummy, clover-leaf roadsters which will hold five people comfortably."

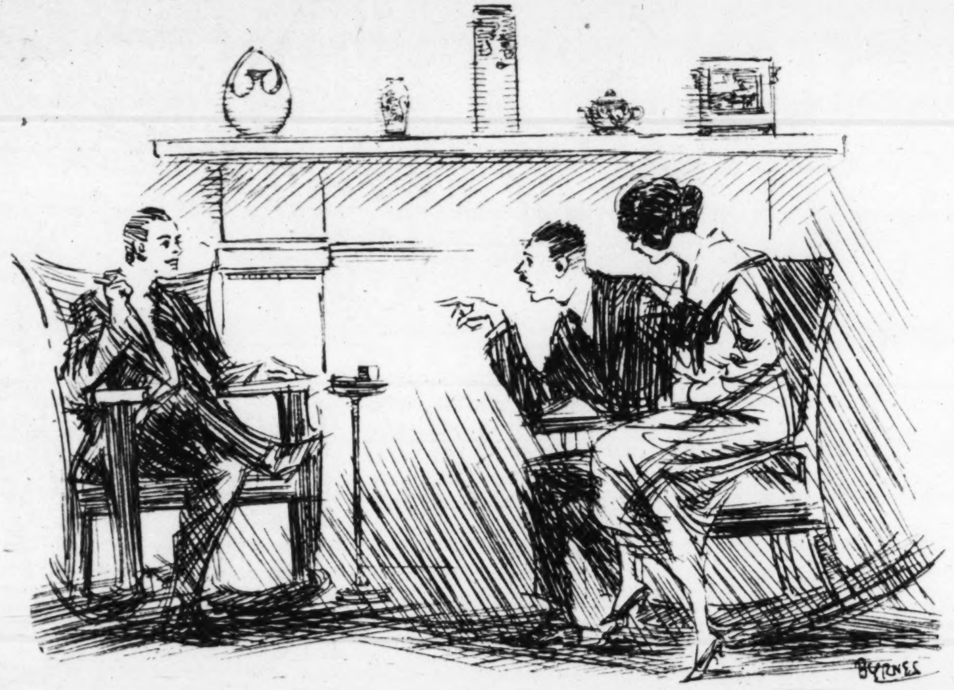
"If they're well acquainted!" I says.

"Will you leave the boy alone?" asks the wife. "I never saw anybody like you in my life!"

"Don't I know it?" I says. "Otherwise, how would we ever of got married?"

"Now," goes on Alex, "they want me to go up and see Runyon Q. Sampson, the well-to-do millionaire, and get him to buy the first car. You can imagine what a terrible good advertisement that will be for us if he should buy it, can't you?"

"It'll be o k till he tries to ride in it," I says, "and then the chances are you'll have to leave town and the Gaflooey people will be facin' a suit!"



"Well," he says, "the Gaflooey people has started to make tourin' cars and roadsters! What d'ye think of that?"

"There ain't another car on the market that can hold a match to the Gaflooey!" hollers Alex, his goat prancin' madly about.

"What's it made out of—celluloid?" I says.

"You may think you're funny!" he tells me, "but that's nothin' more or less than ig'rance. Here I am wastin' valuable time tryin' to explain somethin' to Cousin Alice and you keep interruptin' till a man don't know where he's at! Let's see, now, where was I?" he asks the wife.

"The beautiful and good-lookin' Princess had just promised to wed you," I says, "but the crusty old King couldn't see into it!"

The wife throws a pillow at me and it busted a vase that cost me 300 green certificates. After a short brawl over the remains, I laid off Alex and he went ahead.

"As I said before," he goes on, "the president of the Gaflooey company has selected me to go up and sell old Sampson this here chummy roadster. If I land the order, which naturally enough I will, it means I get made manager of the New York salesrooms. Then me and Eve Rossiter will prob'ly get married and"——

"What?" squeals the wife. "Are you and Eve engaged? And she never said a word to me!"

"How could she?" I says. "When he prob'ly had her doped?"

"No, we ain't engaged," says Alex. "I ain't even asked the girl will she be mine yet."

"Then how do you know she'll marry you?" asks the wife.

"Well," says Alex, "I figure if you married this here pest, I ought to be able to marry anybody! But what I'm up against is this—I got to take one of them roadsters up tomorrow and demonstrate it to Sampson. They have gone to work and made an appointment for me, and what I don't know about automobiles would fill seven large libraries. Here I'm supposed to show Mr. Sampson the points on our car which is better than any other, and I can't tell the windshield from the magneto. Now d'ye blame me for bein' worried?"

"I thought you was the world's greatest salesman," I sneers. "You don't mean to say this job has got you yellin' for the police already, do you? What are you gonna do, quit?"

"Speak English!" he comes back. "That word 'quit' don't belong in our language. Who said anything about quittin'? Even though I don't know a thing about automobiles, I'm gonna sell Runyon Q. Sampson a Gaflooey chummy roadster. A feller don't need knowledge to be a success half as much as he needs confidence and I got more confidence than a feller shootin' at a barn with a double-barreled shotgun. Anyhow, I'll betcha a rich millionaire like Sampson don't know any too much about automobiles himself, bein' too busy with makin' money and the like, eh?"

"I suppose you're gonna make him think that you know more about them gas buckboards than the guy which wrote' em, eh?" I says.

"You'll never get anywhere!" he answers, lookin' at me like how can a guy live and be so thick behind the ears. "You'll never be nothing but an average citizen, because you never get a new idea! No, I ain't gonna make Sampson think I know more about automobiles than anybody in the world—that's what has queered many a sale. I'm gonna make him think he does, and that him buyin' our roadster proves it!"

"I'll bet you could make Rockefeller think they wasn't a nickel in oil!" says the wife admirin'ly.

Alex gets up and reaches for his hat.

"If they was enough money in it for me, I'd try it," he says, "and that ain't no lie!"

I didn't see Alex till the next mornin' and then he blows in the flat.

"Hello!" he says. "Here you are as usual, loafin' away the hull mornin'. It's almost 8 o'clock, d'ye know that?"

"Sure!" I says. "You can't get me on that one. The answer is 7:55!"

"What d'ye mean, 7:55?" he asks.

"Ain't 7:55 almost 8 o'clock," I says, "and didn't you ask me if I knew it?"

"Ain't he clever?" says the wife, pattin' me on the back.

Alex looks at me in open disgust.

"If that's bein' clever," he says, "I'm a professor from Harvard! Where do you get that stuff?"

"It's a gift!" I says. "What are you doin' here this hour of the day?"

"Hurry up and git through eatin'," he says. "I want you to take a ride with me."

"What have you been pinched for?" I says.

"Will you leave him be?" butts in the wife. "Don't mind him, Alex, he'll go with you. Where are you going?"

"Up to Runyon Q. Sampson's to sell him a Gaflooey roadster," says Alex. "I got the car right outside now. Just wait till you git a look at it, you'll be crazy to buy one yourself!"

"You said it!" I tells him, puttin' on my coat. "I certainly would be crazy if I bought one of them! Who's gonna drive this up there?"

"I got a mechanic from the shop," says Alex. "A feller which knows so much about automobiles that he would take a pair of pliers and a lug wrench and go clear to Frisco with nothin' else!"

"Not even a car, eh?" I says. "Some mechanic!"

"Be still!" says the wife. "Well, Alex, I certainly hope you have all kinds of luck. Let me know how you make out, will you?"

"Sure!" I tells her. "Call up police headquarters in about an hour and you'll prob'ly be able to get all the details right off the blotter.

We go outside, and there's the Gaflooey chummy roadster leanin' right up against the curb. It looked like it might be a regular automobile when it grew

The Russom family are en route to Sunday afternoon service on foot, since Angelo, the chauffeur, has the afternoon to himself. Son Edgar is none too keen on these little family strolls—seeing that the destination promises little in the way of excitement. With this porch frock of ecru batiste, heel-less pumps are worn—with or without ankle straps. These Keds may have slight heel lifts for those who prefer them.

An unusual spring trousseau and the shoes that make it interesting

THE bride who has planned to have a trousseau well stocked with shoes need not be disappointed this spring. So great is the variety in trim, dainty models in Keds that it is possible to have a pair for every kind of wear.

One bride who proved this found there were Keds appropriate for practically every gown in her trousseau—charming little heeled pumps for her muslins, oxfords for her ginghams—sport shoes, walking shoes and house shoes.

Several of these Keds models are shown here and the costumes with which they are worn.

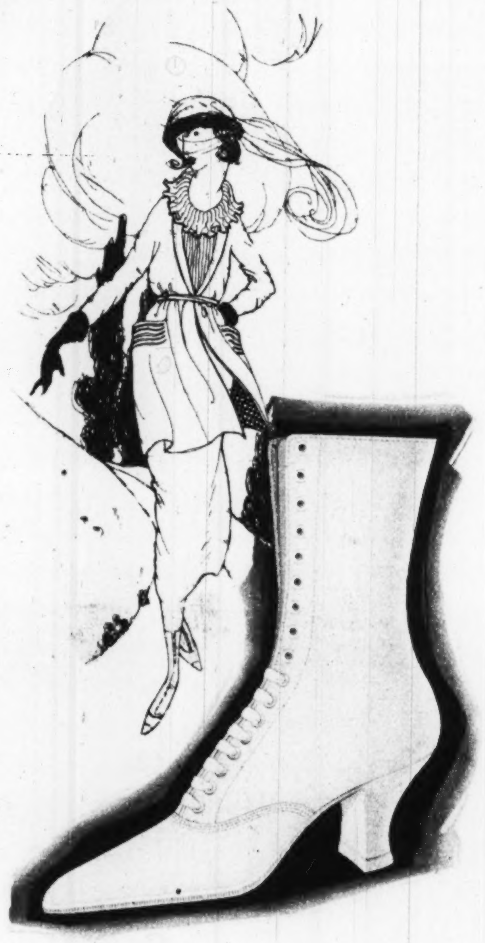
Keds are made of the firmest, finest canvas—the season's most popular fabric for shoes. Designed by expert designers who are always in touch with the season's style tendencies. They fit the foot snugly but are so flexible and light they are the most comfortable shoes one can wear. The soles are of the finest rubber.

The styles range from outing shoes to dress shoes. Many of this season's new models are made on radically new lines, with welt construction soles, firmly boxed toes and the inner reinforcements that give them the style and dignity of the most expensive leather shoes.

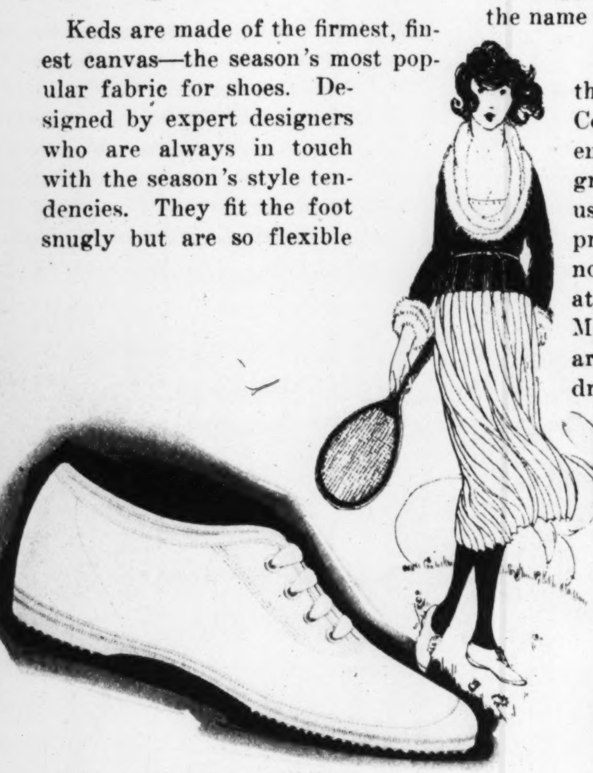
Keds are made for everyone. There are models for men and boys and many models for children.

Every good shoe dealer carries Keds. You will be enthusiastic over their appearance and fit. Look for the name Keds on the sole.

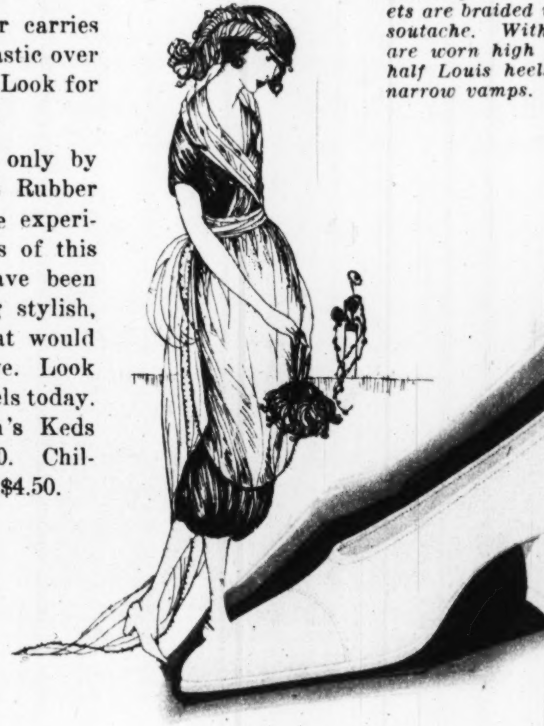
Keds are made only by the United States Rubber Company. All the experience and resources of this great company have been used in perfecting stylish, practical shoes that would not be too expensive. Look at the various models today. Men's and women's Keds are $1.50 to $7.00. Children's are $1.15 to $4.50.



A street suit of jade green silk crepe. The large pockets are braided with cream soutache. With this suit are worn high Keds with half Louis heels and long narrow vamps.



Pleated sport skirt of white raw silk. Sweater of Dianthus red with white angora collar and cuffs. Keds of this type—either high or low—are being worn at country clubs, hotels and fashionable watering places.



A new afternoon frock of black satin—the apron and surplice are of white organdie. Pumps are correct with this gown—with military heels. One of the most popular models in the Keds family.

"It keeps my hair looking its best, and is easy to use."

PROPER SHAMPOOING is what makes beautiful hair. It brings out all the real life, lustre, natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and luxuriant.

Your hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali in ordinary soaps, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why leading motion picture stars, theatrical people and discriminating women use

WATKINS
MULSIFIED
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
COCOANUT OIL
SHAMPOO

This clear, pure, and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it. Two or three teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt dandruff and excess oil.

The hair dries quickly and evenly, and has the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it is. It leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to do up.

You can get WATKINS MULSIFIED COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO at any drug store. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months. Splendid for children.

IT WILL PAY MY HUSBAND TO CULTIVATE MR. JEFF'S FRIENDSHIP! I CAN SEE THAT.
I'LL SAY SO
QUITE SO, QUITE SO! COULD YOU LET ME HAVE $10 OF MR. MUTT'S MONEY TOWARDS CAMPAIGN EXPENSES?
CERTAINLY!
POP'S GONNA BE A FAMOUS MAN.
THANKS! AND I ADVISE YOU TO PHONE TO JEFF AND GIVE HIM A CORDIAL INVITATION TO CALL ON MR. MUTT.
I'LL DO THAT! MY, HOW I'D LOVE TO BE A GOVERNOR'S WIFE.

THAT WAS CLEVER WORK! TEE HEE, SHE NEVER RECOGNIZED ME IN THIS DISGUISE AT ALL. RICH, I CALLS IT.
MR. JEFF, THIS IS MRS. MUTT SPEAKING! MR. MUTT IS VERY LONELY. WON'T YOU COME AND PLAY PINOCHLE WITH HIM,— AND I'D LIKE VERY MUCH TO HAVE YOU STAY FOR DINNER.
THANKS, MRS MUTT! I ACCEPT.
WHAT MRS. MUTT DON'T KNOW WON'T HURT HER. GOVERNOR'S WIFE!! TEE HEE!!
MUTT, I WANT YOU TO CULTIVATE MR. JEFF'S FRIENDSHIP. I'VE ASKED HIM TO DINE WITH US THIS EVENING.
MITT ME, MUTT!
HUH?

VERY WELL - WE'LL MAKE IT EASY FOR THEM - LEAVE THE SAFE OPEN FOR A FEW NIGHTS AND LET THEM GET INTO IT, AND THEN THEY WON'T BOTHER YOU ANY MORE!
WHAT?! - - AND LET THEM GET AWAY WITH THE BUNDLE?!!
YES, - BUT I MUSTN'T LET YOU INTO MY SECRET FOR THE PRESENT - LET US AWAIT RESULTS!
THE PROFESSOR'S ASLEEP! NOW'S MY CHANCE!
OHO! - THAT'S THE TICKET, IS IT?
TO NIGHT I'M GONNA TAKE A TRY AT THAT SAFE ALONE - AN' IF I SUCCEED I WON'T HAVE THE PROFESSOR TER DIVVY WITH!
ALL RIGHT, I'LL DISGUISE AS HAWKSHAW, THE DETECTIVE, AN' WHEN THAT POOR FISH BRINGS THE BONDS HERE, I'LL ARREST HIM IN THE NAME O' THE LAW AN' TAKE THE BONDS AWAY FROM HIM!!
BANK
- WHY SHOULD A SMART GUY LIKE ME DIVVY WITH A BOOB LIKE THE PROFESSOR!
HA! THE SAFE'S OPEN! - THEY MUST HAVE FERGOT TER LOCK IT! - AN' HERE'S THE BUNDLE O' BONDS!
EASY MONEY - I'LL SAY!!
BANK
I WONDER WHERE THE PROFESSOR IS!
HAND OVER THAT THERE BUNDLE - IN THE NAME O' THE LAW! - I'M HAWKSHAW, THE DETECTIVE!
-HAR! HAR! - YOU GOTTA GIT UP OILY IN THE MORNIN' TER FOOL YER OLD PROFESSOR - AN' NOW FER A LOOK AT THE BONDS!
THAT'S TOUGH LUCK - HERE I GOES AN' LANDS THE BONDS, AN' ALONG COMES THAT DETECTIVE AN' MAKES ME COUGH UP!
